Students rally against financial aid cuts

'MX no; Pell Grants yes,' chant student protesters

By Meg Sullivan
Assistant News Editor

About 80 students gathered in the Student Center Plaza Tuesday afternoon in boisterous protest of President Reagan and Education Secretary William Bennett's proposed cut in financial aid.

Students carrying signs made by student government officers chanted "Pell Grants yes! MX no!" During the rally, Student Body President Gary Mauney said one missile could put 5,000 students through school.

Mauney opened a round of energetic speeches by telling the crowd Reagan's proposed budget will greatly affect college students. "Many of you will not be here next year," he said.

WKNC-FM station manager Charlie Helms, who also spoke at the rally, said the latest available statistics from the financial aid office indicate that 7,003 NCSU students depend on financial aid and 718 of those are on work-study programs. Student Senate President Walt Perry later said that under the proposed budget, those could be cut to zero.

Speakers encouraged students to write their congressmen to oppose the financial aid cuts.

Perry Woods, a student senator and chairman of the Senate athletics committee, dressed as Darth Vader to represent Bennett. After several speeches were made, he climbed atop the wall of the Student Center fountain amid jeers and boos from the small but vocal crowd of students.

He was then handed two models of MX missiles and one at a time threw them into the fountain. As Woods threw the second MX, Mauney shouted, "This represents the former Department of Education's Pell Grants!"

Three mechanical engineering juniors, Paul Besser, Tom Shepard and Weave Hancy, carried a banner that said "support $ for minds over $ for missiles." They later gave it to Mauney to take to Washington when he, along with other NCSU student government officers and University of North Carolina Association of Student Government (UNCASG) members, will lobby against the aid cuts next week.

The rally was planned to coincide with today's Emerging Issues Forum when many influential business and political leaders, including Gov. James Martin, will discuss the nation's economic future. Mauney said he hoped to generate enough student support from the rally today so that leaders would read about it in today's newspapers and become aware of how the proposed aid cuts will affect students.

The rally ended around 12:45 p.m., and most of its organizers felt it was a positive statement. "The 'missile show' was the high point of the rally," Mauney said.

Helms added, "If a few people would write to their congressmen, we were successful."

The rally was videotaped, and it will be combined with tapes of similar rallies on UNCASG campuses that will be shown during the UNCASG's upcoming Washington lobby.

Poulton said to have supported divestment resolution

By Suzanne Perez
Senior Staff Writer

Student Body President Gary Mauney expressed his satisfaction with the successful South African Divestiture issue when he met with student leaders at the President's Roundtable meeting Monday.

"To tell the truth, I was extremely surprised to find out that the Board of Trustees had passed the resolution," Mauney said, "and I literally stared at the walls in disbelief as to how well it had gone."

Saturday, the Board of Trustees passed a resolution calling for N.C. State's complete divestiture from South Africa. The fund will divest South African holdings if apartheid is not ended by May 31 and if Rev. Leon Sullivan calls for American corporations to divest.

Mauney said Chancellor Poulton had a great deal to do with the final outcome.

"Poulton was one of our main proponents at the Board of Trustees meeting," he said. "He deserves a great deal of credit."

As for the issue's future, Mauney said he is "hoping that students will come to grips with what racism is and realize that it happens right here every day, not just in South Africa."

The President's Roundtable also expressed concern about the controversial Athletics Council issue. The leaders agreed they should continue to look into the matter.

"We shouldn't hesitate to question Poulton on these sensitive issues," Perry Woods, Senate athletics committee chairman, said. "We, as representatives of the student body, have a right to this information."

Mauney then informed the group of the Student Fee Review Committee's (SFRC) rejections of Health Services and Residence Life proposed fee increases.

Housing and Residence Life has requested $225,000 for phase one of a West Campus Security Project. The SFRC did not agree with the proposal. "(Housing and Residence Life) just couldn't tell us where a proposed quarter of a million dollar increase was going to be spent, and therefore the committee rejected the proposal," Mauney said.

"Other campuses in the UNC system have the same liability as we do," he continued, "but they still don't have the stringent (security) policies that State has already put into effect."

The SFRC rejected the Health Services fee increase because the committee felt that the extra money was not absolutely necessary to provide students basic health care services, Mauney added.

Spots still open for spring trip

About 22 spots are still available for the Union Activities Board sponsored spring break trip to Washington, according to Kathryn Hardee, trip coordinator.

The trip is open to 44 people — both students and non-students — and will last from Feb. 28 through March 3. Participants will travel to Washington by bus and will stay at the Key Bridge Marriott in Georgetown.

The scheduled itinerary includes a bus tour of Washington, a night tour of the national monuments, the National Cathedral, the National Zoo, the Capital Building and the Smithsonian museums. A day trip to the revitalized Baltimore waterfront district has also been planned.

"It is not a structured schedule," Hardee said. "We have a schedule with everything planned, but they don't have to stick to any of it." The cost of the trip is $83-115 for students and $110-167 for non-students, depending on occupancy. The deadline to register is Feb. 13.

For more information, call Hardee at 737-3801, or drop by the art center office in room 4110 of the University Student Center.

Education expert to speak

A Harvard University education expert will speak at a Provost's Forum at 3 p.m. Thursday in Poe Hall Auditorium.

Patricia Cross, a professor and chair of programs in administration, planning, and social policy at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, will discuss the role of a research university in an undergraduate education. She has recently proposed several reforms in higher education including better training for college teachers, the establishment of classroom teaching laboratories and phasing out the standard lecture technique.

Valvano to answer questions

Athletics Director and basketball coach Jim Valvano will speak to interested students at 7 p.m. Thursday in Nelson Auditorium. A general question and answer session will follow the speech.

The event, which may become annual, is sponsored by Housing and Residence Life in cooperation with the Athletics Department. Only 500 seats are available and students will be admitted on a first come, first serve basis.

Business careers forum Thursday

A forum will be held Thursday from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom for any interested business management, economics and accounting majors.

The Forum, entitled Business Careers for the '80s and '90s, will provide information about the employment process, career development, corporate structure and career ladders. There will be a reception immediately after the forum in the Walnut Room.

