Congressman appalled at cutbacks in financial aid

By Madelyn Rosenberg
Assistant News Editor

The UNC Association of Student Governments (UNCASG) began its second day of lobbying against President Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts when members met with an aide from Jesse Helms' office on Thursday.

Mary Utter met with the delegates and told them the office was looking for budget cuts across the board, except in the department of defense. Student Senate President Walt Perry, who met with Utter, said the office was "very receptive to our concerns."

"Her concern was that the deficit would reach the point where it would kill the economy and that the cuts needed to be made right," Perry said. "That's a valid concern."

Perry said he was astonished at the lack of student input Helms' office had received on the potential cuts in aid. "No one seems to be indicating to their lawmakers this is an issue to be concerned about," he noted.

The UNCASG delegates also met with congressman and N.C. State graduate Walter Jones.

Jones said he understood students' concern over the "red tape" which is making the process of getting aid more difficult. He said he would be asking for the procedure to be simplified.

"This administration is unusual, to say the least, in its priorities," Jones said, when asked about his feelings on the president's call for drastic cuts in financial aid.

According to the congressman, some cuts were necessary, but not to the "gigantic" extent the administration was requesting.

"The thing that's hurting your situation is the number of students who have received loans in the past and have not repaid them," Jones told students.

The congressman said he had paid for his education at NCSU with a partial athletic scholarship and by working in the dining hall, so he understood the need for aid in education.

Representative Stephen Neal said he did not think the president's budget would succeed.

"The budgets he has presented each year over the last four have not been serious documents," he said. "The whole concept of our government depends on people being educated."

Charlie Rose, representative for the seventh district, told students he always voted for federal financial aid legislation and said he was appalled at the cutbacks in financial aid.

Rose said he did not know the tax reform called for taxation of grants and stipends and said he would find out more about it. "That's not right," he said. "I will say no!"

By the end of the trip, the delegates had met with congressmen or their aides representing every N.C. district.

Virginia drops State, 72-65

'I did everything I could to win this game,' Valvano says

By Katrina Waugh
Assistant Sports Editor

The Wolfpack came out of Sunday's 72-65 loss to Virginia with a sense of deja vu. Once again the outcome of the game came down to foul shooting and once again the Cavaliers, which beat the Wolfpack earlier in the year on a controversial violation at the foul line, got the better of State.

"I did everything I could to win this game," Coach Jim Valvano said. "I even invited a priest for inspiration and good luck, but it looks like it may have been for the last rites."

The Pack falls to 14-14 for the season and 4-8 in the ACC, with only three games left in the season. Virginia is now 18-8 overall and 6-6 in the league.

"We're playing much better. We've cut down on turnovers; we've been moving the ball better; our assists are up. It's just not showing up in the win column," Valvano said.

State shot 53.1 percent for the game, had 15 assists, 22 rebounds and 12 turnovers. Virginia shot 58.7 percent, had 17 assists, 21 rebounds and only nine turnovers.

"The lack of consistency from various performers has really hurt the team," Valvano said. "Coaching to me is knowing your personnel and knowing how they will perform. I'm in an unfamiliar territory at this time of the year."

With only three games left before the ACC tournament, the Pack's hopes for NCAA tournament play are dim. In fact, their lights might be out.

"We're not right now at that calibre of play," Valvano said. "We're a step below."

The Wolfpack's performance against the Cavaliers was a mirror image of its recent play. Instead of putting in a good first 15 minutes, then losing its composure and giving up a large halftime lead, State was down by 14 before making a mini-run with three minutes remaining to cut the margin to nine.

The Pack out fouled Virginia 11-2 until the final two minutes of the half.

Vinnie Del Negro and Chucky Brown each had eight points in the first period to lead the Pack's scoring. Both Brown and Mike Giomi picked up three personal fouls early in the half.

Still, the 44-35 halftime margin was a large deficit to overcome.

"Once again we put ourselves in that position of being down by double figures," Valvano said.

The Pack continued its run into the second period, cutting Virginia's lead to five before the Cavaliers could score.

State's intensified second half defense, with a lineup of Del Negro, Brown, Quentin Jackson, Bennie Bolton and Charles Shackelford, held the Cavaliers to just 29 points in the half.

