Writers to hold Sci-Fi forum

Special to Technician

Eighteen science fiction writers from across the U.S. will hold a forum on writing and publishing Science Fiction at N.C. State on Thursday, August 6.

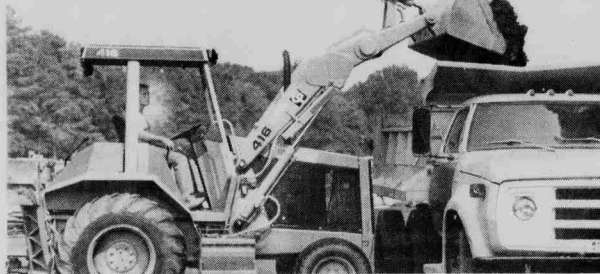

The forum, sponsored by the NCSU English Department in connection with the third annual Sycamore Hill Writers Conference, will take place from 8 to 10 p.m. in the Link Lounge of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences. It is free and open to the public.

The topics to be discussed will include "How to Break In," "New Trends in Science Fiction," and "SF and the Visual Media." Among the writers participating will be Orson Scott Card, whose Ender's Game and Speaker for the Dead have won the last two Nebula Awards given by the Science Fiction Writers of America for best novel of the year. Former Nebula Award winners Nancy Kessel, Michael Bishop, and John Kessel will also participate, as will Michael Cassutt, story editor for the ABC television series Max Headroom.

The Sycamore Hill Conference is a yearly, week-long workshop where professional writers get together to critique works in progress and work on their approaches to it.

"Writers spend most of their time in isolation," said Mark Van Name, local writer and co-organizer of the workshop with Kessel. "Sycamore Hill provides an atmosphere where professional writers can both bang heads together and support each other in the difficult business of writing good fiction."

Accident kills student

While working on a summer job, Allan Henry Heller, a sophomore in PAMS, died when his truck collided headon with a dumptruck on Hwy 1 North in Frnakin County July 28.

While attending N.C. State, Heller was a Caldwell scholar, a member of the Fellows Program, a Judicial Board representative and a feature writer for Technician.

Heller graduated from Millbrook

Highschool in 1986 where he was a member of the National Honor Society and drummer for the band. He also became first chair in the All State High School Band. He attended Temple Beth Or.

In his spare time, Heller played drums for Billy Warden and the Floating Children.

The driver of the dumptruck was not injured in the accident. No charges were filed.

A Summer Review

Photos by Marc Kawanishi and David Tilley

By Marc Kawanishi
Photo Editor

This summer, pictures taken by the talented Technician staff brought a photojournalistic view of Raleigh, NCSU and the Olympic Festival. The photoediting job included many long, hard hours of processing film, printing pictures in the darkroom, and cropping in and laying out photographs in the production room.

On the glamorous side, our job enabled us to participate in some rather out of the ordinary events that included dining at lavish press receptions and photographing the spectacular athletic feats, as well as the Opening Ceremonies, of the Olympic Festival.

Having the opportunity to photograph some of the incredible moves performed by the young ladies at Cathy Buckley's Champion Cheerleading Camp only highlighted our summer.

A special thanks goes to Scott Rivenbark and Mike Hughes for making the job easier, and to Bob Condron for getting Olympic Festival passes for the staff.

Also, many thanks to the staff photographers: Mike Probst, Chris Mervin, Eddie Gottram, Mike Gaddy, Mark Inman, Mark Rush, John Stauber, and high school interns David Tilley and Steve Joyner.

Culture of 1980s: lonesome?

MEMPHIS — Elvis will have been dead for 10 years on August 16, and America has been culturally stagnant ever since.

Since 1977, nothing new has happened in the arts.

Esquire Magazine declared the end of the 1980s. But the truth is, we are still stuck in the 1970s. Nothing has changed.

What major developments transformed the 1970s to the 1980s? If somebody showed you a picture of people in the street, could you tell if it was taken in 1978 or in 1982?

Almost every other decade in the 20th century had some dividing force of style. But no great change in style has occurred in the '80s.

Everything in fashion is either a revival or a continuation. Someone says that the "James Dean" look is coming back, the psychedelic look is making headway, the suburban fascist of the '50s look is the "in" thing. But where is the look of the '80s?

Music is the same as fashion. No really new sound has popped up since 1977, when The Sex Pistols seemed to mark the death of Rock'n'Roll. Music has yet to go beyond the point it reached in 1977. Except for a new synthesized sound or two that a computer operator discovered, everybody sounds like some 1970s rock icon. How many bands are accused of sounding like Led Zeppelin in Rolling Stone? Too many.

Disco is not dead. Whitney Houston is hitting it big with the stuff that Donna Summer used to strut. The difference is that it's called "Dance Music," but they can still flash strobes and switch on the lighted disco floors. Why, one of the big hits this summer was that disco classic "Funky Town," done by an alleged progressive-rock band from Australia. Is this the progress that the '80s have given us?

