Winter storm cancels Registration/Change Day

Long lines common around campus as students add, drop courses

By Madelyn Rosenberg and Meg Sullivan
News Editors

The blanket of snow that covered North Carolina last week prevented the university from opening the doors of Reynolds Coliseum for Friday's Change Day.

Registration officials said that although the cancellation of Change Day would be an annoyance to students and faculty, the drop/add procedure would continue on in individual departments.

"It's an inconvenience to students, an inconvenience to faculty and an inconvenience to the administration," said Registrar Jim Bundy, "but there's no other way to do it."

The loss of Change Day has one benefit for students, however. Provost Nash Winstead said students will not have to pay late registration fees if they sign up for classes this week.

Bundy said this year marks the first time since he came to the university in 1967 that Change Day has been canceled.

"We've had snow before at this time, but we still had the day," he said.

The university has not always set aside one location for students to drop or add courses. Bundy said the university initiated a Change Day in the mid-1970s for convenience.

"It seemed easier to have all of the departments and students in one place," he said. "We're going back to a system we haven't used in 10 years."

Bundy said many students think they have to make their course changes in the coliseum, but the first two weeks of the semester always have been allotted for students to adjust their schedules in individual departments.

"Students will be doing the same thing they've been doing in the coliseum, except they won't be in the coliseum," Bundy explained. "They'll have to go to the different departments and stand in line."

The department of English had 10 people staffing the registration table and allowed drop/add until 7 p.m. to handle the influx of students this week, said John Bassett, department head.

"It hasn't really been chaotic and the lines aren't that much longer than usual," he said. "We're treating it as if it were (Change Day)."

Kenneth Hanck, head of the chemistry department, said that the drop/add line was unusually long Monday morning. At one point, the line stretched two-thirds of the way around Dabney Hall — but after the rush, registration was running smoothly, he said.

The cancellation of Registration/Change Day made long, boring lines such as this one at Carmichael Gymnasium a common sight around campus.

Departments still operational despite adverse weather

By Meg Sullivan
News Editor

University officials made a concerted effort this week to clear snow and ice from campus streets in preparation for the students' return.

N.C. State was closed after 3 p.m. Thursday, and an adverse weather policy was put into effect for Friday, according to Provost Nash Winstead.

The weather policy requires employees to work only if they can safely reach campus.

But Public Safety was on the job. "The snow's all over (the place)," said Maj. Miles Heckendorn of Public Safety. "But it hasn't deterred our operations."

Heckendorn said about half of Public Safety's cars were set up with chains to keep the officers on the roads.

Staff members responded to "a lot of calls and inquiries," about campus weather conditions, Heckendorn said. "One telecommunicator alone took 131 calls in a twelve-hour period, he said. "We're the first place most people call."

Maj. Larry Liles said Tuesday that there were "normal fender-benders" on campus, but no serious accidents occurred.

Officers responded to over 20 calls in the past five days, mostly utility assists and minor accidents, Heckendorn added.

Although some officers had to be driven to and from work, "we are operating with a full staff," he said.

Two members of Public Safety are not on active duty this week.

"The horses don't go out in this," Heckendorn said. "There's too much possibility of injury. They could break a leg or an ankle."

"The horses are virtually out of service in the sleet and snow."

The students did have to walk through the ice and snow, but Nancy Barham, head nurse at Clark Infirmary, said "we haven't had that many accidents."

In fact, she said, the doctors examined very few, if any, bumps and bruises.

The staffs of NCSU's Division of Transportation and Physical Plant tried to clear campus before classes began, and were at work by 6 a.m. Friday.

"We put in a lot of hours," said Transportation Director Janice Rhodes. "But there are still some areas we have to clear. It was quite a snowfall."

Rhodes said her department has been working with the Physical Plant and private contractors to remove snow from streets and parking areas. "We do not have our own snow removal equipment," she added.

The cold temperatures have prevented the crews from doing some work until mid-morning, Rhodes said. "In the cold temperatures, moving snow is virtually impossible."

The department of Housing and Residence Life managed to get students moved into the dorms with few problems despite the weather, according to director Cynthia Bonner.

"In general, it's been fairly smooth," she said. "Of course trudging through the snow wasn't pleasant."

Bonner said that about 150 students moved into the dorms for the first time and had to battle the snow with all of their belongings.

"We had to open the dorms Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning so students could beat the storm, and we extended our hours," Bonner said.

The housing department also received "a lot of phone calls," from students who needed an area weather report, she added.

Emerging Issues Forum

Petersen, Volcker head list of speakers at economic forum

By Madelyn Rosenberg
Executive News Editor

The chief of the Ford Motor Co. and the former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board will head the list of speakers at N.C. State's third annual Emerging Issues Forum. But some student leaders will miss hearing Donald Petersen and Paul Volcker speak at the event, which falls near the end of spring break.

"We're really very sorry about the timing of the event," said Al Lanier, director of diversity relations. But March 10 and 11 were the only days Petersen could attend.

"That is unfortunate," said Betty Owen, coordinator of the event. "But we had to pick a time when the people and the McKinnon Center were available. Logistics dictate a lot of what we do."

The forum, which is geared mainly toward leaders involved in local industry, government, business and education, will concentrate on the global economy.

"It's really not a student event, but it is an event that involves students," Owen said. "It's just not possible to open the door to all of those people."

Lanier said that last year only 40 to 50 students attended the forum, "but we still feel they added to it."

Owen said she expects to see a substantial number of students at the forum, despite the timing. Many student leaders will be invited to attend, free of the $45 registration charge, she added.

A follow-up program is being planned for NCSU's individual colleges and "we hope the students can get involved with that," Lanier said.

Owen added that the speeches will be video taped and shown to the student body at a later date.

The Stay-Puft Man's coming to NCSU

You're probably looking for another columnist, a certain balding former sports editor.

Well, he graduated. That's right, grabbed the sheepskin, descended the ivory tower, walked the plank on the majestic ship of learning to take the plunge into the stormy seas of the real world. He's put down a stake in bustling Salisbury. No more front-page columns. He's now covering such exotica as pee-wee football, women's church league softball and the athletic program of perennial powerhouse Catawba College (rumor is, they'll replace ECU on next year's football schedule).

As for me? I have the same problem as Bruce Babbit. Most people have never heard of us. And it doesn't bother them. He's the former governor of Arizona, and I'm the former features editor. For three semesters I dealt with more arts-crafts types than you'd find at a tie-dye seminar. I have gradually realized during that time that the features department is on the contact list of every washed-out rock group and obscure film director on earth.

"Hello, is this the features editor?" Oh boy, here we go again.

Student Body President Kevin Howell and Senior Associate Athletic Director Frank Weedon ponder their next move after students attending the N.C. State-Kansas game seized the sideline seats reserved for the public.

Just whose seats are they?

Students, officials clash over seats during game

By Dwan June
Senior Staff Writer

An "unfortunate incident" created pandemonium over winter break when students attending the N.C. State-Kansas basketball game claimed the east side court seats reserved for the general public.

The students were originally restricted to the upper balconies and the end zone areas of Reynolds Coliseum because the seats behind the bench usually available to them were reserved for the public.

Because of the holiday, a smaller crowd was expected and Frank Weedon, senior associate director of athletics, authorized ticket sales, said Box Office Manager Bessie Steele.

Some students were turned away at the door, but later rushed into the coliseum and tried to take over the east side court seats.

Eyewitnesses said Weedon and Public Safety officials made several attempts to remove the students from the seats, but finally allowed them to stay.

Student Body President Kevin Howell said Weedon asked him to help calm the situation.

"My main concern was that they didn't have any riots or fights," Howell said.

Telephone registration

There were no long lines in the math department, said E. Burnston, department head. "Registration was going along very smoothly."

Bundy said he received very few complaints from the faculty about the drop/add process, although he joked that Harris Hall received nearly 250 million phone calls from students concerned about making schedule changes.