Women outscore Tar Heels, 51-44

By Trent McCranie
Staff Writer

A tough, physical game and a rowdy Reynolds Coliseum crowd were the ingredients for the 13th-ranked Wolfpack's 51-44 drubbing of North Carolina Tuesday night.

The contest started slowly and for the most part, ended that way. Neither team seemed to be able to get into any kind of groove as each shot 35 percent from the field.

State, 17-5 overall and 9-2 in the ACC, was led by Annemarie Treadway's game-high 15 points, while center Trena Trice added 14 points and 12 rebounds.

The Tar Heels, which drop to 15-8 and 7-5, got 13 points off the bench from Liza Donnell's outside jumpers. The ACC's third-leading scorer, Dawn Royster, pulled down 14 boards despite sinking only five of 14 shots for a total of 10 points. The Heels' scoring dropped off from there as Tia Poindexter shot a horrendous three for 10 for six points.

"It (the game) wasn't pretty," Coach Kay Yow said, emphasizing State's 26 percent shooting in the first half and the 26 turnovers it committed, not to mention the Tar Heels' 33 turnovers.

"With the good crowd and both hands here tonight, I really think it had an impact on us. We played hard but (at times) didn't play smart."

Senior forward Angela Daye again had a productive game for the Pack, scoring 10 points and collecting 10 rebounds. She was also a constant factor on the defensive side of the game. Yow stressed the importance of Daye's contribution with the ball as well as without it. Daye dished out four assists while committing only two turnovers.

"Angela Daye, I thought, gave a tremendous effort," Yow said. "She had a good floor game and kept a lot of balls alive. She played really hard on defense and did a lot of things that helped us."

Treadway, deemed by Yow as being the most consistent player for the Pack this year, has seen the most playing time on the team and is fourth in the conference in scoring with almost 18 points a game.

"Annemarie did have a good game," Yow said. "She has played well at both ends of the court this year and is one of the main reasons for our success."

Against the Heels, Yow said that both teams played better in State's 82-76 win earlier this year in Chapel Hill.

State's solid team defense inside against the Heels' big line-up was

Texas industrialist H. Ross Perot, whose brazen, never-give-up attitude helped him build a multi-billion dollar electronics company from scratch, will be the keynote speaker at today's Emerging Issues Forum.

More than 1,200 leaders in business, education and government will attend the "Winning in the Global Economy" conference at the McKimmon Center, according to forum director Betty Owen. Members of N.C. State student government and the General Assembly also have been invited.

Owen said the overwhelming response forced the university to close registration to the daylong event.

The forum's luncheon speaker will be Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whose economic planning has slashed the state's unemployment rate from 12 percent to less than 4 percent. Dukakis' address is titled "State Strategies for Success in the World Economy."

Also speaking at the conference will be Alice Rivlin, former director

Poulton seeking next year's aides

By Karen Archia
Staff Writer

Chancellor Bruce Poulton is looking for a few good men and women.

At this time each year, the office of the chancellor selects a few students to wear the bright red jackets distinguishing them as Chancellor's Aides. The qualities needed for the position are the ability to communicate well, a willingness to learn about the university, and the ability to convey pride in the university, said Tommie Bennett, secretary to the chancellor. In addition, the applicant should have a minimum GPA of 2.5, be a full-time student, and a rising senior.

Along with the title, Chancellor's Aides have the privilege of assisting the chancellor in hosting university visitors at the chancellor's guest box and Finley Field House during home football games and at the Reynolds Coliseum Hospitality Room during basketball games. At these events, the aides have the opportunity to meet public officials such as the governor and commissioner of agriculture, and many other distinguished guests of the university.

Jim Hicks, a current Chancellor's Aide, remembers when former Governor Jim Hunt and Senator Jesse Helms, who were opponents in a heated 1984 Senate race, were guests at the same time. He has also had the chance to meet Governor Jim Martin and Lt. Governor Bob Jordan.

For Chancellor's Aide Beth Gray, the campus tours are what she enjoys the most. "The high school seniors have so many questions about N.C. State," she said. "I like having the opportunity to be a positive influence on them." She also said that she enjoyed meeting the administration and other people who support the university.

Other responsibilities of the Chancellor's Aides include serving as marshals at Commencement Exercises, hosting at Open House and Parent's Day activities and assisting the chancellor at official dinners and receptions held at the chancellor's residence.

"Before, I never felt like I was a part of the university," said Hicks. "Being a Chancellor's Aide has given me the chance to participate in and help with school events."

Bennett deems the experience of being an aide "the icing on the cake" for a student who's finishing up his time at NCSU.

Bennett also said that if you do apply, chances are you will get an interview, noting that last year there were 52 applicants, and all were interviewed. "I think if a student takes the time to come get an application, fill it out and return it, they deserve more than just a letter," she said.

Applications for the positions are now being accepted and can be picked up in Section A of Holladay Hall. They should be returned no later than Feb. 27. An equal number of men and women will be chosen.

Forum to offer students job-hunting advice

By Bryan Safrin
Staff Writer

As jobs in business become increasingly more competitive, understanding how to find and make the best of career opportunities could be the difference between acceptance of employment and rejection.

Students can prepare for this competitive atmosphere by seeking advice from those who have already been there. This free advice is available Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom, when five three-member panels of business professionals will share their insights and experience with students interested in accounting, economics and business-oriented careers.

The forum, entitled "Business Careers for the '80s and '90s," is sponsored by the Business Activities Board, the Career Planning and Placement Center and N.C. State's economics and business department.

The panels will discuss successful resume writing and interviewing techniques; in-class and on-the-job training tips; personnel trends and career paths in the Triangle; and opportunities in banking, securities, economics insurance, underwriting and marketing.

"The forum will be valuable for seniors and graduate students because it gives them the opportunity to meet so many prospective businesses," said Laurie Hamer, a senior business management major and Business Activities Board member. "But freshmen, sophomores and juniors who would like to learn more about job types, interviewing techniques and the recruiting process are also encouraged to attend."

