Pack women beat Villanova

By Trent McCranie
Staff Writer

Debbie Bertrand hit a 20-foot jumper with seven seconds remaining as the 13th-ranked Wolfpack women registered a 68-67 win over 17th-ranked Villanova in the second round of the NCAA tournament at the John E. DuPont Pavilion in Philadelphia Saturday afternoon.

The Wolfpack, 24-6, will advance to the regional semi-finals in Fayetteville's Cumberland County Arena Thursday night against the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers, ranked fifth nationally. Rutgers advanced to the game by defeating Duke on Saturday, 78-64. The matchup is slated for 8 p.m.

State survived a 27-point performance by Villanova's all-America candidate Shelley Pennefather. Wolfpack senior center Trena Trice poured in 19 points, hitting eight of her 10 shots. Trice also grabbed seven rebounds.

State, up 37-35 at the half, forced a Villanova timeout with nearly 15 minutes left with an eight-point outburst to take a 47-41 lead. The Wolfpack opened up its biggest lead of the game with just over 10 minutes to go at 54-45 when Bertrand drove into the lane for a layup and was fouled. She converted the three-point play to give State a lead that would soon diminish.

The Wildcats went on a 14-4 run that culminated in a 59-58 lead at the 5:45 mark when Pennefather hit two free throws. The score went back and forth from then on, much like the entire first half. The Cats used a pair of free throws again — this time from guard Lynn Tighe — with 35 seconds remaining to take a 67-66 edge.

Coach Kay Yow then set up a strategy with a timeout that preceded Bertrand's game-winning.

"When we inbounded the ball," Wolfpack coach Kay Yow said, "we were looking for a specific shot which we did not get. We really wanted to go inside to Trena. It just wasn't there, so we moved into our offense. Debbie Bertrand put down a very tough shot for us. We were fortunate."

State had four players, including Trice, reach double figures in scoring. Senior forwards Angela Daye and Annemarie Treadway had 12 and 14 points, respectively, but it was junior guard Bertrand who provided the added firepower, scoring 12 points.

Bertrand, averaging just over five points a game, went a perfect five for five from the floor and dished out seven assists.

Senior guard Carla Hillman played another solid game as she led the floor with a game-high eight assists along with four points.

Down the stretch in tournament play, our guards have done very well. Against North Carolina in the ACC semi-finals, Carla Hillman played out of her mind. In the finals against Virginia, Debbie had a great game. Today, both played very well and Debbie hit that big basket.

As we have gone into tournament time, our guards have really come on."

Florida, Sloan use State in opener

By Tim Peeler
Sports Editor

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — If the truth be known, Florida coach Norm Sloan really was happy to play N.C. State in the first round of the NCAA tournament Friday. He didn't really want to beat his alma mater all that badly.

It's just that the hoopla surrounding the reunion of Sloan and the school he led to a national championship in 1974 took the nervous edge off the inexperienced Gators.

"We tried to use State," Sloan said after the Wolfpack's season-ending loss to the Gators in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. "There was a lot more surrounding the game. Therefore the win was a bigger win for our players. In that sense, we used N.C. State."

"I thought it was a golden opportunity and fortunately we took advantage of it."

Florida used NCSU to the tune of a 82-70 win in the Carrier Dome in Syracuse. The Gators were making its first appearance in the NCAA after three straight trips to the National Invitational Tournament and advanced to beat Purdue in Sunday's second round, 85-66.

NCSU turned out to be a Mission Impossible assignment tape, for the Wolfpack self-destructed five seconds after it got its job done.

Ahead by 49-40 with 12 minutes to go, State was in position to take control — just like in its last six games, all wins.

This time, however, the Wolfpack fell apart.

"Up to that point I thought we had done everything that we had wanted to do," State's Jim Valvano said. "Then we had four or five just awful turnovers. Their pressure was consistent."

A pressing man-to-man defense by the Gators and several bad decisions by State caused the turnaround.

Safety officers relieved of duty

Two dismissed for suspected misconduct

By Meg Sullivan
Assistant News Editor

Two N.C. State Public Safety Officers were relieved of their duties last week after they were accused of "misappropriation of property" from the university Public Safety. Major Larry Liles said.

Sgt. Wesley Shattuck and officer Richard Hobbs were terminated when an internal investigation showed misconduct on behalf of the two officers.