"All we've done is answer the phone," he said.

Bundy said the loss of change day will mean five or six thousand students will crowd Harris Hall to process schedule changes before registration ends on Jan. 25.

A new system of telephonic registration will be implemented by next spring at the latest. "We're still questioning whether we'll have it up by this fall," he said.

new Star Trek series feels. People always compare you to the original. At least I don't have to compete with Gary Hart.

Technician had a more difficult time coming back from a long vacation than Hart did. (A note for those of you who don't read us faithfully: there was no paper Monday, and it wasn't due to the snow.) It seems the Athletics Department took all the money they made selling students' seats at the Kansas game, bought up all our office space in the Student Center and opened "Jimmy V's Bargain Emporium." By the time we finished shoveling out all the pink flamingo lawn ornaments and plastic birdbaths, it was too late to publish. Actually, our computer system bought the farm... again. All our copy was obliterated mercilessly and irreversibly. Just think, computers also hold the transcript that lists all your grades at State. Some of you probably wish we'd sell our system to the registrar's office.

Speaking of failures, nobody on the staff could come up with a name for this column as clever as the one we thought of last time. If you suddenly become inspired with a good name, or even a good column idea, bring it up to the offices on the third floor of the Student Center or call me at 737-2411.

There are ideas everywhere. I found one this morning when I made up the bed. It's probably the last time I'll do that this semester, so it was a lucky find. Help me out, and I might even buy you dinner. I pick the place.

Students claim sideline seats

Howell said he told Weedon that the students had a right to the seats, according to the basketball ticket policy. "Students read the policy and behaved according to policy," he said.

The 1987-88 Men's Basketball Policy states that "side court seats in the lower stand will be reserved for students and their guests." The policy was approved by both the Student Senate Athletic Committee and the Athletics department.

Howell said there are presently no plans to revise the basketball policy, but promised Student Government would look into the situation.

But if the policy must be changed, he said the students should be notified well in advance "in order to prevent future conflicts."

"It's over now, but we've got to deal with it so we can deal with it in the future."

Athletics Director Jim Valvano said the university normally holds 4,400 seats for students during general admission games. However, because it was Christmas break, the staff figured many students would not attend the game, and sold more tickets to the public. "We take full responsibility," Valvano said. "We made an error in judgment that won't happen again."

Weedon was in Nashville and could not be reached for comment.

1987: The Year in Review

By Madelyn Rosenberg
Executive News Editor

News Analysis

The new year will be accompanied by many exciting changes on the N.C. State campus. But before we forge into the future, it's time to take a look back at the stories that made 1987 a significant year for the university.

NCSU celebrated its 100th birthday last year, and what better way to observe the anniversary of a land grant institution than by enlarging the campus? The Centennial Campus, located just southwest of downtown Raleigh, added another 900 acres to the existing university property. This land will be developed and will contribute significantly to the university's research facilities in the years to come.

Along with the new campus came a conflict about a road system to access the campus. Centennial Boulevard, which was supposed to run almost through Chancellor Bruce Poulton's back yard, caused a small uproar among neighborhood residents. Alternative plans were also rejected by the Raleigh City Council, which recently decided that an extension of Gorman Street would be a fair compromise and would provide adequate traffic flow.

1987 put an end to an 18-year football series with East Carolina, following a small riot that broke out after ECU's win over NCSU in early September. The goal posts at Carter-Finley stadium were torn down during the melee, which also resulted in the injury of a Public Safety officer. NCSU's Athletics Council called for a one-year moratorium on the game series, and negotiations came to a complete halt last month after N.C. State officials rejected a proposal for home-and-home football dates. ECU Athletic Director David Hart said that if NCSU agreed to a home-and-home series in the future, the doors to the university would be open.

Plus minus grading was also in the spotlight last year, as university administrators and faculty members debated the pros and cons of a new grading system. While some thought the plus/minus option would allow for a more accurate account of students' grades, others thought the system would increase emphasis on grades and lower cumulative GPA's.

The Athletics Department received close scrutiny last year when Reynolds Coliseum underwent internal audits after new reports questioned the coliseum's business dealings. Richard Farrell, business manager of the coliseum, was accused of misusing concert ticket profits during previous years. The audits focused mainly on the areas of fraud, abuse and misuse of state assets.

But the athletic teams fared well last year as both the men and women's basketball team and the baseball team took titles in the ACC tournaments and headed into the NCAA finals.

The men's basketball team won two games in overtime to reach their final contest against arch-rival and regular season champions UNC-Chapel Hill. The Wolfpack prevailed over the Tarheels and made it to the NCAA tournament where the team lost to Florida.

The women's team had an easier time in the tournament, but met Virginia, the regular season champions, in the final game. They downed the Cavaliers, but lost to Villanova in the tourney.

NCSU students elected the first black student body president last year, making strides that were long overdue, according to most students and officials. Howell, a senior from Shelby, took 51.6 in the spring elections, showing changing times and university growth. Howell began NCSU's new century with a businesslike attitude and a determination to fight student apathy. He is an issue oriented president who is not afraid to go to the mat for student concerns.

NCSU concerned itself with black/white relations overseas as it became the first school in the UNC system to vote to divest of its holdings in South Africa. Students rallied, protested and finally cheered as the Board of Trustees voted 9-3 to divest of the university's $1.5 million South African holdings. The act showed the university had moral concern, as well as financial knowledge about the increasingly risky South African investments.

Construction was a common site on the campus in '87 as the workers began a $9.3 million addition to the D.H. Hill Library. Construction crews also replaced about 1,400 dorm windows and renovated the NCSU Bookstore. The Student Services Center, a $1.2 million addition to Harris Hall, also opened last year.

Workers began more than $2.7 million worth of interior renovations to Winston Hall, but its completion may have to be listed in the 1988 highlights. A $4 million research facility was completed on the

Campus Briefs

Financial aid meetings planned

Students needing information on financial aid for the 1988-89 school year must attend meetings at Stewart Theater at the following times: Tuesday Jan. 19, 7 p.m.; Wednesday Jan. 20, 4 p.m.; Thursday Jan. 21, 4 p.m. All necessary financial aid forms will be distributed.

Go for blood in ACC contest

It's a battle for blood in the ACC, and students can help N.C. State gain some ground at the Pi Kappa Phi-Sigma Pi Epsilon blood drive Tuesday. The fraternities hope to collect 100 units between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., and the donations will benefit the Red Cross and NCSU's cause in the 1987-88 ACC Blood Battle.

Pi Kappa Phi will host the drive in their fraternity house at 2401 West Fraternity Court, and the department of transportation has promised not to ticket anyone parking in the area while they give blood.

The fraternities will accept walk-ins, but prefer people to make appointments ahead of time by calling 755-9996.

Committee meets Thursday

The Physical Environment Committee will meet Thursday at 2 p.m. in room 2405 Williams Hall to discuss alternative sites for a Student Center Annex. Harris Field is currently under consideration as a location. Students are urged to attend.

Jan. 25 last day to register

Students have until Jan. 25 to register for classes. Drop/add will continue in individual departments and forms must be turned in to Harris Hall.

Student parking permits sold

All commuter and fringe lot parking stickers were sold by noon Monday, said Janis Rhodes, director of the division of transportation. Spaces on the old Valentine property north of the railroad tracks off Friendly Drive will be available with priority given to students who leased the property last semester. Rhodes will examine the campus parking situation and decide whether other stickers can be made available. If so, students can go to the Division of Transportation each Tuesday starting Jan. 26.

Petersen, Volcker tops forum speakers

Third annual forum to center around global economical situation

The 1987 forum, held in February, attracted a crowd of over 1,500 people. "It was oversubscribed by several hundred people," said Owen, who also coordinated last year's event. "We had to turn several hundred people away."

Owen said she expects this year's forum to attract a similar number of people. "I think it will be equally outstanding."

The event offers a means for the university to show that it is "sensitive to local issues, state-wide and national issues and to bring in speakers that are aware of (economic) problems," Lanier said.