All five panel discussions will occur simultaneously but will be repeated three times during the evening to give students the opportunity to hear as many as three of these discussions. Following the third presentation, the program will conclude with a reception in the Walnut Room on the fourth floor of the Student Center.

Much ado about something

By Joe Corey
Entertainment Editor

Stewart Theatre's Center Stage program features two different plays by the same production company this weekend.

The Acting Company will be performing The Gilded Age by Mark Twain and Dudley Warner on Friday night and Shakespeare's timeless comedy, Much Ado About Nothing, on Saturday night.

Boasting a group of highly talented and well-trained performers, The Acting Company has taken full advantage of the epic narrative and rich variety of characters in The Gilded Age by transforming the novel into a tour de force for its ensemble of 14 actors. Most of them play several demanding roles.

The play is set in the latter half of the 19th century, during the years following the Civil War when the United States emerged as an industrial nation and world power. A sprawling, kaleidoscopic drama, the play is a tongue-in-cheek look at the naive and rampant capitalism that exemplify the period.

A combination of romantic elements and social commentary, the play capitalizes on some of the most outrageous personalities and sensationalistic headlines of the day. Headlines included are Bible-thumping Senator Samuel Pomeroy in the guise of Dilworthy; Boss Tweed under the name of William Weed; and the murder trial of Mrs. Laura Fair in the Laura Hawkins sub-plot.

The Gilded Age is as full of visual splendor and ironic wit as it is of social conscience and perception. Its larger-than-life characters, tightly knit structure and dramatic style blend together to create a detailed portrait of this period in American history.

The Gilded Age is directed by Mark Lamos, the artistic director of the Hartford Stage Company. One of the country's most respected directors, Lamos' work has been hailed by The New York Times as "some of the most imaginative Shakespeare interpretations. His most impressive work has been on plays on an epic scale."

Saturday is Valentine's Day, and Much Ado About Nothing is a sparkling romantic comedy.

Imaginatively set for The Acting Company's production in the chic and steamy Cuba of the 1930s, Much Ado About Nothing is a brilliant play that revolves around two very different romances.

As guests of Leonato, the governor of Messina, two young lords, Claudio and Benedick, fall under the spell of Hero, Leonato's daughter, and the witty Beatrice, her cousin.

While the villainous scoundrel Don Juan plots to thwart the impending marriage of Hero and Claudio, Benedick resolves to remain a bachelor and engages in a merry war of words with Beatrice. What ensues are cleverly crafted plot twists and romantic intrigue enhanced by the brilliant colors, festive costumes and driving Latin rhythms incorporated by director Gerald Gutierrez.

loured with the company for four years, both playing roles in the repertory and directing productions. Gutierrez has staged highly successful productions around

America and off-Broadway. On Broadway, Gutierrez directed Faye Dunaway in William Alfred's The Curse of An Aching Heart. Individual tickets for The Gilded

Age and Much Ado About Nothing are $7 for NCSU students and $14 for the general public. Tickets are available at the Student Center box office. Both shows begin at 8 p.m.

The Runner Stumbles drops in at Thompson Theatre Thursday

By Devin Steele
Senior Staff Writer

The Runner Stumbles, a play based on an early 20th-century trial for the murder of a nun in Michigan, will open this week at Thompson Theatre.

The play runs Thursday through Saturday nights this week and Feb. 17-21. Each performance begins at 8 p.m. The admission charge is $1 for N.C. State students and $4 for adults ($3 for senior citizens).

Although The Runner Stumbles is a murder-type play, it elicits an emotional quality that touches on people, their relationships and their beliefs, according to Director Barbara Mochrie Washer.

Milan Stitt wrote the play in 1971, and it opened on Broadway in 1976.

The Runner Stumbles, set in 1911, consists of a series of narrative flashbacks through the mind of a priest, chronicling the events leading up to his arrest.

"It's a courtroom drama, a love story and a memory play," Washer said. "The play has to do, obviously, with the Catholic Church, but it also has to do with the Protestants in town who don't understand Catholicism. But it's more about people's beliefs than a statement about the Church. It's how a person sees it and then lives their lives, not so much how an institution is inherently," she added.

"It also has to do with people's relationship with God, and that's something college students may not think about. It forces them to confront their own attitudes and beliefs and their own moral codes," Washer said.

Seniors Kristopher Tyra from Raleigh and Lisa Hester from Clarkton play the lead roles in the production. Tyra plays the part of Father Rivard, a middle-aged priest who endures a tremendous conflict between his feelings and the expectations of the Church and his parishioners. Sister Rita, a nun played by Hester, is responsible for bringing much of the chaos to the priest's "ordered" life at the school.

Father Rivard's view of God is much harsher and colder than that of Sister Rita, an enthusiastic nun who has been brought to Solon to help at the school since the other nuns are sick with corruption.

Other characters include Nicola Cheek, a senior from Raleigh who plays Father Rivard's housekeeper, Mrs. Shandig; Todd Finchum, a freshman from Eden who plays Monsignor Nicholson, a bishop's secretary; Jonathan Kirshtein, a senior from Charleston, S.C., who plays a prosecutor; Michele Lefeber, a freshman from Drexel who plays Louise, a college student; Janet Lewis, a sophomore from Raleigh who plays Erna Prindle, a Catholic who cooks for the prisoners; Kenny Meade, a freshman from Casar who plays Amos, a guard; and Louis Shea, a senior from Cary who plays Toby Felker, a lawyer.

Pack tops Eagles; ends losing streak

Winthrop gives Pack needed win

By Katrina Waugh
Assistant Sports Editor

The Wolfpack ended a six-game losing streak Monday night by beating out Winthrop, 85-58.

The Pack's game plan, according to coach Jim Valvano, was to beat the Eagles in the first half with defense.

"Tonight we tried to use a quicker lineup to get better defensive pressure," Valvano said.

To that end, sophomores Chucky Brown and Kelsey Weems replaced senior forward Mike Giomi and junior point guard Kenny Drummond in the starting lineup.

"We will try to do what we need to do to win each of our remaining games," Valvano explained. "Every game may be different. Some we might have to use a bigger lineup and some games we might have to use our quickness. We will do what we need to win."