Liles said he was not able to give specific details of the cases pending an investigation by the Wake County District Attorney's office. He also said WRAL-TV's report that one of the officers was terminated because he stole money from a vending machine was inaccurate.

On Jan. 12, Liles was notified that Shattuck had been involved in "improper action," Liles immediately began an internal investigation. The investigation concluded on Feb. 25 and Shattuck was suspended without pay. After a disciplinary conference, he was terminated.

A similar investigation procedure led to Hobbs' dismissal. Liles said the two officers were not working together, although the cases are similar.

"The cases were not related," he said. "It is ironic that they both occurred at the same time."

The officers were not arrested or formally charged, but have been turned over to the district attorney for a review, a standard procedure in cases involving state employees. Liles said the district attorney will decide what charges to press, if any.

"This is a very sensitive case because it involves two officers in a position of trust," he added.

Both officers have unlisted phone numbers and could not be reached for comment.

Academics program helps students

By Xavier Allen
Senior Staff Writer

The Program of Academic Advancement (PAA) helps students get off to a good academic start by assisting students with time management, said Thomas Conway, assistant director of the Academic Skills Program, during Thursday's Chancellor Liaison meeting.

Conway said his office makes recommendations concerning a student's academic performance geared toward students graduating. "We try to help students develop self-discipline and ask that they take a look at the value of a (college) degree," he said.

Conway said PAA monitors students' academic progress and provides support to negotiate themselves within the university. Based on the student's prior academic performance, PAA classifies about 400 non-student athletes as "high risk" for not graduating.

PAA provides approximately 150 student-athletes with information and intervention while providing more intensive efforts to about 50 other high-risk student-athletes. PAA, working in conjunction with the Afro-American coordinators of each school, also assists black students by providing assistance through its University Transition Program.

In other business, Thomas Stafford, vice-chancellor of Student Affairs, said no money will be earmarked for the West campus enclosure feasibility study for the 1987-1988 academic year. He said he would allow Student Senate fee review committee to discuss the planned housing increase.

Inter-Residence Council Vice President Sharon Griffin said the continued year-to-year increase will turn upperclass students away from the residence halls.

"This will increase the number of freshmen living in the dorms and lessen the experience of the halls," she said. "I am pleased with the comments expressed here and I'm glad he (Stafford) decided to give the committee the opportunity to review the increase."

Greek sidewalk will be built along Dan Allen Drive

By Helina Silander
Staff Writer

The asphalt sidewalks of Dan Allen Drive will be replaced by bricks forming the letters of campus fraternities and sororities this week with the construction of Sigma Nu's letters.

"The purpose of the sidewalk project is to bring the fraternities and sororities together in a unified atmosphere," said Walt Perry, student senate president. Perry has advocated the project since the idea's origin two years ago. The project is scheduled to be completed at the end of the 1987 academic year.

The new Greek sidewalk will not contain the minority Greek organizations that are already built in at the front of Reynolds Coliseum.

According to Greeks United president Greta Johnson, the black Greek organizations support the new walk, but chose not to participate because "the pledge to our letters mean a lot to us; we don't want people to walk on them." Johnson said the Greek walk by Reynolds was constructed without Greeks United's permission.

Four years ago, Greeks United wanted to have an area of land on campus with the organization's symbol engraved and restricted to the members of that organization.

The Physical Plant Division tried to compromise by giving them the Greek Walk. Since the minority groups did not want the Greek Walk at first, the groups still have not paid for its construction, Johnson said.

The new Greek Walk will begin at the corner of Faucette Drive and Dan Allen Drive because of its proximity to Fraternity Court. The university plans to replace all campus sidewalks with bricks and this project sped up the renovation of this particular area.

The Greek Walk letters will be formed with white bricks against red ones. Chapters have already been involved by contributing for the payment of the more expensive white bricks. According to Perry, the groups split the $600 expense.

Representatives from the Greek organizations will have an opportunity to be present when the last brick is put in place.

If the weather permits, one name will be completed daily. A ceremony and a memoranda are planned to be held at the location when the letters of all participating chapters are completed.

ACLU spokesman says labels are not exact

By Mark Hollifield
Staff Writer

Left and right do not adequately describe the complex relationship between political philosophies in the United States, said an N.C. State political science professor.

Abraham Holtzman, a spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union, said the terms originally described the way parties in the French Parliament are seated, from the anarchist on the far left to the king or his representative on the right, during Thursday's Residential Scholars forum.