Congressmen took student leader's proposals seriously

By Madelyn Rosenberg
Assistant News Editor

Most of North Carolina's congressional and senatorial representatives received delegates from the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments (UNCASG) with respect and interest

News Analysis

when the group visited Washington last weekend. Representative Cass Ballenger and Senator Jesse Helms' aide Mary Utter said they did not agree with the students' efforts to halt the proposed cuts in financial aid and the education budget, but that they were still glad to receive input from the students who would be affected should student aid be cut.

Student Senate President Walt Perry said the officials were "very receptive to our concerns." The UNCASG's lobbying efforts forced some legislators to look at the proposed cuts a second time. Several representatives took notes when the students spoke, indicating a genuine interest for student problems. Just getting the lawmakers to seriously consider the student's opinions made the trip worthwhile, Perry said.

Student Senator Perry Woods said the students "helped motivate the North Carolina delegation" and improve the "lack of awareness" many congressmen seemed to have on the issue of student aid.

Woods said the lack of awareness was understandable since representatives deal with so many different issues. This is why student input was necessary, he said, and why they could have an impact on legislation.

"They can ignore the situation but it's not going to go away," Woods said. "We brought it to their attention. We can't expect them to know everything."

Representatives from Helms' office and from the department of education said this was the first input they had received from college students.

Perry said it was the responsibility of students to let their legislators know they are concerned. "Each student receiving a grant, loan or work study should let them know," he said.

Student Body President Gary Mauney agreed that the trip was productive. The students presented a report of the problems with the proposed drastic cuts in financial aid and offered alternatives. The delegation's knowledge of the subject and their proposed alternatives showed the representatives that students were willing to work with them, Mauney said.

Five years from now, when students are adept at using their legislators, school representatives should have an even greater impact on the government, Mauney said.

The UNCASG tried to stress that a compromise on the aid cuts (25 percent instead of the proposed 40) would still be detrimental to the accessibility of education.

While the representatives all agreed the President's budget would not pass, many said they would probably be concessions.

The Republican congressmen were not trying to keep students away from an education, Ballenger said, they were just trying to make up the national deficit by making cuts in everything.

Woods pointed out the deficit was something college-age Americans would have to pay for and it would take educated minds to do so.

These representatives said they understood the point, but stood firm on the idea of cuts in education.

NCSU student crowned Miss Greater Raleigh

By Dave Klein
Staff Writer

Fate led N.C. State sophomore Christina Carole De Matteis to compete in the 1987 Miss Greater Raleigh Scholarship Pageant.

Several months ago, pageant director Gene Troutman saw a picture of De Matteis and asked the Haitian-born economics major if she would like to compete in the beauty and talent contest. This was her first pageant, but with a dose of beginner's luck, De Matteis won the swimsuit and talent competitions outright and defeated 10 other contestants for the right to be crowned Miss Raleigh earlier this month.

The pageant is a "super organization," De Matteis said, and during the contest, all the contestants "became like family." When she came back to campus, her friends in Alexander Residence Hall celebrated her victory by hanging up a big banner that everyone had signed.

De Matteis, who was awarded $600 for winning first place, said she will spend time during the next three months traveling around the state as Miss Raleigh. She will also compete in the Miss North Carolina pageant in June.

The beauty queen's talents aren't limited to school. De Matteis has been involved in ballet dancing for 13 years and can speak three languages fluently. Among her wide-ranging career options are professional dancing, business and graduate school.

De Matteis and her family moved to Raleigh from Haiti four years ago. She and her two brothers enrolled in Ravenscroft School in North Raleigh while her father took a job as soccer coach at Cardinal Gibbons High School. She picked NCSU for college because of its proximity to home and her long time dancing teacher.

SBE looks at past and future of group

By Andrew Means
Staff Writer

"Treasuring a Past, Investing in a Future" was the theme for the Region II Conference, hosted by the N.C. State's Society of Black Engineers (SBE) Feb. 20-22. Thirteen of the 22 colleges in Region II participated in the three-day event.

The conference kicked off with a new program, High School Outreach, where college students discussed typical problems facing black high school students who are trying to choose a college and major with area high school students. The group compared black universities to white universities, large colleges to small colleges, various engineering programs and discussed what the college students would do if they could return to high school.

On Saturday, students were given an update of the SBE chapters on the national and regional levels. They also discussed the NSBE constitution and held nominations for officers of the regional board. Tabitha Hooker, a junior and president of NCSU's chapter of SBE, was elected the new regional secretary.