Valvano may have to do a lot as the Wolfpack faces 12th-ranked Clemson today at 7 p.m. in a key ACC game. The Tigers downed State 79-69 when the two teams met earlier this season.

State is now 4-4 in the conference, Clemson is 6-2 and in sole possession of second place.

"We decided before Monday night's game that we had a nine-game season left," Valvano said. "After winning we are 1-0. We needed a win. We would like to win all of our remaining games, but we certainly need to win six or seven to enter the (NCAA) tournament."

Monday, the Pack built up a 42-17 lead by halftime, despite 43.6 percent field goal shooting. Winthrop hit only 4 of its 21 shots from the field in the first period for 19 percent.

Junior guard Vinnie Del Negro led the Pack in the first half, scoring all of his nine points for the game in the half.

Giomi came off the bench in the first period to grab nine rebounds and mark up seven points.

State's entire bench except sophomore Kenny Poston saw action in the half.

Winthrop's leading scorer Ted Houpt, who averages 16.5 points per contest, with 10 points was the lone Eagle in double figures for the half.

Houpt's teammates, forward Lenwood Harris and guard John Weiss, were the only other Eagles to score in the first period. Harris had four points and five rebounds and Weiss had three points and a board for the Eagles in the half.

The second period saw dramatic improvement for Winthrop as Harris and Greg Washington got the hot hands. Harris' six-for-eight from the field, including a carbon-copy dunk from the Air Jordan ad, went three for three from the charity stripe in the second half to end the contest with a game-high 19 points and nine rebounds.

Washington hit five of six field goal attempts in the half and was 2-2 from the line to pick up 12 points for the game.

Winthrop's shooting percentage went from 19 in the first half to 54 in the second, and the Eagles scored 41 points to the Pack's 43 in the second period.

Sophomore Chucky Brown picked up 10 points in State's 85-58 win over Winthrop Monday.

Pack's total production more than once in the game.

State built up a 40 point lead by 7:29 left in the half and Poston came into the game to cheers from the small crowd of 6,400.

Freshman guard Andy Kennedy scored eight points in the second period and was the Wolfpack's leading scorer with a career-high 12 points.

Brown, Avie Lester and Walker Lambiotte all put in solid second-half performances to tie at 10 for the Wolfpack's second leading scorers.

Lambiotte was also the team's second leading rebounder, totaling seven boards for the night.

Head football coach honored for success

By Furman Bisher

No jockey ever climbed aboard the first horse he ever met and won the Kentucky Derby. No driver ever walked in off the street and won the Indianapolis 500. Amateur climbers don't make passes at Mt. Everest. You don't tee it up in the U.S. Open until you've at least got a bag with your name on it.

Then let me tell you the rare and remarkable story of a man who performed the equivalent of all that in college football. The subject is Dick Sheridan. Oh, you recognize the name now.

A year ago he almost won the national championship in what the NCAA calls Division I-AA. This year he was Cochair of the Year in the ACC. Now he has climbed the highest mountain; he is the Bobby Dodd national Coach-of-the-Year Award winner.

What I haven't told you is — the first college football game Dick Sheridan participated in was as a head coach. Five years later he was head coach. Nine years after that, he became head coach at State; he still looks at himself with the innocence of a choirboy and seems to wonder how this came to be. This progression developed the hard way and, in truth, it began even before he was born.

The story of Dick Sheridan goes back to the year 1929, when a cadet of the same name played at West Point. Football players came smaller in those times, and cadet Dick Sheridan weighed only 150 pounds. He came from Augusta, Georgia, determined to play his way onto the West Point football team — and did.

Army was playing Yale that season and had kicked off to the Elis, and Sheridan tore down the field toward the kick returner, who happened to be another Southerner named Bob Lassiter of Charlotte, N.C. Lassiter's knee struck Sheridan's head, and the slight young man flipped over and never moved. He later died in a New Haven hospital.

Twelve years later, another Sheridan was born in North Augusta, South Carolina, and was named for the uncle he never knew. When that Dick Sheridan became his high school's outstanding scholar-athlete in 1960, he was on his way to an appointment to the military academy. When an academic interlude was required to brush up on some needed courses, Sheridan registered for a year at the University of South Carolina.

The original year stretched into four. His military fervor receded — encouraged, an old roommate confides — when love intervened. Sheridan switched majors from the gruff stuff that West Point offered to physical education, and he got a wife before he completed his degree in that field.

Although he never played a down of college football, he was ready for coaching after graduation. He checked into a high school near Columbia, South Carolina, as a football assistant with extra duty as basketball coach. As his team twice made it to the semifinals of the state tournament, Sheridan's career was launched. In four seasons as a high school football coach, his teams lost only eight games. Furman University hired him as an assistant coach, and when head coach Art Baker left for the Citadel five years later, Dick Sheridan — the man who had never taken a snap or made a tackle in college — became head coach Sheridan.

The eight seasons Dick Sheridan coached at Furman constituted the finest stretch of football in that university's record book. His teams won six Southern Conference championships. They didn't confine themselves to the midweight division, though. They climbed into the ring with some heavyweights, and they were never shy and retiring before such might. In his time, Sheridan's Furman teams beat his old school South Carolina, beat Georgia Tech and twice kicked the Wolfpack. There was something about the memories of all that influenced State when

Wolfpack wrestlers host North Carolina in conference bout

The wrestling team will host fifth-ranked North Carolina Thursday night in Reynolds Coliseum in the second meeting this year of these traditional rivals.

The Tar Heels, currently 15-4, defeated the Wolfpack, 9-6, earlier this year in Chapel Hill by a 30-12 score.

But State will field quite a different team than the one that the Tar Heels beat so soundly. Half of the Wolfpack starters were hampered by injuries in that match.

"This time we have some additional people in the line-up we didn't have when we first met," Wolfpack coach Bob Guzzo said. "Mike Lombardo is back at heavyweight, Steve Cesari is back at 158. Mike Lantz is back in at 167.

"None of those guys were in the first time we met."

Lombardo compiled an 11-2 record and was ranked in the top 10 heavyweights in the country before injuring his shoulder earlier in the season.