Although, liberal and conservative are better labels,

Holtzman said, they are not exact since one may be liberal on one issue but conservative on another.

Holtzman said economically, both sides agree capitalism is the best system, but they disagree on the extent to which government should intervene.

He said liberals feel that government should be used to "modify and regulate the system to protect the individual from the excesses of the system" while conservatives feel "capitalism works best if left alone," and that government regulation decreases the incentive to produce at full capacity.

On social issues, the liberal feels government should keep out of issues of privacy such as abortion pornography and sex education, Holtzman said. He went on to say the individual should be left alone unless he is hurting someone else. Conservatives, he said, "tend to be afraid of people" and feel that government needs to protect people from their basic drives.

Holtzman said liberals tend to use the federal government much more than conservatives, who favor a smaller, more decentralized approach to governing.

A debate between Holtzman and Reverend Cou Privette, a member of the state legislature and Executive Director of the Christian Action League, was originally scheduled but was cancelled because Privette was unable to attend.

Diamonders ace season's first test

By Bruce Winkworth
Associate Editor

By all rights, this weekend should have been the first real test for State's baseball team.

Judging by the Wolfpack's 53 win Saturday at Coastal Carolina and yesterday's 17-1 blowout of East Carolina, the first test may be yet to come.

"If this was their first test, I'd say they responded very well," Pirate head coach Gary Overton said. "N.C. State swung the bats very well today, and I'd say that's just about the crux of the game. We didn't get a very well pitched game, but I'd say most of the reason for that was the way State swung the bat. We just caught a hot team."

Hot isn't the word for it. The Wolfpack is on fire. Counting the 17 runs and 20 hits yesterday, State has scored 55 runs and rapped out 62 hits in its last four games, running its record to 11-1.

The pitching hasn't been too shabby, either. Over the same four-game span, State pitchers have allowed just seven runs, six earned runs and 26 hits. State freshman Brian Bark scattered three hits and seven walks over six innings Sunday to pick up his first win of the season and lower his ERA to 0.75.

"I wasn't happy with the way I threw," Bark said. "I wasn't getting my curve over, and I didn't have good rhythm because I missed my last start. I feel like if you keep throwing, you'll throw strikes, and missing a turn hurt my rhythm."

Bark pitched out of trouble in the top of the second, third and sixth, allowing five runners to reach scoring position, but stranding them all. Mark Wendel and Brad Rhodes mopped up the last three innings.

Meanwhile, the Wolfpack offense pushed four runs over the plate in the second, two more in the third and five in the fourth to take the pressure off Bark.

"The way the team is hitting, you know you're going to win," said Bark, who collected a pair of singles while serving as designated hitter. "Everybody in the lineup can hit for average and power."

The results of Sunday's game would seem to back Bark's claim. All nine starters hit safely in the game, all but third baseman Bryn Kosco scored and all but catcher Bobby Russell had at least one RBI.

Prior to Saturday's trip to Coastal Carolina, four Wolfpack players — Bark, Bill Klenoshek, Mark Withers and Turtle Zaub — were hitting over .400, and the only regulars under .300 were shortstop Alex Wallace and second baseman Scott Davis, both proven hitters.

"We're very happy with our start," State head coach Sam Esposito said. "We've got three new faces in the lineup, three more who've changed position and three freshmen in the starting rotation. We're scoring some runs, and the kid pitchers are all keeping us in the game."

The three freshman starter — Bark, Preston Woods and Chris Woodfin — have combined with sophomore Jeff Hartscock to give State a strong rotation, easing the sting of losing lefthander Paul Grossman, who is out for the season with a shoulder injury.

All four starters are unbeaten and have earned run averages of less than 2.00. Bark, Woods and Hartscock each have ERAs of less than 1.00.

All three rookies started this weekend, and only Woodfin failed to earn a win, leaving in the sixth against Coastal Carolina with the score tied at 3-3. Larry Price relieved and picked up the win, his second of the year.

Friday, Woods allowed just one run and three hits over eight innings to lead the Pack to a 19-1 rout of George Mason.

Those three are still in a stage where they're adjusting from high school to college ball," Esposito said. "The hitters in college aren't helping them out by swinging at bad pitches like they do in high school. That's why they're all having to pitch from behind in the count. We hope that this early season experience will pay off for them later in the season."