Owen said the forum serves as a "very good public relations technique for this campus. Our goal is to start the ball rolling with conversation and discussion about our situation in the world economy."

"We get people in decision-making positions to talk knowledgeably. A lot happens because we go after people who can make decisions and change things. We want to initiate the change."

Last year's speaker, former General Motors board member and Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, did not charge the university for his services.

Owen said most speakers do not charge much more than travel expenses for their time, which allows the registration fee to remain low. "We don't make money on this," she said. "In fact, both the chancellor and (former governor) Jim Hunt have been adamant about keeping fees low. Most events of this caliber would cost $150."

Owen said that last year, guest speaker David Broder, a journalist for the Washington Post, actually returned his check to the university. "He told us to put it back into the program. That's the kind of response we get from our speakers."

Hunt, who is chairing the forum for the second year in a row, expressed the need for continued discussion on the world economy in programs such as the Emerging Issues Forum. "We need more public debate on these very serious economic issues," he said in a statement to the press.

Petersen and Volcker have "committed themselves to making tough economic decisions" and are therefore appropriate choices for the forum which will focus on taking control of the future," Hunt said.

"These two speakers... will bring us new insights on issues related to money and markets... and on taking control of our economic future."

Petersen, chairman and chief executive officer for the Ford Motor Co., will talk about again making the United States the leading export nation, Hunt said.

"Already he has helped make Ford the most profitable automotive company in the world," he said. "His goal for the 21st century is to make Ford the first global car manufacturer."

MARK S. INMAN/STAFF

Where's the bean dip?

While most stores were suffering from a lack of milk and bread, the Western Boulevard Fast Fare seems to be suffering from a lack of the real necessities of life, — potato chips and dips.

Volcker served as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board for two terms and stepped down in August. Hunt said Volcker was "the man who brought double-digit inflation under control early in this decade... The stock market and the dollar dropped significantly the day Paul Volcker resigned from the Fed — That's the kind of esteem in which he is held."

Owen said the rest of the speakers will be announced at a later date. "It's going to be a stellar line up," she promised.

Dogs maul goats; project set back

From staff reports

An animal science research project may have suffered a three-year setback after several animals were killed during Christmas break.

Edward Caruolo, director of the project, said stray dogs broke into a fenced-in area on Western Boulevard and killed 13 goats.

Maj. Larry Liles of Public Safety said the goats were killed during three separate incidents over the break. About three or four large mixed-breed dogs mauled the animals, he said. Some dogs were captured and were not claimed after they were turned over to Animal Control, he said.

Caruolo said two or three goats were saved after an attack.

To protect the remaining half of the herd, Caruolo said he moved the animals indoors. "But that is not a long-term solution," he added.

He said he purchased some of the goats about 20 years ago for $250-$300 a piece. "We raised them ourselves (and) we chose goats because they are small and fun to work with," he said.

The goats were being used to study lactation and inflammation of the mammary glands in animals.

Caruolo said the project would benefit a "wide range" of sources, including the dairy industry.

HOW TO PLACE A TECHNICIAN CLASSIFIED AD

Technician now offers DISCOUNTS for EXTRA WORDS and EXTRA RUN DAYS

The minimum is 6-10 words for $2.50. After 10 words RATES GO DOWN every five words, so the longer your ad is the CHEAPER it is. Also, the LONGER your ad runs the LESS EXPENSIVE it gets to reach more people.

Zone	1 day	2 days	3 days	4 days	5 days	6 days	per day zone 1 (to 10 words)	2.50	4.40	6.30	8.20	10.10	11.76	(.90)
zone 2 (11-15 words)	3.00	5.76	7.56	9.36	11.16	13.14	(.60)
zone 3 (16-20 words)	3.76	7.20	9.60	12.16	14.40	16.32	(.60)
zone 4 (21-25 words)	4.40	8.40	11.20	14.20	16.75	19.80	(.50)
zone 5 (26-30 words)	4.92	9.36	12.60	15.84	18.60	20.88	(.50)
zone 6 (over 30 words)	7.75	11.70	15.65	19.65	23.65	27.65	(.45)

Words like "to" and "a" count the same as "unfurnished" and "uncomplicated." Words that can be abbreviated without spaces, such as "wash" or "A.C.", count as one word. Phone numbers, street addresses and prices count as one word. See Rate Table above. Deadline for ads is 12 p.m. the previous publication day. All ads must be prepaid. Bring ad to Technician Classifieds, Suite 3125, NCSU Student Center.

A defense against cancer can be cooked up in your kitchen.

There is evidence that diet and cancer are related. Follow these modifications in your daily diet to reduce chances of getting cancer:

1. Eat more high-fiber foods such as fruits and vegetables and whole-grain cereals.
2. Include dark green and deep yellow fruits and vegetables rich in vitamins A and C.
3. Include cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi and cauliflower.
4. Be moderate in consumption of salt-cured, smoked, and nitrite-cured foods.
5. Cut down on total fat intake from animal sources and fats and oils.
6. Avoid obesity.
7. Be moderate in consumption of alcoholic beverages.

No one gets cancer alone.

Technician Opinion

January 13, 1988

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activities and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is blank.

Decision causes hassle

Once again Mother Nature dealt N.C. State a hard blow last week when the first winter storm of 1988 covered Raleigh. With an estimated amount of eight inches of snow in this area, the administration wisely decided to cancel Registration/Change Day last Friday.

This not only allowed many students to delay their returns until safer road conditions prevailed, it also showed some apparent concern for NCSU students' needs. Just imagine having to stand outside of Reynolds Coliseum on the snow covered walkway in the endless lines to get inside. And considering that the Raleigh area was just beginning to plow roads on Friday, driving to this campus would have been a hazardous proposition at best.

In years past the administration's stance had always been that life at NCSU would continue no matter what adverse weather struck the area. When questioned why, their standard response was that since there were residents living on campus, they had little excuse not to attend classes. This logic worked to some degree as long as NCSU remained primarily a residential college.

But toward the end of the 1970s and continuing into the 80s, this university mushroomed into a commuter school. With approximately 6000 residents on campus at a school of 24,000, it should be easy to see that NCSU can no longer center its decisions around its campus residents.

So the decision on cancelling Change Day was good? Not exactly.....

Where the administration erred was in their choice to cancel Change Day entirely, instead of rescheduling it for another day. Their idea that schedule revisions could be handled within each school department was ill-conceived. And after waiting in line after line after line on campus this week, many students will agree.

What should have been done, and we fail to see why it wasn't, was for a new time to be set aside on Monday of this week where department representatives could gather together at Reynolds. Right now students are having to run all over campus, struggling to discover just where they need to be, and finding 10, 20, even a hundred other students already in front of them.

Administrators claim undue class time would have been missed if Change Day had been rescheduled for Monday. As we see it, considering how fast the lines have been moving in the various locations across campus, students already missed many of their initial classes.

The other excuse used by those in charge is that once classes begin, instructors are not able to aid in the Change Day process like they would have normally done on Friday. We find this difficult to accept. The first class day is normally spent with minimal course instruction, mostly just introductions, warnings and threats of failure; hardly material a professor must spend as much preparation time on as a normal class session.

Even so, what could have been done — a solution at once acceptable and easier for the administration and students alike — would have been to hold an abbreviated Change Day on Monday where reps from the major school departments that are normally in high demand for schedule changes could assist students.

Even if those reps could only have been gathered together for half the day, many students could have completed their business under one roof.

Instead, we are stuck with the decision made. Students were "inconvenienced" as Registrar Jim Bundy put it. There were other options to the cancellation unfortunately. The administration chose the wrong one.

Candidates take note

The nation's next president should bolster higher education by expanding federal student aid programs, increasing financing for construction and renovation of campus buildings, and lending greater support to academic research, according to a memorandum drafted by an American Council on Education commission.