Peebles stars at George Mason meet

From staff reports

Raleigh's Danny Peebles won three events to spark the Wolfpack indoor track team's showing in the George Mason Invitational, held in Fairfax, Va., last weekend.

Peebles, one of only five seniors on the squad, won the 55-meter dash in 6.26 seconds, was first in the 300 in a time of 34.26 and took the long jump with a leap of 24 feet, 8 inches.

"Danny is an outdoor all-America and he knew he had to take on a lead ship role for the indoor season," assistant coach Curtis Frye said. "He is at a mature stage and he has identified our need for leadership."

Frye said Peebles, who was part of the stellar receiving corps on the Wolfpack football team that went to the Peach Bowl, learned from his gridiron experience.

"It's a carry over from football," Frye said. "They call him 'Touch down' Peebles because he always made the big play when necessary. He's just making the big plays for us now."

State's Terry Thomas returned from an Achilles tendon injury in grand form, winning the shot put with a throw of 56-2 and weight throw with a 45-1 toss, a new school record. Thomas had not competed in any previous Wolfpack indoor meets.

Teammate Terry Reese was a surprise winner in the 55-meter hurdles with a personal-best time of 7.49. Reese, who was not in school last semester, beat two runners who last year qualified for

Harriers to run in U.S. trials

Two Wolfpack runners will compete Saturday in Dallas, TX, in the United States trials for the World Cross Country Championships.

Janet Smith, a two-time all-America selection, will vie with 250-300 of the nation's top runners while competing for one of six spots in the senior women's competition. Freshman Bob Henes will compete against 60-90 others in the junior men's competition.

"Only the best people in the country are going to be at this meet," assistant track coach Curtis Frye said. "Qualifying is real tough and these kids made those standards."

Smith finished second in the Spike Shoe Invitational at Penn State in September, but missed the rest of the season after being red-shirted due to a leg injury.

As a freshman, Smith won the ACC title and finished eighth in the national meet. As a sophomore, she finished second in the ACC meet behind teammate Suzie Tuffey and was 10th in the national meet.

the national meet, Frye said.

"Terry is way ahead of the schedule we have for him," Frye said.

State also had three victories in the women's competition. Janet Smith ran 1,500 meters in 4:31.86, Sophomore Suzie Tuffey completed 3,000 meters in 9:37 and Chavanda more, she finished second in the ACC meet behind teammate Suzie Tuffey and was 10th in the national meet.

Smith will attempt to be the second Wolfpack cross country runner to make the national team. Betty Springs, a former all-America, twice made the team and competed in international competition.

Henes placed in the top 10 at two meets this fall for the men's team, which finished 12th in the nation and was crowned ACC champion.

"Henes has been a real surprise to the track world, but not to coach Rollie Geiger," assistant track coach Curtis Frye said. "He's got a lot of potential, and he's well ahead of schedule from where we thought he would be."

The top six finishers in each division will qualify for the world championships to be held in Warsaw, Poland, next month.

Jacobs cleared 5-10 1/2 in the high jump.

Tuffey, who went to the cross country national championship as a freshman, was injured during this year's cross country season and did not race in the fall. Because she is still following an extended rehabilitation program, Tuffey ran in only one event.

"She was ready for one event," Frye said. "She is a high level athlete, but without the proper preparation she could hurt herself again."

The indoor teams are now preparing for the ACC Indoor Championships, which returns to the conference after a seven-year absence, to be held Feb. 21 in Chapel Hill. Frye said the chase for the league title has made the Wolfpack work harder in meets such as the one in Fairfax.

"It has made us more intense," Frye said. "All our work has been in preparation for that championship."

State has won the ACC outdoor championship for the last five years and wants to continue its dominance in the indoor competition.

"We will not be favored in the indoor meet," Frye said. "But there is no one existing in our program who has lost an ACC championship, and our seniors don't want to be the first."

Sheridan given Bobby Dodd Coach of the Year Award

the hunt for a new coach began the season of '86.

He had had his offers before, but here another rare trait in Sheridan intervened. He told the big-time colleges that recruited him, "No thanks, not until my kids get out of high school. I'm not going to turn my family into gypsies."

That's another thing. Sheridan is high on education. He's just as proud that 98 percent of his players graduated from Furman as his is of the record they produced on the field. One of the first things he said after arriving at State was this:

"We'll take pride in our program, and we'll run it within the NCAA rules. To do this, we'll need true student athletes at State. We'll be recruiting young men who are looking for an education. I strongly believe that the athletic program should be educational. The athletes should learn more than just how to play football."

Sheridan's ideals sound like verse from the Dodd Award code, specifying football should fit into the academic framework. This belief is evident when reflecting upon previous Dodd winners, which include Joe Paterno of Penn State, Bo Shembecher of Michigan, Lavell Edwards of Brigham Young, Ken Hatfield (now of Arkansas) and Fisher DeBerry of the Air Force Academy and Jim Wacker of Texas Christian.

Once Sheridan's children had finished high school and he came within a whisper of the national championship in the Diamond Bowl, State found him willing to listen. The prospect was rather grim, but he didn't come to Raleigh looking for any rose garden. Sheridan dug State out of its 3-8 rut.

The season began with a victory over East Carolina. Mighty Pitt was tied with 14 second-half points. When State came face to face with Maryland in the fourth game, the Terps were unbeaten and ranked 13th in the nation. State scored 21 points in the fourth quarter and won. The Wolfpack caught North Carolina and South Carolina with last minute finishes, and kicked the stuffing out of Clemson, 27-3, for its worst season loss.

Only an upset defeat by Virginia, with Kramer hobbled and unable to perform, cost Sheridan an ACC championship in his first season. State's new record was 8-2-1.

Being any kind of Coach of the Year is not out of the ordinary for Sheridan. He has known the crowning glory in South Carolina high schools (at Orangeburg), three times in the Southern Conference, once in his NCAA regional territory, and now on a national scale as the Dodd Award settles gently on his brow.

"He just may be," said a veteran who knows well his field, "the finest college football coach in America right now. I know this, there goes the man who has made the finest blend between winning and academics that there is."