Still looking for a fifth starter, Esposito will start junior Bud Loving Monday at 3 p.m. against Richmond at Doak Field. Loving was 7-1 as a freshman in 1984 before missing most of the last two years with a shoulder injury.

Gators 'use' Wolfpack in NCAA opener

"From here up, we just lost control of the basketball game," Valvano said making a slashing movement across his throat. "Up to that point we were playing well. I think it was a case of us just self-destructing."

The slim crowd of 12,072 in the cavernous and boring Carrier Dome — seating capacity 33,000 — yawned as Florida reeled off 17 straight points, leaving the State team scratching its head.

A pair of scoring runs started in State's favor, as the Pack went up by nine with 12:24 remaining on a turnaround shot by sophomore center Charles Shackelford.

State outscored the Gators 11-1 to gain the lead — all in a little over 60 seconds. But State's Vinny Del Negro said the Wolfpack may have made its advance too soon.

"It took a lot out of us to get the score up," said Del Negro, who scored 12 points in the effort. "Then we made some mistakes and they got it (the game) back right where they wanted it. But I think if we made that with about five minutes, six minutes left, it could have been a different outcome."

Florida called timeout with 12:17 left and the Wolfpack bench was all smiles. And, in fact, right where it wanted to be.

"We had done exactly what we had set out to do," Valvano said. "In the first half we wanted to keep the game in the 20s to low 30s, and it was 33-30 at the half. We came in the locker room at halftime and said 'Now we are going to take control of the game.'"

Instead, the Wolfpack had merely lit the fuse and fizzled out. I never expected us to self-destruct as we did," Valvano said. "We gave it to them, in effect, three or four times."

Del Negro said: "We threw the ball all over the court and made some key mistakes, and they capitalized on them."

Exactly 0:54 after State was ahead 49-40, the Gators took the lead on Andrew Moten's three-point play. Florida never gave up the lead, and State just couldn't stop the M&M Boys — Moten and teammate Vernon Maxwell — in the end.

Maxwell, who was playing despite reports that he might miss the game because of an injured knee, led all scorers with 28 points. He hit only 6 of 16 from the field, but hit 14 free throws on the day at crucial times to stop any chance of a State rally.

"My knee was tender," said Maxwell, who entered the game as the Gators' top scorer, averaging 21.3 points a game. "I was kind of afraid at first, but then it felt OK."

"He didn't look too injured to me," Del Negro said.

4 women tankers travel to NCAA's

Competing in the 400 and 800 freestyle team relays, Christina MacMillan, Melinda Moxin, Maya Codelli and Susan Butcher will represent State at the NCAA Women's Swimming Championships March 19-21 in Indianapolis, Ind.

At the ACC Championships this year, MacMillan, Moxin, Codelli and Butcher qualified in the 400 freestyle relay with an impressive time of 3:28.0.

In the 800 freestyle relay, their time of 7:31.2 was also good enough to qualify them for the NCAA Championships.

"I'm looking for our girls to swim for solid legs," Coach Don Easterling said. "I believe in the 400 we will be looking for a time of 3:26, and in the 800 we are hoping for a time of 7:27 or 7:28. The girls have been practicing very hard, and they stayed over spring break to train every day."

The women will leave today for the championships, Tuesday night and Wednesday, before Thursday's competition, will allow for the swimming of warm-ups.

MacMillan and Codelli are two freshmen members of the relay teams. MacMillan is from Southfield, Michigan, and swam at Male High School.

The oldest member of the relay team is Susan Butcher, a junior from Kloof Natal, South Africa. She attended St. Mary's High School. "Susan is swimming very well," Easterling said. "She should go about 1:49 in the 800 relay. Melinda has improved a lot over the course of the season. All four girls have showed determination in making the NCAA's."

Easterling added that he has enjoyed working with the women's team and he has an optimistic outlook for next year's squad.

The men's season is finished, but three Wolfpack swimmers have qualified for the U.S. Senior Championships in Boca Raton, Florida.

Dan Tripps, a freshman, has qualified in the 50 freestyle.

Chuck Neimeyer, a sophomore from Gastonia, N.C., qualified for the 100 fly. Neimeyer was the lone Wolfpacker to finish first in an event at the ACC Championships.

Steve Bradshaw, a freshman from Hudson, Ohio, also qualified.