The Commission on National Challenges in Higher Education, a 33-member panel led by former UNC system president William Friday, released the report last month to both Democratic and Republican presidential candidates as well as members of Congress. Perhaps prompted by the Reagan administration's abysmal record in supporting U.S. colleges and universities, the commission called for "a new spirit of partnership between the federal government and higher education."

These officials from both public and private institutions have well-supported concerns about the future of colleges and universities. Federal support of higher education appears to suffer cuts each year, substantial but not nearly as drastic as Secretary of Education William Bennett were to have his way. For instance, President Reagan, in his fiscal 1988 budget request, only asked for funding of three of the eight student assistance programs run by the Department of Education. Reagan's requests for Pell Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans were less than half the 1987 funded levels, and he totally cut out programs such as Supplemental Grants, College Work Study, and Perkins Loans. Although Congress reinstated all of these programs in the budget, which was passed late last month, the levels for many other programs still remain below 1987 levels. Other education and research-related areas were also harshly wounded by the budget-cutting axe.

Commission members hope to gain the attention of the future president, whoever he may be, early enough to make higher education a prominent part of his agenda. Specifically, panel members noted that the improvement of elementary and secondary schools — and their teachers — would be essential for better education after high school, helping "to expand opportunities at all levels of our educational system."

The commission, in assessing the increasingly international aspect of the modern world, also called for strengthening foreign exchange programs of both students and teachers, encouraging the study of foreign languages, and establishing international study centers. The educators also called for a reemphasis on values and ethical behavior in society, which could be facilitated by public and foreign service programs.

But panel members' recommendations went beyond looking out for higher education's self-interests. Advantages of supporting higher education include preserving world peace and security, revitalizing the economy, expanding educational opportunity, and improving the quality of life. "It is the public expression of our conviction that, in its efforts to shape the next decade and century," the report said, "your Administration must draw on our colleges and universities if the nation is to succeed."

What the commission members are saying is now new — as its critics charge — but many of the educators' recommendations have yet to find their way into public policy. We believe their insight into how higher education should work will help the future president, if he cares to listen. Regardless, any incorporation of the commission's memorandum into the 41st president's agenda would be an improvement in the nation's education policy.

Snow causes problems around campus

The word for today is "Treachery."

It began this weekend, as students braved slick, icy roads and hazardous flight conditions to return to school and preserve their "academic integrity." Many wound up in wrecks. Many barely escaped being killed. At the very least, most were delayed hours or even days until conditions were even marginally adequate for safe travel.

Upon arrival, students found that parking lots and walkways either had not been cleared or were icier than the roads on which they had returned. More than a few parking places were created on the spot by desperate drivers. Those who tried to move their cars found that they were literally spinning their wheels.

Thanks to below-freezing temperatures that re froze the snow that had thawed, one can now enjoy the "Going to Class Acrobatics." One can even participate free of charge — excluding the hospital bills, of course. Everywhere are people, faculty and students alike, slipping, sliding, doing backflips and other contortions the U.S. Olympic Gymnastics Team would admire. Many people can't join the fun because they commute, and driving to class involves an even greater risk and loss of money if an accident occurs.

OPINION COLUMNIST

But let us not forget probably the greatest thorn in students' sides: the cancellation of Registration/Change Day. It was supposed to be last Friday, but, out of the administration's immense generosity and concern for its students, it's now being done by department — a fate worse than the traditional lines at Reynolds. Besides, it means that those students who had to make changes or revisions in their schedules weren't in class anyway. What is being gained here? What is being proven?

For a university that is trying so hard to improve academics, even including an attempt to institute plus/minus grading systems and attendance policies, the position being taken here is a strange one. Yes, yes, "We never cancel classes." But "Never" is such a strong word. It can be used in so many other ways, such as, "We never use logic," or "We never consider the welfare or rights of our students."

This university takes a lot of pride in its academic programs. It has pride in its enrollment, its graduation rate, and the success of its alumni in the job market. But, in this case, too much pride is being shown. It is not a sign of weakness to soften a stance or even to back down from a position. Provisions can, and should, be made for certain uncontrollable conditions, such as the past inclement weather and its results. In this case, all students have asked for a postponement of classes until after Registration/Change Day or until the present bad conditions clear up. But they have been curtly refused.

Something is missing from the administration's tough attitude. Perhaps it is understanding, or common sense, or decency. Until the administration learns to make exceptions to certain rules, students and faculty suffer.

And until students can safely attend their classes, one word of advice: Let's be careful out there.

New peace initiative presents hazards

The Washington Summit of President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev has brought new publicity to the issue of arms control, and with it, to a new college course scheduled to begin in February, 1988. A joint effort by Tufts University and Moscow State University, the course emerges from a resolution of several college presidents in the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan and China, endorsing a "world-wide curriculum for peace." Last December, The New York Times reported that these academic presidents viewed informed public opinion "that sees arms control as an element of national security" as "the best chance to stop the arms race."

Tufts University president Jean Mayer said at that time, "If people knew enough of what was going on, this would help to cut down the arms race." Now, a year later, president Mayer says the goal is "to organize universities around the world to commit themselves to a common 'peace' curriculum, the model for which would be worked out in a joint American-Soviet, satellite-linked course on arms control.... In other words, educate the young to achieve peace." Classroom discussion will be moderated by an historian at Tufts and a physicist in Moscow, "Evgeny Vilikhov, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party."

It appears, then, that the "peace" curriculum is actually an "arms control" curriculum. (One wonders why the college presidents do not call such courses by their right name.) Without a doubt, the arms control debate is important for students of international relations; good courses on the subject certainly belong in the curriculum. The question is, are courses like the Tufts/Moscow State example more likely to be exercises in political ideology or serious academic explorations of this complicated subject? Will the participation of a Soviet "professor" give the impression that the Soviet Union respects academic freedom, or that the Soviets can be trusted in international affairs?

Equally important, will the professors who teach such courses have the courage to raise fundamental issues about peace among human beings and nations? While nuclear weapons are new, warfare is unfortunately not new. Throughout history, some of humankind's most profound thinkers and statesmen have grappled with the issues of war and peace.

For example, St. Augustine argued fifteen hundred years ago that there will always be wars because everyone is alike in desiring peace. The catch is that everyone desires his own idea of peace. Since these ideas differ and conflict, there is no end to wars. In our own century, Winston Churchill said, "War is horrible, but slavery is worse." History, the greatest teacher, provides countless examples of men forced to make hard decisions about war and peace.

Edwin Delattre

GUEST COLUMNIST

Should Moses have said to Pharaoh, "Let us have peace?" Instead of "Let my people go?" Should Eleazar, the Maccabean sage, have taught the young to betray their religious faith for the sake of peace? Should David have asked Goliath for peace?

Should Socrates have sought peace at his trial, and should Jesus have capitulated before Calvary? Should Abraham Lincoln have settled for peace after Fort Sumter? Should Martin Luther King have stayed away from Birmingham for the sake of peace? And, by contrast, should Chamberlain have paid the price he (and eventually, all of Europe) paid to Adolf Hitler for peace at Munich?

It is always possible to achieve peace if we are willing to forsake everything else: liberty, justice, human rights, common decency towards others and self-respect. But such peace is not honorable, and may not even be tolerable. In 1942, for example, Antoine de St. Exupery foresaw what the Nazis had in store for France: "Already as I move in the direction of Arras, peace is everywhere beginning to take shape.... This is a nameless peace that stands for the end of everything.... It spreads apace like a gray leprosy...."

A true "peace" curricula would teach free men and women to defend themselves against the dominion of such tyranny. It would take proper notice of the fact that peace among two nations — one dedicated to liberty, the other, totalitarian — is always a difficult thing. It would acknowledge, and even honor, people who have courageously refused to settle for peace at any price. As Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story said in 1840, the inheritance of American youth has been bought by the "toils and sufferings and blood of their ancestors" and can "perish in an hour by the folly... or negligence of its keepers, THE PEOPLE."