Weekend workshops focused on various topics such as the crisis of the black family, the truths about research, the path of our black men and the importance of technical writing.

W.A. Soders, an engineer from Reialwood, NC spoke on the conference theme at a banquet in the Brownstone Hotel. The NSBE also sponsored a disco and a Bible Study to entertain the delegates from Delaware, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia during their stay in Raleigh.

The conference was designed to prepare the delegates for the National Conferences in Dallas, March 25-29, where students will be able to attend workshops and career fairs. They will also discuss the national SBE constitution and pertinent issues such as membership and chapter rules.

Congressmen David Price said the Democratic congressmen were all supportive of the students' fight to keep their financial aid, and many would be willing to work for legislation in their favor.

Congressman Martin Lancaster said he was preparing legislation to address the taxation of the grants and stipends, so it appears some congressmen have already taken a stand.

The UNCASG reached the congressmen who had not yet taken a strong position and attempted to influence them by showing how cuts in aid would hamper access to education.

Republican Ballenger of the 10th district said he would look into ways of making the aid that was allotted by the federal government more accessible.

Allen's Radio Days loses story in its transmission

By Joe Corey
Entertainment Editor

Last year Woody Allen feared Hannah and Her Sisters would become a box office smash and rake up millions of dollars while he would be forced to make E.T.'s instead of the movies he likes and wants to make.

That didn't quite happen. Allen kept total control of the films he makes and his latest film, Radio Days, is far from being a neurotic Jewish version of E.T.

The worst thing that can be said about Radio Days is that it is nice. But unfortunately, it is also the best thing you can say about the film.

Allen has created another one of his small pictures like Zelig and Purple Rose of Cairo, yearning for days before television became king and the World was at war.

The film starts out with a couple of burglars breaking into the Needleman's house, next to Allen's boyhood home. The phone rings and the two idiot crooks decide to answer the phone. They discover that they are contestants on a radio program like "Name That Tune."

Don Fardo (Jeopardy and Saturday Night Live announcer) plays the perfect host for the program as he keeps telling Mr. Needleman how close he is to the grand jackpot. The crooks guess all three of the songs and win the jackpot. When the Needleman comes home that night, their house has been ransacked, and $50 and the silverware has been stolen. But the next morning a van with all the prizes arrives in their driveway.

That's when the humor begins, but also when the main problem of the movie shows up. There is no real continuation in the storyline.

The stories jump between Allen's remembrances of his childhood adventures and stories about the radio personalities of the time.

REVIEW

There is a slight chronological order in the scenes presented, but no real unifying action between the people on the radio and Allen's family living near Coney Island. The film is less than 88 minutes long and that is too short a time to tell these two stories. Both of the tales come out hacked to the point that everything is rushed and nothing makes sense.

Allen tries to show the power that radio had back in its heyday. But he does not give a complete story and creates one of those warped meanderings that your slightly senile great-aunt might give.

Radio Days depicts what happens when your grandmother combines her scrapbook of Hollywood personalities and tales with the family photo album. It's an interesting thing to look at, but something is lacking. There must be some sort of bridge between Allen's family and the radio personalities other than the airwaves.

Allen does not appear on camera in Radio Days. But unlike the other two films (Interiors and Purple Rose of Cairo) in which he didn't appear, he does the narrative throughout the film. There is unexplainable calm in Allen's squeaky voice as it laments his youth during the war years.

Mia Farrow does a great job playing the ditzy cigarette girl who, through strange twists of fate, becomes a major radio gossip columnist. There is a strong urge to believe that Farrow's character could have a meaningful conversation with Vanna White.

Diane Wiest plays Allen's aunt who is desperate to find a man. But every time she can smell a husband, something always goes wrong. Wiest plays the part so well that you can almost sense that this woman will turn out to be one of those aunts that never got married.

Many of the people who always show up in Allen's films appear in this one. Popping up are long time cohort Tony Roberts (Play It Again Sam) as an announcer, ex-girl friend Diane Keaton (Reds and Annie Hall) as a nightclub singer and Jeff Daniels (Something Wild) as a macho radio star hero out to destroy the Axis threat.

The film never becomes really disgusting, but it borders on turning into some idealistic, sugary dream of what life was like back when Allen was a kid. Allen keeps little perspective on reality and the harsh denials made during the 1940s, but Radio Days does not get sentimental to the point of inducing violent illness.

Allen's films normally deal with three main subjects: sex, death and God. In Radio Days, Allen only briefly delves into these typical topics.