Dave Cowell, a graduate assistant to Easterling, will also be competing in the U.S. Championships. Cowell was an all-America swimmer for Ohio State, and he served as an alternate on the 1984 Olympic team.

Easterling praised the efforts of all the men who worked hard to qualify. He feels the men's team will be tough next year, in part because all the men should return.

The men's tennis team will begin the tougher part of their season this week. The Wolfpack will be playing three of the toughest teams on its schedule, including one ACC team.

State, now 5-5 overall for the season, will be hosting the Seminoles of Florida State at 2 p.m. Monday.

"The Seminoles are not ranked in the nation, but they are a tough team," coach Crawford Henry said.

Lars Svensson and Krister Larzon, who are both 1.0 in the conference, will lead State Tuesday as they face the Tar Heels of North Carolina. Although Svensson and Larzon are undefeated in the conference, the Pack will be looking for their first win the conference as a team.

Finally, to round out the week, State will host Hampton University on Friday at 1:30.

The women will also be in action this week as they travel to Guilford College. The Pack, now 4-3 overall, will be lead into action by Katie Fleming and Mary Lloyd Hodges.

State's gymnastics team, paced by all-round winner Portia Propst, defeated Radford, 175-55-169.50, Friday in Carmichael Gymnasium.

The Wolfpack had the top three all-around finishers with Leah Ranney and Cheri Tester closely behind Propst, who collected 35.55 points though she did not win any single event.

Ranney, who won a parallel bars with a 9.40, garnered 35.15 points overall, and Tester grabbed 34.95 points.

Tester tied with Radford's Melissa Fyfe for the top place in the vault with a score of 8.80.

State's Jennifer McFarlane and Angela Fontana also won events in the meet.

State hosts James Madison this Friday in the season's next-to-last meet. The event gets underway at 7 p.m. in Carmichael Gymnasium.

Women survive NCAA's first round

guard Karen Hargadon's 12.

State, which had been eliminated from the NCAA for the past three years in an opening round game, overcame an incredible shooting performance as well as the Cats hitting 60.4 percent from the floor. The Wolfpack nailed in 15 of 26 shots in both halves for a 57.7 percentage.

Shooting percentage was not the only indication of the closeness of the game and the two teams. The Cats got the rebounding edge, 27-25. Turnovers were dead even at 12 apiece. Even steals (6-5 Cats) and assists (21-20 Cats) were neck-and-neck throughout the game.

Villanova, after reaching the regional finals last year in its first NCAA appearance, exits after its first game this year, finishing the year with a 27-4 record.

The Pack has an even 2-2 record against the Scarlet Knights but has never faced them in tournament play. Rutgers is led by all-America Sue Wicks, who scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds against Duke Saturday.

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activity and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the marketplace through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is bleak.

Too much commitment?

Jim Valvano, N.C. State's head basketball coach and athletics director, has helped the university a great deal.

Valvano has given us two ACC championships and a national championship in just seven years. But more than that, he is a witty, colorful figure known virtually across the nation.

When people think of NCSU, they think of Jim Valvano. Out west, people think all NCSU students have big noses and eat pasta.

This Valvano-NCSU relationship has both positive and negative ramifications.

Valvano's 1983 rolick through the NCAA tournament led to a dramatic increase in freshman applications. Students saw NCSU as an exciting place to attend school, and NCSU has improved because of it.

On the other hand, many people feel Valvano might be abusing his power.

Over the years, Valvano has endorsed a multitude of products.

Each endorsement, either subtly or directly, involves NCSU. The latest example, of course, is the automobile commercial filmed in Reynolds Coliseum. The dealership apparently rented Reynolds', with Valvano's approval, for a mere $75.

Another example is the senior dinner. The seniors who managed to get a seat found a head coach speaking in front of a huge Ronzoni sign.

Finally, in virtually every commercial Valvano appears in he mentions NCSU, the basketball team or wears an NCSU sweatshirt.

As athletics director, Valvano ranks high in the NCSU administration. As unfair as it may be, anytime Valvano appears in public, be it a basketball game, press conference or advertisement, he is representing the university.

Maybe the time has arrived for Valvano to step back and evaluate his product endorsements.

Come on and Feed Raleigh

Feed Raleigh.

That's the goal of the second annual student government-sponsored Feed Raleigh drive.