The Dodd Award is named for the former coach and National Football Hall of Fame incumbent who established an unchallenged record for football as it should be played when he served at Georgia Tech from 1945 to 1966. He is now 77 years old, still active as an athlete - he plays tennis daily - and as the spokesperson when these awards are presented to the recipients on their own ground. The sponsors are Delta Airlines, The Coca-Cola Company and the Atlanta Journal.

Less Filling tries to capture second title

Kris Ford
Intramurals Editor

Can defending open champions Less Filling repeat last year and win its second straight intramural title? They seem to be on the right track as they finished regular season play and head for the playoffs with a 4-0 record.

Things were looking grim for the Less Filling squad when fifth-year senior Greg Schott accepted an engineering job out west and left the team without a dominant rebounding force. However, the finesse and savvy of returning starters Alan Bass and Kendall May made up for the difference.

Bass is without question the key to the Less Filling squad this year. His knack for working the ball around and then, at just the right moment, zipping the perfect pass inside, is uncanny. His jumper from the floor leaves nothing to be desired either.

May is no slouch himself. He is a physical player who always manages to come up with the loose ball, usually converting it into points. His leadership and sportsmanship undoubtedly boosts the team.

Another starter is Ty Leonard, the team sharp shooter. In his last outing he was 10 of 11 from the field and 10 of 11 of his free throws. Probably his most deadly asset is his jumper from would be three-point range. In his last two games he hit seven long bombs in a row.

Top newcomers to the squad are Harry O'Conner and Scott White. The "Twin Towers" are the scoring threats in the paint, scoring 24 points in their last game. Their defensive play has also proven to be vicious. Last week O'Conner led the two with 11 boards and White followed close behind with nine. In blocking shots, they had a combined total of five.

Other newcomers who add a special dimension to the squad are Thraace Baecogee and Bryan Knupp. In the third game of the season they chipped in a combined 28 points. Both usually come off the bench, but they started this particular game and proved to be an unstoppable tandem. The Less Filling squad usually turns to Knupp and Baecogee when a game becomes too physical inside.

It seems that there will be only one team that can stop Less Filling from accomplishing their quest for a second intramural crown — and that is Dixie Classic Champion Crash and Burn.

Crash and Burn is also 4-0 and with the superb ball handling of Bill Daughtery and outside scoring threat Bobby Speight.

Dominant Force, 3-0, strong contender

Mac Harris
Intramurals Editor

After a surprising final four finish in the Dixie Classic, Dominant Force is now 3-0, and has established itself as a contender for the intramural title in basketball.

Through its first two games, the squad averaged 81 points, mostly due to a potent fastbreak offense. In their most recent game against an improved Boneheads team, Dominant Force could not get its fastbreak working.

The Boneheads fashioned a 13-point advantage in the first half, only to have the dominant force for Dominant Force, Michael Stokes, take over late in the game.

With help from Clarence Stewart, Stokes, who scored 18 points in the game, brought his team from behind.

During the crucial second half, Stewart controlled the boards and Stokes ran the break. Dominant Force caught the Boneheads at 37 with six minutes left.

From then on, Stokes and Stewart managed to hold off the Boneheads, whose effort fell short by only seven points, as it lost, 51-41.

Stewart grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Dominant Force on the glass while scoring 15 points. Stokes contributed another eight rebounds to the team total of 48.

In the fraternity "A" league, TKE got off to a rousing start against Sigma Nu, scoring the first two baskets of the game and running to an 11-point halftime margin.

In the second half, TKE continued its fine play, pushing the lead to 27 at one time before finishing up with a 21-point win.

Four players scored in double figures for TKE. Kevin Smith had 16 to lead the team, while Brian Brenda and Bob Nesbitt had 15. Kevin Simmons scored 10.

In another fraternity contest, PKA outlasted Sigma Pi 55-38. Last year's fraternity champions are now 2-1.

PKA took advantage of several second-half turnovers to take the victory. Defensive pressure applied from the outset of the second half helped to generate the rash of Sigma Pi miscues.

Dave Stewart scored 20 points to lead PKA, while Ron Curl had 11, Donnie Patterson 10 and Marc Queen had 8 points.

Chi Omega downed Sigma Kappa in residence-sorority basketball 26-24. Sigma Kappa is now 1-3, while the winning Chi Omega team is now even at 2-2.

With less than twenty seconds left in the game, Mary Leigh Keiffer made the game-winning basket. Karen Speigelberg and Melissa Muhlenbruch led Chi Omega with 10 and nine points, respectively.

Crowd noise factor in Pack women win

didn't execute its normal fast-break game plan, and State nearly denied the Tar Heels' inside players the ball.

In the second half, a smaller Carolina team was on the court, and the game opened up. The Wolfpack's rebuttal for UNC's up-tempo pace was a transition game of its own.

"They (UNC) did run in the second half with a smaller team," Yow said. "I was pleased with our own transition."

The Wolfpack bench, which has been a bright spot for the team most of the season, has been providing strength to State's efforts.

"The people coming off the bench came in and helped us," Yow said. "They did not hurt us, and that was a plus."

The crowd of 4,080, although not the hoped-for record attendance, was a factor in the game.

"We got 4,000 people out," Yow said, "and that's great. Our managers did a good job. I'm not disappointed at all (with the turnout)."

The Pack will return to action Saturday night at 7:30 in Reynolds against the Maryland Terrapins, which are currently fifth in the ACC but are the defending tournament champions.

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

University Dining continually seeks to improve its services and products to NCSU students, faculty and staff. Your comments and suggestions are very helpful to us in making improvements in the dining program.

A survey we conducted in the fall indicated a need for better interactions between University Dining employees and customers.

In response to that need, we are instituting a program aimed at improving our customer relations skills. The program will encourage employees to maintain courteous and professional attitudes toward all University Dining customers.

One key facet of this program is to elicit your input on how our employees are doing. Photo identification badges are currently being made for all our employees to assist you in making your comments. We ask customers to submit written evaluations to University Dining's management by posting them on the Comment Corral Boards located in the Dining Hall, the Student Center (near the Commons) and the Atrium (at the passenger elevators located near the entrance on the east side).