Writing has suffered since 1977. How many truly great novels have emerged from this decade? Who is going to care about Lake Woebegone in 20 years? Texas, I'll Take Manhattan, Hollywood Wives, Ellen Foster and Whirlwind will be the main part of pulp insulation in five years. Steven King and too many of the other writers reaping big bucks on the best-seller lists are shucking out fodder for the beach and hospital beds.

Television is still using the same old formulas for their shows. Every show on television can easily be compared to some show made before 1977. Land of the Lost is on Saturday morning TV, and the kids think it's new.

The Village Voice declared that the '80s are in fact the '50s seen through drugs. All this must stop.

It is time that we make progress and stop wallowing in this stagnant mudhole.

Our culture should not die with Elvis. It should thrive because of his death.

We must escape the '70s before the '90s show up.

LAS VEGAS — How should August 16 be commemorated?

The first thing that must be avoided is dressing like Elvis. It was all right for him to dress like that, because he was the King. But you will look goofy.

Also, avoid any Elvis parades. Elvis should not be treated with the same crass commercialism as the Statue of Liberty and the Constitution.

But if you want to be a pilgrim, the two main Elvis meccas are Las Vegas and Graceland. Pack up your Duster and go West.

Graceland will be packed with entertainers, fighting it out with the loyal followers for a good spot in line to pay homage to the King. This could turn into an ugly scene as the hour of his passing gets closer and the line to the bathroom gets longer.

If in Las Vegas, you should take in a salute to the King. Sure it isn't the real thing. But impersonation is the highest tribute, unless one tries to cash checks in your name.

The best way to pay tribute to the King is to dim the lights, sit back on a crushed velvet sofa with the one you love, put a copy of "Blue Hawaii" on the turntable, eat a box of jelly doughnuts from Krispy Kreme, and shoot your television with a good handgun.

He would have wanted it that way.

And remember to have a safe Elvis Day. You wouldn't want to miss the 20th anniversary.

CCM artists fight against negative images

When someone is a Contemporary Christian Music artist, how do they explain to their neighbors what their profession is?

"It's not like telling them that you're a doctor or a salesman," says Jayne Farrell of the singing duo Farrell and Farrell. "It's, 'Well, I sing Christian music. But it's not what you think!'"

Jayne Farrell and her husband, Bob, record and perform danceable techno-pop music. The two met in high school, fell in love, and have been singing together ever since. Their latest album, Manifesto, released last fall, was their seventh since 1977.

Many CCM artists have been accused lately of "watering down" the message in their songs in the hopes of subsequently getting airplay on secular radio. The lyrics of Farrell and Farrell's music, however, have remained uncompromised even as their music has over the years become more contemporary.

"It's not worth it for us to continue doing music like this if there's no 'meat' in it," Jayne said in an interview after a June show in Va. Beach. "If people can't tell what we're talking about."

"I've always preferred the direct approach," added her husband.

The two claim to have a message for both Christians and non-Christians.

"We're looking for Christians to really be challenged and motivated to do a better work," explains Bob. "As for non-believers, I want there to be enough in our music for them to latch onto God."

One of the unique qualities about Farrell and Farrell is that on each of their last few albums they have incorporated unusual sound effects into their songs. The reason?

"There are some things you can't say in a serious mode," Jayne says. "If you say them in a finger-pointing, serious, preachy, slow song, the message won't come across. We can do a song like 'People In a Box' and put the weird noises in there, however, and people will listen to the message."

'People In a Box' is a song from Jump To Conclusions, their 1985 release, that talks about watching too much television.

"People in a box,"

TV personalities. They show me how to live In distinctive generalities

People in a box

How do I turn away

How much do I learn

From people in a box?"

Farrell and Farrell's humor is matched by their seriousness.

"I think that every album that we do should have a reminder about the cross and a reminder about the return of Christ," says Bob.

"Right now," Jayne says,

"because of all the negative things that are going on concerning Christianity, it's a black eye to all of us as believers in Jesus Christ. We get lumped in whether we're involved or not. All of a sudden, we're all from Charlotte, North Carolina."

"I don't think it's a black eye to Jesus' thought," she continues. "I think He can take care of Himself. God allows everything that happens to happen, and we have to believe that everything works out toward His glory."

School is out, you may leave

We did it. We made it through the summer. We made it through ten weeks of studying. We made it through the hypocrisy of taking a year's worth of classes in only ten weeks. We made it through those classes that we damn well needed but didn't have the guts to sit through for a full semester. We got hot in the sun and hot in our rooms and we spent the afternoons listening to Ollie North and all the others and still the government seems to roll along. Jim and Tammy and Oral Roberts and Jerry Falwell were there for comic relief and we made it through their pleas of innocence and their pleas for more money. And religion on television, well, that seems to still be rolling along too. We lost a few parking places to those involved in the Olympic Festival, but we never begrudged the athletes their space. We're not exactly sure what those Olympics were all about, but hey, the games made money for the sponsors so something American must have happened.