The film is still good and worth going to see. But I recommend that you pick up some discount tickets at the Student Center. You won't expect so much if you aren't paying full price.

Radio Days is playing at Mission Valley Cinemas.

Mime's performance incomparable

By Jeff Cherry
Features Editor

World-famous Marcel Marceau brought the ancient art of pantomime to Stewart Theatre Friday and Saturday nights — with a few modern twists.

Without props or scenery, Marceau enthralled the packed house by creating his own comical and tragical interpretations of everyday life with only gestures and facial expressions.

An effective use of sound and lighting managed to frame the incomparable Marceau's performance without intruding upon it.

The first half of the performance consisted of several style pantomimes, beginning with "The Sculptor," a lighthearted and imaginative portrayal of an artist in search of perfection who chisels his masterpiece into the lump of clay with which he began.

With "The Public Garden," Marceau showed a Sunday afternoon stroll in the park, replete with an indulgent balloon man and a harassed pet owner walking his dog for what is the other way around?

"The Trial" continued the show's whimsical tone with Marceau's creation of a sleepy bailiff and showboating lawyers, but ended rather starkly with the prisoner's execution.

Marceau's amazing ability to instantly alter his facial expression was demonstrated in "The Mask Maker," which portrayed the craftsman trying on his wares.

When the mask maker struggles to remove a happy mask, Marceau creates the illusion of a tense struggle with his face locked in an artificial grin.

After intermission came the adventures of Bip, a character created by Marceau in 1947. Several short pieces showed Bip on a sea voyage (with the inevitable seasickness routine), searching for a job and hosting his dream girl from the dating service.

The night's finale, "Bip Remembers," used extensive light and sound effects in an ambitious attempt at a stream of consciousness "trip down memory lane" for Bip. Although the piece was moving and provocative, it was much too long.

Overall though, the night's performance showed why Marceau has been proclaimed for over 30 years as the greatest pantomimist of our time.

Men finish second in ACC indoor track and field championships

By Tim Peeler
Sports Editor

The Clemson Tigers got a boost from Mike Spiritoso's win in the 35-pound weight throw to edge State, 103-97, in the men's Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships, held this weekend in Johnson City, Tenn.

Georgia Tech was third with 84 points, followed by North Carolina with 57, Maryland with 51, Virginia with 31, Duke with 9 and Wake Forest with 2.

The Wolfpack could have won the meet by winning the weight throw, but Wolfpacker Thomas Humanik's toss was almost two feet shorter than Spiritoso's 50-foot, 11-inch throw. Humanik finished second with a 49-foot toss.

"Obviously it's disappointing when the meet comes down to the last event," Wolfpack coach Rollie Geiger said. "But overall, we had a great two days. Clemson just had a better two days."

The Wolfpack, leading after Friday's first round of competition, got outstanding performances from Danny Peebles, who won two events and set a conference record, and Mike Patton, who qualified for the NCAA meet in the triple jump.

"Danny and Mike both had a great weekend," Geiger said. Peebles, a Raleigh native, ran the 60-yard dash in a record 6.19 seconds to win the event and qualify for next month's NCAA meet in Oklahoma City. His performance broke a record set in 1956 by Dave Sims of Duke.

Friday night Peebles won the long jump with a leap of 24 feet, 11 1/4 inches.

Patton won the triple jump with a leap of 52 feet, 6 1/4 inches, qualifying him for the NCAA's.

Maryland's William Skinner, who qualified for the NCAA's in two events, was named the meet's outstanding performer. Skinner set a conference record with a 7-3/4 leap in the high jump and won the 60-yard hurdles, covering the distance in 7.21 seconds.

Clemson coach Wade Williams was named league indoor track coach of the year.

Two other league records were set during the meet. Clemson's Marcus Black won the 600-yard run in a record time of 1:10.00, breaking an eight-year-old record. Georgia Tech's mile relay team set a meet record with a 3:11.78 finish, breaking a record set by Clemson in 1980.

Women's basketball team downs Jackets by nine, finishes second in ACC standings

By Trent McCranie
Staff Writer

The women's season ended on a high note as 13th-ranked State brushed back Georgia Tech, 78-69, in Atlanta Saturday afternoon.

The Wolfpack finished the regular season with a 20-6 overall record and moved to 11-3 in the conference behind Virginia, which was shocked by Duke 77-76 Saturday. The Yellow Jackets fell to 13-12 and 4-9.