Students taking such a course would also need to consider the role of public opinion itself in matters of war, peace and foreign policy. One of our most astute political commentators, Walter Lippman, wrote in 1955:

"There is no mystery about why there is such a tendency for popular opinion to be wrong in judging war and peace. Strategic and diplomatic questions call for a kind of knowledge — not to speak of an experience and a seasoned judgment — which cannot be had by glancing at newspapers, listening to snippets of radio comment, watching politicians perform on television, hearing an occasional lecture and reading a few books. It would not be enough to make a man competent to amputate a leg, and it is not enough to qualify him to choose war or peace, to arm or not to arm, to intervene or to withdraw, to fight or to negotiate."

Courses that ignore basic questions about history, political theory and the human condition cannot advance the interests of students; they will not do much to inform public opinion. Until such courses do address the hard, fundamental questions, the "peace" curricula is likely to become yet another promotion of a fashionable political agenda at students' expense.

NFL playoffs not the same without Dallas

There's something missing from this year's NFL playoffs. No, it's not the fans. N.C. State students will still pile up in their friends' dorm rooms or their favorite bars to catch the games. No, it's not Jimmy the Greek. Unfortunately, he will still be there to pick this year's sure bets by actually betting on his losers. No, there's not a beer shortage. Sources say there is plenty of beer, potato chips and popcorn in the Triangle to last until Super Bowl I.

So what's missing from this year's NFL playoffs? America's Team — The Dallas Cowboys.

This year marks the third time in four years the Cowboys haven't made the playoffs (They got lucky in 1985). It's no fun watching the playoffs when America's Team isn't there to root against.

There is nothing better than a winning, playoff-bound Cowboy team and their arrogant fans to pick at when their beloved Cowboys lose. It used to be a dream come true when the Cowboys lost. It used to be a rare opportunity to humiliate a Cowboy fan when they lost.

Now, that rare opportunity is an abundant one.

Given time, everything gets old and dull. Picking at a bunch of Cowboys fans after their team has lost their fourth straight game eventually gets redundant. America's team, just like the stock market in October, has crashed. And just like the dollar gaining ground on the Japanese yen, finding another team and their obnoxious fans to pick appears the best.

Sure, there are other winning teams who rarely lose a game, but picking at Bear, 49er, Giant or Redskins fans after they lose a game or don't make the playoffs isn't nearly as fun as picking at arrogant, obnoxious as Cowboy fans, after their team has failed.

(Redskin fans are just as obnoxious as Cowboys fans, the only thing different is Redskin fans don't know any better.)

Cowboys fans are dedicated to their teams. They go out and purchase all sorts of Dallas paraphernalia such as Dallas Cowboys cups, Dallas Cowboy jackets, Roger Staubach posters and Dallas Cowboy toilet tissue. Cowboy fans have always been Cowboy fans and, as one NCSU student put it, they "stick with their team through thick and thin."

That's what makes Cowboy fans special.

It's funny how Bear, 49er, Giant and Redskin fans have resurfaced after being dormant longer than Mount St. Helens after their teams won the Super Bowls.

With the exception of those fans who have ties to those regions, the fans who claim to follow those teams are actually the "I Like Anybody Who Wins" fans.

Where were those "die-hard fans" before the Bears, 49ers, and Giants were Super Bowl champions. Probably somewhere in Moscow pulling for the Steelers when they were playing the Cowboys.

The Cowboys are truly America's team and what's even worse is the fact everyone in America knows it. Everyone on this campus, in this state and nation has some concern for the Cowboys and these fans want the Cowboys to win again.

The "die-hard" Cowboy fans want their team to win again because they can't stand to see their team lose. The "die-hard" Cowboy haters want America's team to win again so they can humiliate the Cowboys lovers with dignity once again.

So, Tom Landry it's time to come correct. Give America a team we can be proud of, not one that we must hold our heads in shame. All we ask for is a winning team because its not fun being a Cowboy hater when they're losing.

Cagers capture Classic title, win 5 straight

By Scott Deuel
Staff Writer

While the rest of N.C. State's student population was on winter break, the Wolfpack men's basketball team was still in action.

State 93, Winthrop 59

After a week's recovery from exams and a disappointing loss to Kansas on national television, the Wolfpack bounced back with a 93-59 win over the Winthrop Eagles on December 21. With the victory, the Pack raised its record to 3-1 on the season.

Leading the Wolfpack in scoring and rebounding was junior Charles Shackleford, who had 24 points.

"I am pleased with the way Shackleford played tonight," Coach Jim Valvano said after the game. "He got the job done for us."

Shackleford hit eleven of fifteen shots against the Eagle defense, and he grabbed a game-high seventeen rebounds.

"I feel good about the way I played," Shackleford said. "I had it in my mind to dominate, and somebody had to do it."

Besides Shackleford, Chucky Brown was a force to be reckoned with. Brown tallied fourteen points and snared five rebounds for the Wolfpack.

"We knew we had to win this game," Brown said. "Play was rough and some stuff wasn't called by the officials, but we still got good outside shooting and inside play."

Other players scoring in double figures for the Wolfpack were Sean Green with fourteen points, and Vinny Del Negro with twelve.

For the game, the Pack shot 55.6 percent from the floor and a sizzling 69.2 percent from 3 point land.

Winthrop finished the game with a poor 37.7 percent shooting on the night.

"At this point I'm disappointed we're not 4-0," Valvano said. "We're toward a hard road trip over the next ten days, and I'm hoping for a consistent effort by our players."

Rainbow Classic

State breezed through the opening round of Hawaii's Rainbow Classic after a disappointing 96-78 loss to California Santa Barbara. The Wolfpack downed Creighton 86-55, getting 18 points each from senior Vinnie Del Negro and freshman Rodney Monroe. Monroe hit four of five attempts from beyond the three point stripe.

Shackleford led the Wolfpack with 12 rebounds and Del Negro added 10 of his own. Senior point guard Quentin Jackson handed out 11 assists for the Wolfpack.

State met national power Louisville in the tourney's semi final round and trailed the Cardinals 40-36 at the half. But the Wolfpack had four players scoring in double figures, led by Chucky Brown with

Wrestlers upset national powers at Virginia Duals

By Katrina Waugh
Sports Editor

The Wolfpack wrestling squad faced several of the nation's top programs in the Virginia Duals over winter break and came out ahead.

State, ranked 14th in the most recent polls, defeated eighth-ranked Minnesota, seventh-ranked Lock Haven and third-ranked Penn State at the meet. The squad also lost to Iowa State, Northern Iowa and Minnesota (in the teams' second meeting).

"I think we did an outstanding job," Wolfpack coach Bob Guzzo said. "We lost to Iowa State, which is ranked number one, close. We feel like we should have won, but we're very proud of the way we wrestled."

State also lost Dave Cummings, a starter at 118-lbs, to a dislocated shoulder in the first match against Minnesota's Keith Nix. State's Mike Stokes, Joe Cesari and Scott Turner won the next three bouts, then Tim Manning and Rod Sandle won the 177-lb and 190-lb divisions respectively. Wolfpack Heavyweight Mike Lombardo finished off the win with a 9-5 decision over Jeff Balcom.

Mark Annis, replacing Cummings at 118-lbs, decisioned Iowa State's top-rated recruit Dan Knight in the next match, but the Wolfpack couldn't pull off a win over the nation's top-rated team.

"Annis deserves a lot of credit for the way he came in and gave a great performance," Guzzo said.

Stokes decisioned Iowa State's Steve Knight, 4-3, in the 126-lb division and Bill Hershey tied Jeff Gibbons at 134, before the Hawkeys swept the 142, 150 and 158-lb divisions. State's Jeff Kwortnick stemmed the Iowa State tide with a 4-1 decision over Bob Thompson, but Iowa State's Mike VanArsdale and Eric Volker dominated the 177 and 190-lb classes.

Lombardo took the heavyweight win for the Wolfpack with a 6-0 decision over Andy Cope.