Last year's drive was a roaring success, with 7 1/2 tons of canned food collected and donated to the Food Bank of North Carolina. Program coordinator Rhonda Winstead hopes to double that amount in this year's drive.

The Food Bank, a non-profit food storage and distribution center, will distribute this year's collection to various agencies throughout Raleigh.

We congratulate Winstead's and student government's ability to combine fun with the serious task of eradicating hunger in Raleigh.

The fun part will be the event itself. This year's Feed Raleigh will be headquartered in the East Coliseum Lot. Campus groups will start registering at 9:30 a.m. Food collection begins at 10 a.m. The group which collects the most cans per group member will be awarded a trophy by Raleigh mayor Avery Upchurch at the end of the day. This will be followed by a pizza party for all workers sponsored by Domino's Pizza and WRAL-FM.

Furthermore, a campus-wide Fast for the Hungry will be sponsored on Thursday by University Dining. Students on the meal plan may select one Thursday meal to be donated to the Food Bank.

The serious part is the grim spectre of hunger overshadowing North Carolina, and indeed, the world.

Many people scoff at hunger and poverty, claiming that victims of both should "get a job." The simple fact that 415 thousand children in North Carolina alone live below the poverty line invalidates this notion.

Is a 5-year old kid really expected to get a job?

Furthermore, between 1981 and 1983, the number of N.C. families living below the poverty line rose 42 percent.

So hunger is definitely a serious problem — a problem you can do something about. Come on out Saturday and help Feed Raleigh.

Keep up the good work, Amerika

Dear Americans,

Thank you so much for your recent TV series Amerika. It pleases me greatly to see people in the United States finding ways of rationalizing a Soviet takeover. Your series gave all of us here at the Kremlin a lot of yuks.

But the U.S. TV networks did not have to show a series to tell us that you people are apathetic toward communism. It is evident every day in the actions of the American people. There are always a few self-pious capitalist pigs who try to convince everyone that Marxism is wrong, but they can't pull the iron curtain over our eyes. We can see all too clearly that most Americans don't care — they just won't say anything because the neighbors might start spreading nasty rumors.

Take, for example, this Iran-Contra deal. You, the U.S. public, feel ever-so-comfortable in chastising your president over such a relatively small deal. Since this "scandal" was uncovered, there has been a flurry of resignations and replacement traffic around the White House. There is even a joke going around the politburo about Reagan installing revolving doors in the cabinet offices (heh, heh).

The point is, most Americans probably accept the fact that Reagan didn't know all the details of the affair, but are just foaming at the mouth to get him in trouble. What other conclusion could a guy like me make, except that all

LEE CREIGHTON

Opinion Columnist

Americans want a change. How about moving the White House here to Moscow? I can assure you that I will not use your arms to free Amerikan hostages. I promise.

The fact is, less than half of the registered Amerikan voters even bother to show up at the polls on election day. (This percentage does not include Amerikans who are eligible to register, but don't. Many unregistered voters claim that they haven't registered to avoid jury duty. I have a good solution for that problem; we don't have juries here.)

We will let you register and vote, though. Personally, I don't care what party you belong to, as long as it's the Communist Party. You won't even have to worry about making choices within the party. We only give you one candidate. Now I ask you, isn't that much easier than having to make choices in both a primary and general election?

So you see that a Soviet lifestyle has no drawbacks. We even wipe out that nasty idea of aristocracy. Here in our country, everyone has exactly the same thing. You are guaranteed to have exactly the same stuff as your neighbor. Never mind the fact that the things you have in common are that you have nothing and your neighbor has nothing. We feel that equality is the best way to go — and everyone has equal chance to have equally nothing. If, however, have a car and a nice apartment overlooking Red Square. That's only because I am more equal than everyone else.

Ask anyone how nice we are. Ask the Afghan people. Oh, yes. I'm trying to torture all of them. Ask the Contras. Oh, I forgot — I'm trying to kill all of them. Well, you could ask Lech Walensa, except I'm trying to put him in prison. I know — ask your President Reagan. No, no, you can't do that — you Amerikans are too busy trying to put him in prison. Oh well, I guess you will have to take my word for it. I wouldn't lie to you. Honest.

So my best advice to you is to keep on going the way you are going. Ridicule a president who is trying to keep me away (although I can't imagine why). Remain at home when it's time to vote. Involve yourself in South Africa when you could do them more good by staying out of it all. Yes, keep on doing things that only Amerikans can do, and rest assured that you have my full approval on all of it.