Two seniors shined for the Pack as center Trena Trice scored a game high 22 points and yanked down 13 rebounds while forward Annermarie Treadway chipped in 19 points. The other seniors had productive games for State - Angela Daye hit above her average with 12 solid points and guard Carla Hillman hit four.

With the ACC tournament just a week away, the Wolfpack made a good showing and had a solid game after the Wake Forest disaster last week. State, which lost to the Deacons, 69-59, played without its normal intensity and fervor, shooting 36 percent from the field. Getting the 20th win was important not only for a resurgence of momentum, but it meant something to the players as well.

"The players had a real desire to get that (20) wins because of last year," Wolfpack coach Kay Yow said. Last year State won 18 games, breaking a nine-year string of 20-win seasons.

At the half, Tech was on top by one at 35-34 despite State's 56 percent shooting. The key to the Ramblin' Wreck's lead was its rebounding, leading the Wolfpack, 21-12.

The second half, however, saw the Wolfpack score the first four points and take the rest of the game in hand, controlling the boards with a 23-15 advantage. State jumped to a comfortable nine-point lead when it ran off six consecutive points. Freshman center Kerrie Hobbs converted two free throws and a bucket before Daye followed a missed foul shot for a 56-47 lead.

"After the first half, I was a little worried," Yow said. "We played hard defense and were still behind by a point. Turnovers at a critical time and the rebounding cost us the lead."

"In the second half, I thought we played even better defensively. We had more patience and ball movement on offense and we kept them off the boards."

The Wolfpack, losing only to the Cavaliers, the Blue Devils and the Demon Deacons in league action will figure to be one of the top contenders in the tournament. Yow warns, however, of the equality of women's basketball this year, which has proven true lately. Parity has reared its head with Duke's upset of the Pack and Duke's toppling of highly ranked Virginia.

The ACC women's extravaganza will begin with the first round games this Saturday and will culminate in the title game on Monday in Fayetteville's Cumberland County Auditorium. Tickets are on sale now at Reynolds Coliseum box office.

Women's track team ties for 5th in league

The women's indoor track team tied for fifth place in the ACC indoor championships held this weekend at Johnson City, Tenn.

Virginia won the event with 132 points, followed by North Carolina with 85, Georgia Tech had 35, State and Clemson both had 22. Wake Forest claimed seventh place with 10, and Duke had 8.

State's top performers, as usual, were in the distance races as Janet Smith and Suzie Tuffey finished second and third, respectively, in the two-mile race. Both qualified for next month's NCAA Championships in Oklahoma City.

Smith finished the course in 10:49 and Tuffey in 10:03.95.

Clemson's Ute Jamrozky won the event with a time of 10:01.47.

State's Chavonda Jacobs finished in a three-way tie for third place in the high jump. Jacobs, Duke's Denise Yamanda and North Carolina's Marta Thacker all jumped 5 feet, 5 1/2 inches in the event.

Fred Binggeli of Virginia was named the women's coach of the year and Kathy Harrison of Georgia Tech was the meet's most outstanding performer, winning the long jump on Friday and garnering two second place finishes on Saturday.

Team Scoring
1. Virginia, 132; 2. North Carolina, 85; 3. Georgia Tech, 35; 4. State, 22; 5. Clemson, 22; 6. Wake Forest, 10; 7. Duke, 8.

Wrestlers host Blue Devils; last stand for three seniors

Sodano, Corkhill, Schneiderman finish home careers

By Tim Peeler
Sports Editor

The wrestling team hosts its final home wrestling meet in Reynolds Coliseum when Duke visits at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

For three Wolfpack seniors who have had distinguished careers at State, this will be the last home meet. Marc Sodano, Dave Schneiderman and Norman Corkhill will take their final home bows against the Blue Devils.

These three have worked for two ACC titles and a second place finish in the league.

Sodano, last year's ACC champion in the 126-pound division, has compiled a 49-8-2 in his two-year career, with a 26-2 record this year. He transferred to State from Wilkes College in Wilkes-Barre, Penn.

"We certainly feel he has the capabilities to win another (ACC title)," Wolfpack coach Bob Guzzo said. "He's in the top four in the nation. He has a chance at a national title if he continues to work hard."

Sodano's only losses this year came at the hands of two of the country's top wrestlers, Bill Sonomo of Pennsylvania and Chip McArdle of North Carolina.