State rebounded with wins over top-rated Lock Haven and Penn State.

Against Lock Haven, State swept the 126, 134, 142, 150 and 158-lb divisions. The Wolfpack's performance was highlighted by a pin from Jim Best, wrestling at 126-lbs, and a major decision (14-2) from Darrin Farrow over Mark Miller at 134-lbs. State took the match 25-15.

The Wolfpack's 20-17 win over Penn State was highlighted by State's Scott Turner meeting Sean Finkbeiner in the 150-lb weight class.

"They live right near each other," Guzzo said. "They went to schools about ten minutes apart. But Scott completely dominated Finkbeiner."

Turner, ranked second in the nation, came off the mat with a 5-1 decision over his hometown rival.

The only highlight for the Wolfpack in its 39-3 loss to Northern Iowa was a 3-1 decision by Darrin Farrow over Pat Hamilton in the 134-lb division. State forfeited three matches and third-ranked Lombardo lost his first match of the season.

Northern Iowa's Joel Greenlee, ranked second in the nation, topped Lombardo by a 4-2 decision.

Jim Best, Joe Cesari, Rod Mangrum and Lombardo were State's winners in its 23-13 loss to Minnesota in the Consolation finals. Best topped Jim Hammel by a major decision (16-5) in the 126-lb class. Cesari decisioned Chuck Heise at 142-lbs and Mangrum decisioned Kent Johnson at 158. Lombardo recovered from his loss with a 11-5 decision over Jeff Balcom.

The Wolfpack will open its conference schedule Jan. 13 against Maryland at Carmichael Gymnasium. The match will feature a heavyweight match-up between Lombardo and Maryland's Tom Reese, who's ranked in the nation's top five, according to Guzzo. The Terrapins were ranked 18th in the nation in the latest poll.

Swimmers splash into new year with victories

State's swimming and diving teams headed into the new year with a splash. Both the men's and women's teams beat Old Dominion Jan. 10.

The women's team scored 152 points to Old Dominion's 107. The men topped ODU 122-88.

Both State's diving team dominated the Monarchs, taking first and second places in the one- and three-meter events.

Wendy McCoughy took first place in the 1-meter diving with 243.53 points followed by teammate Diane Prosser with 231.90 points. The two traded places in the three-meter competition with Prosser taking first with 274.13 points and McCoughy placing second with 252.75. Patrick McCord took first place in both diving event for the Wolfpack, scoring 324.60 from the 1-meter board and 330.23 from three meters. Fellow Wolfpacker Michael Bowers placed second in both events scoring 294.00 and 316.13 respectively.

Man of the Game

Guard Ural Hogan, Morgan State's leading scorer, is our choice for tonight's Man of the Game. Ural is a freshman and wears number 20. Let's give Ural a Wolfpack Welcome whenever he touches the basketball.

Ural will visit Reynolds Coliseum tonight at 7:30.

Turnovers, Pack defense lifts cagers over UNC

By Mike Leek

N.C. State's women's basketball team took advantage of several North Carolina turnovers and collected 16 steals to beat the Tar Heels, 72-63. The win gives State an overall record of 7-6 and a 1-3 mark in conference play.

Four Wolfpack players scored in double figures, and Krista Kilburn, whose daring sparked the team's inside play, led the way with 19.

"Krista is one of the most aggressive players I've ever had play for me," Wolfpack coach Kay Yow said. "I really appreciate that about her. Sometimes it's out of control, but I look forward to her junior and senior years when she plays under more control."

The Pack trailed early in the first half, but with help from the bench and a fast-paced offense, State ran to a 40-29 lead at intermission. Yow's substitutions gave the starters the rest they needed to take control of the game.

"We haven't thought of our team this early in the season as a team with a lot of depth although we have been that kind of team in the past," Yow said.

But after reviewing the scrimmages played in the pre-season and noticing the closeness of the outcomes, we decided to spend time working on both groups, and

Pack wins ACC season opener

State traps Tigers, rallies to win at home

25. Shackelford had 18 point and eight rebounds to lead State in that category.

Del Negro added 15 points, six rebounds and six assists to the effort, while Monroe knocked in 12 points.

State shot over .500 from the field and nearly 73 percent from the free-throw line. The Wolfpack ended the struggle on top 80-75.

Shackelford led State in the championship game, scoring 25 points and bagging 15 rebounds against Arizona State. Brown and Del Negro added 19 and 18 points respectively to the Wolfpack win.

State led Arizona State 37-36 at the half, then outscored it 46-35 in the second period to win the game and the championship 83-71.

State 95, Cornell 72
Cornell invaded Reynolds Coliseum on a Sunday afternoon and was quickly sent packing after a 95-72 loss to the Wolfpack.

State's record was raised to 7-2 after the victory, and the Pack increased their winning streak to four games.

"Right now we're real pleased with the way we are coming together as a team," freshman Chris Corchiani said. "I think the Hawaii title was a big motivation factor for us, and we like our chances in the conference."

One play which ignited the Wolfpack was Vinny Del Negro's slam dunk and subsequent three point play off an alley-oop pass from Corchiani with 9:12 remaining in the first half.

From then on, the Pack had little trouble dominating an outmatched Cornell squad.

Center Brian D'Amico received more playing time for the Wolfpack, and he responded with twelve points.

"In the first half I played all right, but I could have played better," D'Amico said. "I did get a little more playing time than I expected to get."

State's win was a tune-up for its

January 6 showdown with conference rival Clemson.

State 70, Clemson 61
The Wolfpack defeated Clemson 70-61 in a key intra-conference battle for the Wolfpack. State upped its record to 8-2 overall and 1-0 in the conference, and extended its winning streak to five games.

Leading the Pack in scoring was Vinny Del Negro with 20 points. Del Negro also grabbed eight rebounds.

"In the first half I thought we were just going through the motions, and in the second half we controlled the tempo," Del Negro said.

Also hitting in double figures for State were Shackelford with fourteen points, Chucky Brown with twelve, and Chris Corchiani with eleven.

"We got off to a slow start in the beginning. In the second half I decided to go up stronger to the hole," Brown said. "The crowd got us going, and Corchiani's steals did big things for us."

Corchiani's play during the final ten minutes of the game sparked the Wolfpack to victory.

"I'm real pleased with the way I'm playing," Corchiani said. "I'm starting to play and score a little more."

Leading Clemson in scoring was Jerry Pryor, who had 15, and Eldon Campbell, who had 14 points.

State shot 35.6 percent from the field and 25 percent from the 3-point mark.

State's next opponent will be Morgan State. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m. on January 13 at Reynolds Coliseum.

Drug testing moves from locker room to Research Triangle

By Mark Bumgardner
Senior Staff Writer

After four years of final exams, projects and research papers, nothing stands between N.C. State senior Joe Doman and a high-paying job in the mechanical engineering field.

Nothing, that is, except a specimen bottle.

Doman, an Asheboro native with an overall grade point average of 3.7 and a 4.0 in his major, refuses to submit to a drug test.

Job hunters like Doman are finding that many companies require applicants to submit to drug tests as part of the interview process. If any illegal substances are found in the sample or if the applicant refuses to take the test, companies will usually not hire the applicant.

Doman, who would not comment on his own experience with drugs, says drug testing is an invasion of privacy and refuses to submit to a test on the grounds that it is unconstitutional. He also says he feels drug testing is not an accurate indicator of an applicant's abilities.

"It seems pretty silly," he says. "There is no proven correlation between the THC level in a person's body and his performance at work."

"It's discrimination against a class of recreational drug users."

Twelve companies have interviewed Doman. He says about 80 percent of the firms require some type of drug screening.

Doman says he often discovers a company's drug testing policy at the site visit, usually the final stage in the interview process.

He recently had a site visit in Research Triangle Park with a Fortune 500 company, one that traditionally hires a large number of NCSU students.