So it's all over now. It's all over except for the pleading and the crying and the fact that we just gotta get a "C" in that obscure course so the GPA won't fall too far or so that we can grab our diplomas and hit the streets looking for real jobs. Or so that we can come back here in the fall and start the whole process all over again.

We've had our share of fun in these offices providing you with news and reading material this summer. At the very least, we hope we have offered some amount of diversion while waiting for classes to begin on Wednesday mornings.

This staff is going to take a few weeks off before the fall semester, but we'll be back in late August. Now everybody has about three weeks to concern themselves with anything but books - enjoy the time while it lasts.

Weather

Continued hot and partying as summer school gets out. Dog day summer doldrums set in as students return to school August 24, the day of our next publication. Have a nice break (or at least what there is of one). See you in the fall.

Elvis Youth, still at large

There is something evil going on on this campus and it must be stopped.

I remember that during the last campaign for Student Body President, one of the candidates claimed that the ghost of Elvis spoke to him!

This in itself is a frightening fact. But if you looked deep into the posters that this candidate pasted up all over campus, a horrifying truth was revealed.

The signs read, "Paid for by Elvis Youth."

Most everybody who noticed these signs failed to realize this fact and could only see the goofy slogans about masturbation and turning the university into a slaughterhouse.

But these threats did not cause me as many nightmares as the "Paid for by Elvis Youth."

I wanted to know what type of hoodlums these Elvis Youths were. I feared that they were just like those kids in California who murdered girlfriends and homosexuals. I feared that this could spoil Raleigh's image as a real estate developer's wet dream.

I was recently shown the cover of the soundtrack of Clockwork Orange and I could just see these Elvis Youths raping and burning this fair city until it looked like some slum, instead of the planned exclusive community our Lord intended it to be.

I was watching professional wrestling when this one wrestler came on dressed like Elvis and called himself the Honky Tonk

Joe Pope

Man. He proceeded to smash an acoustic guitar over the head of a good wrestler.

I had always imagined the force of Elvis to be good. But now I have seen Elvis used for an evil purpose.

Then I saw in a commercial for my favorite newspaper, The National Enquirer, that the ghost of Elvis calls Wayne Newton all the time. There was something evil in this piece of information. Something sinister, staring out from behind this shroud of a story.

I thought of the Elvis Youth and wondered if they could be using Elvis for an evil purpose.

The 10th anniversary of Elvis' death is coming and I am scared of what these Elvis Youths are planning to do to celebrate.

I doubt they will settle for sitting around eating cake, drinking punch and listening to "Heartbreak Hotel."

I see something evil coming from them on the night of August 16.

They might not settle for anything less than a blood sacrifice in Elvis' name!

I can see a night of unrepented Sodom and Gomorrah activity coming from Elvis Youth and we must stop them!

I have been watching MTV, trying to spot these Elvis

Youths in certain videos. But MTV refuses to show these videos, and when called up, they refused to admit any knowledge on the subject.

I figured that it would be easy to spot Elvis Youths, thinking that they must dress like Elvis, wear long sideburns, and move their hips to any music.

But the Elvis Youths only look like Elvis on special occasions.

I found out that Mojo Nixon is an Elvis Youth. In an interview, he wanted the ghost of Elvis to possess his body while on what used to be the Joan Rivers show.

This alleged entertainer who sings songs about hating banks, finding Jesus in McDonalds and raping former MTV VJs will be playing the Cat's Cradle Wednesday night.

This will probably be the best way to find out who these members of Elvis Youth are.

I will be lurking around in my freshly painted Carolina-blue Pinto, trying to get photographs and names of these Elvis Youths so they may be watched for hostile activity on August 16.

I have also seen the slogan "Paid for by Elvis Youth" on posters for the local band The Beatless, who won't be playing any clubs on the day Elvis died. Perhaps they will be playing for some pagan ritual.

Raleigh police must be alert on August 16 to prevent one of those California massacres from happening in our fair city.

Elvis Youth is not a joke. It must be stopped.

A quick test...

Okay guys, what's the most important part of the newspaper?
No, it's not the pictures (sorry Marc)
No, it's not the stories (sorry Xavier)
No, it's not the editorials (sorry Michael)
No, it's not the classifieds, either (sorry Kori)

It's the advertisements. And Technician needs some people very soon for advertising production next semester. If you are interested in this job (which does pay, though it entails work), call Lib Leigh at 737-2029 between the hours of 1 pm to 5 pm weekdays. People are needed, because if there are no advertisements...there's no paper. Really.