Schneiderman, who owns a 49-23-1 career mark at State, is the defending conference champion in the 134 division. He has compiled a 17-3-1 record this year, and was ranked in the nation's top 10 earlier this year.

"He is an extremely hard worker, and I think the thing that best attests to that is his being elected as co-captain," Guzzo said. "He's had a distinguished career here. He has really improved since his freshman year."

Corkhill was the runner-up in the 177 division in the ACC last year. He owns a 50-22-3 career record and a 9-1 this year.

"He is looking for his first ACC title," Guzzo said. "We feel he has a chance at this."

Duke is one of only two meets the Wolfpack has left this year. State travels to Clemson Saturday to face the Tigers.

State owns a 10-7 overall record and a 1-3 mark in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We are starting to gear up for the ACC tournament," Guzzo said. "This will be a nice test for us."

The meet is free to all State students who show proper identification.

Gymnasts set school record in new arena

From staff reports

The gymnastics team celebrated the opening of the gymnastics arena in Carmichael Gymnasium by setting a school record for total points in a meet Friday night, and defeated a pair of foes along the way.

The Wolfpack won all four events and the all-around title in the make-shift tri-meet.

State had been scheduled to meet James Madison Friday night and Georgia College Saturday night, but because of a change in travel plans, the two meets were combined into a tri-team event.

Portia Propst and Leah Ranney led the Wolfpack to a 177.9 point finish, which bettered James Madison and Georgia College and surpassed the old school mark of 177.60. JMU came in second, just 0.05 points ahead of Georgia College, 168.2168.15.

Propst took first place in the vault with a 9.05 score and tied teammate Angela Fontana for honors in the floor exercises with a 9.2. Ranney won the uneven parallel bars and took the all-around title with a combined score of 36.75.

State's Cheri Tester won the balance beam event with a score of 9.5.

did a better job than the first half," Valvano said.

The Pack outscored Virginia 27-20 and came within two points on the strength of three-pointers from Del Negro and Andy Kennedy, with 4:16 left in the game.

But the Cavaliers held on with buckets from Tom Sheehey and John Johnson, and after a three-pointer from Bolton, the Pack resorted to fouling to gain control of the ball.

Johnson hit all four of the pressure free throws to put the game out of State's reach.

Jackson, who ran the second-half offense from the point, picked up eight points, six assists, two steals and two rebounds for the contest.

"Queenin gave us a solid game," Valvano said. "It's obvious that Vinnie plays better in the off-guard position."

Del Negro led the Wolfpack's scoring with 15 points, six rebounds and five assists. Shackelford was the leading rebounder with six boards and 14 points.

Brown ended the game with 10 points and five rebounds for the Pack, which travels to Maryland Wednesday night to face the Terrapins.

Tennis team hosts Atlantic Christian

The women's tennis team opens its season - finally - today against Atlantic Christian College at 2 p.m. at the Wolfpack Tennis Complex.

The women were scheduled to open last week, but bad weather forced the cancellation of the opener against UNC-Charlotte.

Wolfpack coach Crawford Henry said this year's squad should be better and more experienced than last year's squad.

The only player lost from last year's team was all-ACC selection Patty Hamilton.

Losing Hamilton hurts, Henry said. "But we'll still have a good team."

Henry expects sophomore Katie Fleming and senior Mary Lloyd Hodges to fill the top two positions and use their experience to improve the team.

Fleming compiled a 12-9 mark last year as a freshman, with a 15-5 mark in doubles. Hodges is returning for her final campaign after being named the team's most valuable player last year, when she posted an 18-4 singles record and won 16 of 20 doubles contests.

Those two players plan to fill the first two positions, but the other four singles slots are still open, Henry said. He will wait until just before today's match to make his decision about filling out the lineup.

He has a trio of juniors to choose from - Meg Fleming (Katie's older sister), Sandra Meiser and Anne-Marie Voorheis. Meiser compiled a 12-6 mark last year and Voorheis had a 9-5 mark. Meg Fleming, a doubles specialist, won five singles matches last year.

Sophomore Christa Doiron, who compiled the second best record on the team last year at 13-5, is also expected to make an impact for the Wolfpack.

Because of the bad weather, two of the men's team's matches were cancelled this weekend. Their next match will be on March 1 when they travel to Columbia, S.C. to face the University of South Carolina's team.