"I had a talk with the person who would be my future manager. Then I met with another manager, and we took a tour around the plant. That took about two hours. The last 30 minutes was spent filling out applications."

"One of the applications was a legal document... that said, 'Your employment is contingent on passing a drug test.' At the end it said, 'Do you understand all these statements?' and I understood it, so I signed it."

"I then said, 'You have my resume and my filled-out applications. That's all I feel you should know about my qualifications.' She said, 'You understand that eliminates you,' and I said, 'Yes, I understand.'"

"That was it," Doman says. Walter Jones, director of NCSU's Career Planning and Placement Center (CPP), says he has seen the use of drug testing explode over the past five years.

"The big push... was, frankly, by IBM," he says. Before IBM started screening for drugs in 1984, drug testing was limited primarily to defense and nuclear-related industries. Since then, however, other companies have joined IBM in jumping on the drug testing bandwagon.

A pamphlet published by the Western College Placement Association estimates that 50 percent of the Fortune 500 companies screen for drugs and another 40 percent are considering implementing a program. Jones says he thinks the percentage that test is closer to 60 percent.

Although the university's placement center has performed no studies on the drug testing policies of companies that recruit NCSU graduates, Jones estimates that about 30 percent of the firms require some sort of test.

This figure may not seem significant at first, but Jones emphasizes that larger companies — those most likely to drug screen applicants — hire a large number of NCSU students.

As a result, Jones estimates that 50 percent of NCSU students who eventually receive job offers through the center will have submitted to a drug test.

"I think the trend is here to stay," he says. "For better or for worse, it is a sign of the times we are in."

NCSU students interviewed at the placement center have mixed feelings about drug testing requirements.

Steven Schulz, a senior from Charlotte majoring in electrical engineering, says companies are correct in testing for drugs. "I think it's their right," he says. "It definitely can affect your job performance."

Durham native George Story, a senior in aerospace engineering, supports drug testing and thinks it might help him land a job.

"Most of the druggies aren't even going to try... which lowers the number of people trying, which is good for me. I guess that's a pretty selfish reason," he says.

But NCSU senior Kimberly Davis, a business major from Hampton, Va., says she is opposed to drug testing.

"I don't think it's any of the company's business what people do in their spare time, as long as it doesn't affect their work," she says. "I don't disagree with it enough not to take it," she says.

Larry Sorrels, a Raleigh native and senior majoring in chemical engineering, takes issue with the judicial philosophy of drug testing.

"I don't think it should be required," he says. "Everybody is assumed guilty."

Jim Burke, an IBM spokesman, says IBM introduced drug testing "in response to drug use in society as a whole."

"The overall emphasis of the program is to keep IBM drug-free," he says.

Burke says IBM has strict guidelines on how drug tests are to be administered.

He adds that applicants are notified "well in advance" that they will be required to take a drug test "late in the employment process."

If an applicant is to be drug screened, the IBM medical staff will talk with the applicant at the time of the screening, trying to determine if any over-the-counter drugs might cause the test to produce a false positive result.

The applicant then submits a urine sample. "Unless there is cause to expect that there may be an alteration of the sample," he says, "the person is asked to take the test in privacy."

The sample is then sent to a facility owned and operated by an independent company for testing.

First, the sample is given a relatively inexpensive screening, called an EMIT, that screens for the presence of drugs in the sample.

"If that test returns positive, we do a more expensive and thorough test, called chromatograph mass spectroscopy. That test specifies what drug caused the test to be evaluated positive and at what level," he says.

If the second test returns positive, the medical staff discusses the results with the applicant and tries to determine if the test might have produced false data.

"If there is no medically valid reason the person turned up positive, the applicant will not be considered for employment," Burke says.

After the initial drug screening,

IBM does not require any further tests unless the employee voluntarily enters into their drug rehabilitation program. Employees hired before the program was initiated have not been required to take a drug test.

Most other companies that test for drugs follow a procedure similar to IBM's and cite some of the same reasons.

David Jones, manager of corporate college relations for Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, says his company began testing because they "just thought it was a good idea to keep a drug free employment force."

Like IBM, Jones says they use an "honor system" when collecting urine samples.

"If someone wanted to take a vial of someone else's specimen, I guess they could. But we would find out about it later," he says.

Despite the difficulties Joe Doman has encountered in his job search, he thinks he can find a job with a smaller company that does not require drug testing. But if not, Doman says he is not worried.

"I have a job framing houses. I can keep that without a screen," he says.

Connells pack club

J. Ward Best
Senior Staff Writer

The Connells returned to Raleigh for two performances Friday and Saturday nights, to the disappointment of many local fans — those who could not get into the sold-out shows at The Brewery.

Some people at the club, and even some of the band members themselves, attributed the 200-plus attendance to "cabin fever" caused by one of the worst snowstorms in Raleigh's history. Likelier reasons are a solid local following and some of the best new music around.

Doug MacMillan, the band's lead singer, said he expected only a few people to attend, and that the band hoped to "have a party." Mike Connell, lead guitarist, was also surprised by the turn-out.

But The Connells should no longer expect small crowds, especially in their hometown.

With extensive appearances in the Raleigh area and the release of their first album, "Darker Days," The Connells were voted "Best Local Band" by "Spectator" readers in 1985. The album drew limited critical praise nationally.

Even with the band's first shot at radio air play, Connell said, "I can't listen to 'Darker Days.'" It's not just a difference in time for the disk —

"I never could listen to the album," Connell said the album was rushed in production, and the band was too inexperienced at the time.

Still, The Connells' cult following grew until the end of last year.

TWT Records and Video in New York picked up the second album, "Boylan Heights," in Oct. 1987. The band now had nationwide distribution.

The album, produced by North Carolina music guru Mitch Easter, drew even greater praise for the local quartet. It has remained on WRDU's "Hottest Local Rock & Roll" chart since Oct. 8.

The "Gavin Report" in the Jan. 28 issue of "Rolling Stone" magazine, which measures airplay on college radio stations across the country, rates the album at number 5.

The two Brewery dates launched another intensive tour for the band. The Connells plan to travel throughout the South and then to San Francisco at the end of January.

The tour will continue through the Midwest and Michigan before returning to Raleigh in late February.

MacMillan carries a copy of the latest tour dates with him in his wallet. The tours are still "hectic" — sleeping in the tour van and driving to each show — but the latest success has meant some changes for the band.

"If we want to, or need to, we can get a hotel room... or eat," he said.

All five band members are modest in their assessment of the group's success. Their on-stage appearance, button-downs and jeans, typifies the band's attitude — remaining simple and up-front.

"I was hoping we might get in the Top 20 or 30 on one of the charts," Connell said. "Getting in the ('Rolling Stone') Top Ten was better than I would have imagined. ... I guess that makes it that much sweeter."

As writer and original inspiration for the band in 1984, Connell's work is the driving force behind "Boylan Heights" and their latest success. The band originally drew favorable comparisons lyrically to The Smiths, and their 60's-like melodies to the music of the Byrds.

But Mike said he purposefully avoids songs that sound like other bands, especially ones that have influenced him, such as The Beatles, The Smiths and R.E.M. "By no means," MacMillan said. "Mike writing songs that he hopes will be big hits."

Songs on "Boylan Heights" neatly fall into the "pop" category and are becoming hits as such. The songs don't hold all the negative connotations of disposable music, though.

Mike's guitar and younger brother David's bass, along with a second guitar from George Huntley, provide the smooth melodies that categorize the band. A healthy dose of cynicism pervades the songs that only Peele Wimberley's insistent and precise drumming betrays musically.

"I like melodies that sound nice," Mike said. "To counter any sort of sweetness that might come through the music, you have to throw in some cynical lyrics. Just to prevent being completely embarrassed. Like with 'Over There,' that could have been a real sweet tune, if the lyrics weren't somewhat cynical."