COMMENT CORRAL

We encourage your active participation in our customer relations program.

HOW TO ENRICH YOUR EDUCATION BY $1,000 A MONTH.

If you're a math, engineering or physical sciences major, you could be earning $1,000 a month during your junior and senior years.

This excellent opportunity is part of the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program. It's one of the most prestigious ways of entering the nuclear field — and rewarding, too. You get a $4,000 bonus upon entrance into the program, and $2,000 more when you complete your Naval studies.

You also receive a year of paid graduate-level training that's the most comprehensive in the world. And you'll acquire expertise with state-of-the-art nuclear reactor and propulsion plant technology.

As a Navy officer, you'll lead the adventure while gaining high-level experience that will help make you a leader in one of the world's high-tech industries.

In addition to the professional advantages, nuclear-trained officers get an unbeatable benefits package, travel opportunities, promotions and a solid salary.

Find out more about the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program, and make your education start paying off today. Call Navy Management Programs: toll free in N.C. 1-800-662-7231/7419 or outside N.C. 1-800-528-8713, Mon.-Fri., 9:00 A.M. - 7:00 P.M.

Opinion

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body, becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the acts, and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life with-out its journal is blank.

Deny fee increase

Opponents of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as Star Wars, claim that it is inadvisable for the United States to spend billions of tax dollars on a weapon system which may not work.

Opponents of Residence Life's West Campus enclosure plan, known as Barred Wars, have the same logic. Why should residents have to pay an estimated $225,000 for enclosing Lee, Sullivan and Bragaw when it may not prevent theft and assault?

The money to finance this elaborate Maginot Line would come from an increase in rent — an increase of some 5 percent this year. Before students hit the ceiling, they need to understand that the West Campus enclosure is the first of a series of plans to insure airtight security on N.C. State's campus.

Residence Life argues that the enclosure, if recommended by architects completing a feasibility study, is needed to provide residents with maximum security, not unlike Central Prison. They claim that they must take every precaution in case a resident who has been assaulted sues the university for liability.

The department has also said that they are concerned about preserving a "livable" atmosphere for residents. Along with security measures, Cynthia Bonner, director of Residence Life, plans to improve the laundry and recreational facilities.

Considering the rather harsh, if not downright extreme, visitation policy, we are an itsy-bit skeptical of their concern for the atmosphere.

Since the Fee Increase Review Committee has rejected Residence Life's request, Thomas Stafford, vice chancellor of student affairs, must act now. He can either accept the committee's recommendation to send the increase proposal back to Residence Life or stick by his guns, siding with the department's request. We recommend that Stafford side with the students.

When the fee increase proposal is returned to Residence Life, we urge them to investigate a few questions. What are other universities in the UNC system doing about residence hall security? How will the residence hall atmosphere be affected by the enclosure? Will it be cost effective? And finally, will it work?

Like taxpayers on Star Wars, residents cannot afford to pay money for a gadget that does not work or is not needed.

Support lifelong education

If you have ever had a middle-aged person in one of your classes or looked into taking courses after you graduate, then you have come in contact with N.C. State University's lifelong education program.

The program allows almost anyone to take NCSU's courses for credit without having to go through enrollment procedures.

Lifelong education is designed for two kinds of people: those who want or need to take some additional course work before applying to a university and those who want to take a class for professional or personal reasons.

Often, high school graduates will not be accepted at NCSU because they don't have the grades, or they lack a few math courses. The lifelong education program gives them a second chance. After taking the courses they need, the students may reapply.

Sometimes college graduates will take a few courses while they look for jobs or decide on graduate school. Members of the Raleigh community might see an interesting course and decide they want to take it. All this is made possible through the lifelong education department.

Last fall, about 60 percent of lifelong education's students were over the age of 25. About half of the students had some type of baccalaureate degree.

Enrolling in the program is easy — just turn in a preregistration form. Students enrolled at NCSU get first priority for day classes while lifelong education students get priority at night. Although some departments may have restrictions, classes at change day are divided up on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The university deserves a pat on the back for continuing to support lifelong education. It is our hope the support will continue well into NCSU's second century.

A hard struggle in years to come

ROBERT DURIEX

Opinion Columnist

America's debt situation worries many people, and rightly so. Billions of dollars are added to the outstanding debt each year. There is no sign of change. Gramm-Rudman is a step in the right direction, but it is merely a law, not a constitutional amendment. When the going gets tough, it will probably be overruled by the House and Senate.

It's interesting to note that several Anti-Federalists argued against the constitution. One of them published an article in New York newspapers in the late 1780s under the pseudonym Brutus. Brutus warned against the right of the government to create a national debt.

"I can scarcely contemplate a greater calamity that could befall this country, than to be loaded with a debt exceeding their ability ever to discharge. If this be a just remark it is unwise and imprudent to vest in the general government a power to borrow at discretion, without any limitation and discretion."

So 200 years ago someone realized federal borrowing could lead to great problems. Little could Brutus imagine that America's internal deficits are increased by large foreign debts — debts which might never be paid back. This shortage of money could easily prove disastrous.

One major problem with America's huge debt is the fact that future generations are being saddled with a problem they did not create. But our generation can see harsh realities associated with the national debt.

First, take a look at the way the problem manifests itself.

Corporate debt has risen from a little above 85 percent of corporate net worth in 1971 to close to 120 percent today. As a result the number of AAA-rated industrial and utility corporations has dwindled from 56 to 27. Only one large bank holding company has remained AAA. During this time, non-business bankruptcy filings climbed from about 180,000 to over 400,000. This gives a clear indication of the trend America faces at the moment.

Household debt as a percentage of disposable income has soared from below 25 percent to around 31 percent. Credit cards aid this process because more people spend money they really don't possess. People borrow money from credit card companies at a tremendous interest rate. Borrowers lack money and reduce their savings, often completely consuming them. This lack of savings creates a shortage of money which results in increased interest rates.