I'm already the dictator over most of the world, and someday I hope I can be yours, too.

Sincerely Yours
Mikhail Gorbachev

Nighttime solicitors invade resident privacy

I've had it! Last Thursday at 11:30 p.m. some pledging fraternity members came through Carroll dorm trying to solicit canned food or money donations.

First of all, with the visitation policy, how did these guys get in without an escort?

Secondly, where do they get off going around banging on girls' doors at that time of night? Some of us have early Friday classes and are in bed at that time.

This is not the first time this has happened, but it had better be the last. Last time one young man actually went into the suite bathroom to ask my roommate for money. The next time this happens at that time of night Public Safety gets called.

So guys — this is your only warning — do not solicit in Carroll again or you'll be explaining yourselves to Public Safety.

I hope that other residence hall residents will take a firm stand and prevent these people from invading our night-time privacy. I endured the shouts from outside Carroll at night — I will not endure banging on my door. I would like to see N.C. State's administration put a halt to this.

Go to Carter-Finley if you want to cry 'wolf'

In response to Technician's lead story on Friday about Jim Valvano, I would like to know why Technician wants to blow a whistle at our own head basketball coach. This, to me, seems like a Lennie Wirtz call.

Furthermore, when I read the article in Thursday's News and Observer, I assumed the journalist was a UNC graduate. Who else would want to cry "wolf" at tournament time, other than the opposition?

According to the News and Observer article, Valvano received no compensation for the commercial. Since South Square Hyundai is an avid supporter of N.C. State athletics and no lights or labor from coliseum staff was required; seventy-five dollars seems like a reasonable fee (if not too much) for one hour at Reynolds. Jim Valvano has done wonders for NCSU's public relations, not to mention his accomplishments on the basketball court. If I am not mistaken, Valvano is a lifetime Wolfpack club member at a contribution of a mere $100,000. Valvano's active involvement in university activities shows me that he really does care for the welfare of NCSU.

Therefore, if Technician wants to blow a whistle, go out to Carter-Finley so you will not bother anyone.

Area colleges to collect cans for Feed Raleigh Saturday

By Patrice Jones
Staff Writer

Every day the United States throws away enough food to fill a baseball stadium 12 feet deep.

It's a gripping thought, and unfortunately, hunger continues. In North Carolina alone, 415 thousand children live below the poverty line, and the number of N.C. families living at that level rose 42 percent between 1981 and 1983.

For the cost of two nuclear aircraft carriers, hunger could be eliminated from the face of America. Even students who are a little short on cash can assist hungry and poverty-stricken Raleigh residents as student government sponsors the second annual Feed Raleigh canned food drive this Saturday.

Project coordinator Rhonda Winstead explained that participants will be divided into competing groups for the day. "A big section of Raleigh is given to groups with a large amount of people and a smaller section is given to smaller groups," said Winstead.

After a group contacts all houses in its area, it returns to Feed Raleigh headquarters in the East Coliseum lot to be assigned another area.

To determine the winning group, cans are divided by the number of people in a group. If a group that has 10 members collects 100 cans, that is counted as 10 cans per person.

Each group will place its cans in a designated area to be counted hourly by an official counter. Amounts collected will be put on a tabulating board to keep each group aware of how many cans they need to win.

The winning group will receive a cup from Raleigh mayor Avery Upchurch at the end of the day.

Many of last year's participants are looking forward to this year's event. Karla Hauersperger of the N.C. State Student Alumni Association said, "We are interested in doing community work. This (Feed Raleigh) being brought to our attention, we decided to become involved with doing something for both the university and community. We came in third last year, and we hope to do as well this year."

Various campus organizations are signed up, including several fraternities and sororities, the Residential Scholars Program and the School of Textiles.

Dan Potts, activities chairman of Delta Sigma Phi, said his fraternity became involved "to help out the needy people of Raleigh and to establish a good name for the fraternity. We're service-oriented and we like to do stuff for the community."

State students will be joined by participants from Meredith, Shaw, St. Mary's and Pearce.

"The best thing (about Feed Raleigh) is that there are so many schools involved... really working together and supporting each other," said Winstead.

Registration for campus groups will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Can collection begins at 10 a.m., and the awards ceremony takes place at 4:30 p.m. At 4:45 p.m., major sponsors WRAL-FM and Domino's Pizza will provide a pizza party for all workers.