It is simple to see why this happens. Corporations and the government need money, and they borrow it from the bank. If savings accounts across the board are depleted, the bank must increase interest rates to make it more attractive for individuals to deposit their money. The bank then uses money for corporate loans, but charges them a higher interest rate than they give the depositors. The difference is the bank's profit.

As a result, the federal interest cost as a percentage of federal spending has risen from around nine percent in 1971 to almost 14 percent now. And these interest payments do not decrease the debt at all. It only reduces the government's spending money.

One effect of the debt problem is an increasing number of bankruptcies and bank failings. It will also increase the chances of a severe recession. A rise of interest rates to the heights of the Carter era would be disastrous. People simply could not pay them. Recession could not be slowed or reversed by suddenly reducing taxes. Reducing taxes increases effective income; therefore, consumption will increase and unemployment decrease.

But the government will find it harder and harder to borrow money. Japanese and European investors will be needed to provide the funds to keep America going. To attract them, interest rates need to be higher here than abroad. This makes America's products more expensive and less competitive.

In addition to this, Third World countries have a large outstanding debt to America. Brazil owes $108 billion, Mexico $100 billion and Argentina $50 billion. It is slowly becoming obvious that none of these countries will be able to repay these loans. It is doubtful that they are any better off now than before they obtained these funds.

On the contrary, their debts increase as they borrow more money to pay off the interest. Lending banks such as Citicorp are rapidly increasing their loan loss reserves, preparing for the time they will be faced with a 50 or 100 billion dollar loan that cannot be repaid.

These are the kinds of problems the national debt is creating. With a total debt (federal and other borrowing) of $7 trillion, a debt to gross national product ratio of 1.7 and hundreds of billions of dollars of potentially bad loans, we may need more than just a simple law to get us out of this situation. It will demand sacrifices from the whole nation. If every American (from babies to elderly citizens) would pay $2,800, the debt would be paid off. Since this is obviously not possible, we better prepare to face a hard struggle in the years to come.

Black history

George Carver, born in 1864 to two former slaves, went on to develop over 300 products that helped bolster the South's floundering economy.

Carver worked his way through Iowa State College, earning both an undergraduate and master's degree.

In 1876 he became the first president of Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Alabama. While there, he persuaded farmers to replenish their soil by growing peanuts.

As peanuts became over-abundant, he developed practical applications. Carver used peanuts to make cheese, milk, coffee, flour, milk, wood stain and insulating boards, just to name a few.

Closed meetings help efficiency

ALLEN ST. CLAIR

Opinion Columnist

Combustible gases filled the air weeks before student leaders and high-ranking administrators collided at the most recent Chancellor's Liaison meeting.

However, that afternoon, intense friction between the two sides sent a spark flying through the air, igniting a high-powered explosion.

Since then, relations between them have not improved. In fact, the situation might have worsened.

At the center of the controversy appears to be a crucial question: How extensively should student representatives be included in the policy-making process? Each side differs in opinion on this matter, and the difference can largely be attributed to how each perceives this university.

Student leaders perceive this campus as belonging to students much in the same way that a county belongs to its citizens.

In a sense, this perception is well founded.

Students must live by the rules that the administration hands down much in the same way citizens must live by the rules their government imposes.

Also, students share a common bond and cause. In philosophical terms, each student is a part of N.C. State, and NCSU is a part of each student. The image of this university, then, directly affects the image of the students who attend it.

Thus, students have a vested interest in every policy that their administration makes.

From this, it follows, student's needs, concerns and viewpoints should be seriously considered during the policy-making process.

On the other hand, the administration has a different perception of this university. They view it much like a business. This view also has its merits.

The administrators at NCSU have a high quality undergraduate experience. Because universities also offer this product, NCSU must compete with other institutions to attract the best consumers.

So running this university like a business is understandable.

One of the keys to a successful business is efficiency. And, as anyone familiar with meetings can attest to, closed meetings are much more efficient than open ones.

In a closed meeting, the members can say anything they want. If they feel the urge, they can throw a temper tantrum. Furthermore, they don't have to worry about a slip of the tongue showing up on the front page of the newspaper. And perhaps most importantly, they can talk about sensitive issues.

To paraphrase our chancellor, closed meetings promote the free exchange of ideas and open dialogue.

Therefore, given that both the student leader's and the administration's perceptions are worthy of respect, a compromise is warranted.

It is vitally important that student representatives be included in the decision-making process. However, it is not necessary that they be included every step of the way.

This administration has an excellent record of taking student viewpoint into consideration, and it is unclear how closed meetings will change that — as our representatives claim.

Consider this compromise. Unless a meeting's primary purpose is to discuss student issues, the university should be allowed to hold any meeting they choose behind closed doors. The purpose behind a closed meeting, it should be remembered, is not to keep secrets from the public, but instead to promote efficiency — a goal we can all understand.

Furthermore, minutes of the meeting should be made available to anyone who is interested, so they will know what topics and recommendations the committee considered.

Before a committee makes any final recommendations, student representatives should be notified and perhaps even asked for their input. This will allow the representatives an opportunity to interject their opinions on the issues.

Every student that attends this school chooses to do so on his own free will. No one is forced to come here. Therefore, we should show a little trust in our administration, and let them hold closed meetings if they think it is necessary.

Closed meetings won't leave students out of administrative policy. Instead, closed meetings will make for a more efficient university.

of the Congressional Budget Office; retired admiral Bobby Inman, chairman and chief executive officer of Westmark Systems, Inc., a Texas-based defense industry holding company; and Lewis Branscomb, director of the Science, Technology, and Public Policy Program at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Rosalind Reid, assistant director of NCSU Information Services, said Perot's speech will be broadcast live by WKNC-FM at 9:55-10:35 a.m. "We hope that students who can't attend the forum will be able to listen to the speech on radio," Reid said.

The student radio station will also tape the rest of the forum's speakers, but WKNC news director Paul Woolverton said Tuesday that he didn't know when those speeches would air.

In addition to news media coverage, the forum will also air on C-SPAN, a national public affairs cable network, next Monday from 9:30 a.m. to noon. C-SPAN can be seen locally on Raleigh Cablevision channels 13 and 25.