All food cans will be donated to the Food Bank of North Carolina, a non-profit food storage and distribution center for charitable agencies across the state.

Food Bank volunteer Marilyn

MacNeely said that the cans will go to agencies throughout Raleigh. "It will serve a lot of people. We expect (the amount of cans) to be higher this year. Last year it was really incredible for a first time project. The students were really enthusiastic," she said.

Associated with Feed Raleigh is a campus-wide Fast for the Hungry, which will be held on Thursday in cooperation with University Dining.

"The main point (of the Fast) is to get support (for Feed Raleigh). We're trying to encourage people to fast for a day to understand what real hunger is like," said Winstead. "If you had that feeling every day, you couldn't study, you couldn't be a productive person. For an incredible number of children, their only meal is the one they get at school."

Sign-up for the fast will be today in the Student Center lobby, and will consist of specifying the meal on Thursday that is to be donated.

Last year, Feed Raleigh collected over 7 1/2 tons of food, and Winstead hopes to double that total this year. "I think everyone knows better what they are doing this year, and we are more organized."

Irish eyes will be smiling Tuesday at Stewart

By Joe Corey
Entertainment Editor

One of the best ways to celebrate the St. Patrick's Day holiday is with a wee bit of the Irish music.

Mike Cross, one of the area's best Irish fiddle players and a man who really knows how to throw a good jig, will play at Stewart Theatre Tuesday at 8 p.m.

In past years, Cross has played UNC-Chapel Hill on St. Patrick's Day.

Stewart Theatre is one of Cross's favorite places to play.

"You feel like you're in the middle of a crowd of people," Cross said in a past interview. "A lot of times when you're on stage, you feel separated from the crowd. You feel like you're reaching across a chasm. At Stewart Theatre, you have a feeling that you've walked into a room full of your friends. Now that's a good feeling, and it makes you feel more relaxed about what you're doing. You think you're singing for some friends who dropped by."

Although he started out playing Delta Blues and country folk, the past few years have lead Cross into an exploration of traditional Irish music. When Cross plays Irish music on the fiddle in concert, he plays the soft, swooning pieces along with the robust, hearty tavern tunes.

Cross grew up in the western part of North Carolina and went to school at UNC-CH. While a student, he learned how to play the guitar.

During a snowstorm Cross was sleeping at a friend's apartment when he awoke in the middle of the night to a "crazy drunken" man who started to play his guitar and sing very loudly.

"When he finally noticed me, he said, 'My name's Larry Reynolds. What's yours?' Then he said, 'You know it's more fun to play.' He then proceeded to manipulate my fingers as he showed me some chords."

"After that began my floating apprenticeship as I watched every guitarist I could see perform."

Cross has released seven albums since his debut Child Prodigy in 1976. His last album, Solo at Midnight, was released early last year and received critical acclaim.

cording, he prefers performing live.

A recent tour took Cross to playing in New York City at Folk City and in Boston at Symphony Hall.

Cross played on National Public Radio's (NPR) top rated show The Prairie Home Companion hosted by Garrison Keillor.

"I did the show when I was doing a tour of some schools in Minnesota a few years ago. It was back when the show was broadcasted only in the Midwest. Just a few months later, the show was nationally syndicated by NPR and becoming a national success," Cross said.

Tickets for Cross' Tuesday night concert are available at the Student Center box office and cost $7 for NCSU students and $9 for the general public. All tickets purchased at the door are $11.

Mike Cross will be giving one of his dynamic St. Patrick's Day concerts Tuesday night at Stewart Theatre.

In Search Of A Pot-Of-Gold

The Legend

To capture a leprechaun forces the little fellow to reveal the location of his secret treasure.

The Problem

Verified sightings of leprechauns on the N.C. State campus are few and far between.

The Solution

Forget the leprechauns! Try for a pot-of-gold from University Dining instead.

The Confession

The pot isn't really filled with gold bullion, but it does contain exquisite chocolate candies and a Diner's Friend account worth $300!

To Enter

Figure out the secret location of our pot-of-gold (it's not really hidden there!) from clues posted in University Dining locations March 9-13 and March 16. Clues will be posted twice daily throughout the contest. When you think you know the correct location, use the official contest forms found in all University Dining locations to enter and deposit your answers in the specially marked boxes.