"Over There" will be the song for the next Connells video. As with the first video for "Scotty's Lament," the band plans to shoot footage in Raleigh. Jim Herschfelder and Alistair Bates, the production team who have done videos for The System and Lou Graham, will produce and direct the video.

The group should shoot the video this weekend, at the beginning of the latest tour. But returning home in February does not necessarily mean a break for The Connells. The band will start their next album next month — beginning with three new songs they played during last weekend's shows.

Hope draws laughter

Comedy legend Bob Hope visited N.C. State last month, amusing his audience with an agenda of songs, dance and the ever-popular collection of Hope one-liners.

More than half the seats at Reynolds Coliseum were occupied for the Dec. 4 show, and Hope's tremendous following from the nation's military community was well-represented.

The performance was the comedian's first visit to the NCSU campus. Ticket proceeds benefitted the United Way.

As expected, Hope's unique brand of comedy dominated the evening. Throughout his career, the 84-year-old actor/comedian has graced the stage in numerous charity functions around the world, including a recently-revived annual Christmas show at military installations.

After last month's performance at Reynolds, Hope travelled to the Persian Gulf to entertain United States troops stationed there.

The NCSU performance was initially scheduled for Nov. 19 but was postponed due to a lack of advanced ticket sales.

Despite the wait, however, Hope's audience greeted him with enthusiasm. The same fans who suffered through the earlier cancellation certainly were not disappointed.

Hope's comedic genius was in rare form that Friday evening, and he had his audience laughing at one-liners of current events ranging from religion to Reagan's Supreme Court nominees. "Reagan went from barbecued Bork to smoked Ginsberg," he told the crowd.

He began the show singing a collection of songs, including "I'm Available" and "Buttons and Bows." In several of his numbers, Hope mixed song and comedy as only Hope can.

His skillful mixture of comedy and song included renditions of traditional state songs. The crowd erupted when Hope sang and danced to "Nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina."

Dolores Hope, the comedian's wife of more than 50 years, joined her husband during one portion of the show. She performed several vocal numbers while he displayed the energetic side-stepping that sparked his career on stage, film and television.

Hope ended the show fittingly, performing his trademark song, "Thanks for the Memory," as an encore.

As expected, Hope provided Raleigh residents an evening full of classic entertainment.

Art and reason

When Mark and I decided to spend the weekend at his mother's house, I never imagined I would be walking into a mouse's nightmare. There were cats everywhere.

Cat plaques, cat statues, cat clocks, even a cat mat. I couldn't begin to duplicate her collection of kitty litter if I spent a year at a garage sale. Conspicuously absent, however, was a real cat. Strange, I thought, and began to fear that a weekend with cat woman could be a lot less than purr-fect.

But then she came home, and Mark introduced her. She was dressed surprisingly well—no leopard pants. In fact, you could say she was the cat's meow, but I'd rather not.

She offered me a cup of Dutch Chocolate Mint. Now that was something I could relate to. Then she brought it out in the most beautiful, distinctly unfeline china I'd ever seen. As we sipped, I found out that Mrs. Campbell has my same weakness for chocolate, loves the theater as much as I do, but, incredibly, never saw "Cats." So Mark and I are taking her next month.

Best, worst of '87

Augie has been calling me lately, interrupting my solitude with tales of ill repute. He says I must publish my resolutions for the new year — so here they are, folks.

1) For the rest of the school year, I will only refer to North Carolina State University as North Carolina State Institute of Technology (NCSIT).

Last year Poulton and his cronies decided they had to change most of the university's "schools" to "colleges." They cited an improved image as the reason for the change.

Well, I think they should admit what this place really is — an overgrown technical school.

NCSIT pays lip service to the Humanities. If it wasn't for the Athletics Department, NCSIT wouldn't have any Humanities.

When Poulton was asked about a fine arts program for NCSIT, he said anyone who wanted to get a degree in it could go 25 miles down the road to UNC.

If a real business wants to do research they can take that same road.

2) I will refer to Centennial Campus as Moneyland in this column. Who does NCSIT think they're fooling when they say Moneyland is for the students of this campus?

Moneyland is the work of madmen who want to turn it into Research Triangle Park Jr.

Fess up, folks. The only thing connecting Moneyland to NCSIT is a bank account.

3) I will kick the Moneyland Rock (behind Peele Hall) whenever I screw up on a Spanish test.

NCSIT spent around $15,000 for the stupid rock, and it should serve some purpose.

So kick it, but not too hard.

4) I will be more of a pal to Bruce Poulton.

Over the past year, a blood feud has developed between me and Bruce and it must end before another innocent bystander is killed.

Bruce, we should go midnight bowling sometime. We could get a pitcher from the Cactus Lounge and bowl the night out.

Maybe we can go see Rush. Jimmy V's got some spare tickets. I bet you'll get a kick when Geddy Lee sings "Tom Sawyer" or when Alex performs his big solo on "Lime Light."

So pick up the phone, give me a call, and we'll paint the town red.

5) Graduate. Just kidding, folks.

Top Ten of 1987

Supposedly, I've got to do a top ten list to maintain my status in Pretentious Writers and Critics of the Triangle. I wanted to do records, films, TV, books or deaths, but I could only get up to number three on most of them. This is my Top Ten of 1987.

1) Robert Townsend.

The director of "Hollywood Shuffle" came to the Triangle, grabbed the local media and twisted out every possible piece of free publicity for his film. "Hollywood Shuffle" is a really good film, but after he got through with the yokel press, he made it an epic. I also got a great interview out of him, along with talk about "Eddie Murphy: Raw."

2) Redd Kross — "Love Is You."

The most simple and loving song of the year that wasn't abused by the airwaves.

3) Pepe Lopez Tequila. No explanation.

4) "Withnail and I." I saw this film five times and could see it again. This tale of two actors in 1969 was the best film of 1987. I will never forget Cousin Monty.

5) David Sylvian's "Gone to Earth."

Robert Fripp's effects have never had a more pleasant feel than on some of these songs. Sylvian's visions and vocals make the record a sheer reverie.

6) The Smith's breakup. I liked their old stuff better. Rumor has it that Morrissey has been seen barcrawling with Billy Idol in Soho.

7) Mojo Nixon.

Joe Corey

PARTY FAVORS . . .

In an age of fakes, Mojo is truly a real man of our times. Mojo is what Bob Dylan should have been. His show at the Cat's Cradle was a religious experience. Elvis would be proud of Mojo.

8) Ann Magnuson.

This woman's performance at Lincoln Center in New York City captured the last few years — when she had the audience put on rubber gloves and hold hands. She also did a wonderful acting job in the box office fizzle, "Making of Mr. Right."

9) GLOW.

This is what real wrestling fans watch. Forget those stupid studs of NWA and WWF. Who needs Rick Flair and Hulk Hogan when they can watch Amy, the farmer's daughter, and Palatinia, the terrorist?

10) Doug Ginesberg.

After all that came out about this guy — you'd think Reagan had nominated Allen Ginsberg for the Supreme Court.

Bottom Ten of 1987

1) Ollie North.

This leatherneck showed us that you didn't have to be a televangelist to fleece old ladies of their social security checks. Supposedly, he got more money for his personal defense fund than he gave the Contras.

2) Bret Ellis.

Some jerk said that this idiot is the spokesman of my generation. Now everybody knows we hired Bill Cosby to be our spokesman. Ellis's latest novel about kids in college is about as interesting as a shopping list. "Rules of Attraction" should be on this March's bargain table at your bookstore.

3) Jim Bakker.

I was so upset when he got ousted from PTL. What am I supposed to watch while eating my Cap'n Crunch? Bakker made you feel good about being yourself because you weren't him.

4) "Straight to Hell."

Alex Cox's film had the best title of the season and a killer poster — Joe Strummer brandishing his gun while he wore some cool shades. But after that it had nothing. I hope "Walker" isn't as bad.

5) Berke Breathed winning the Pulitzer.

"Bloom County" didn't deserve this award. Opus and his pea-head pals are Garfield for those with a sixth-grade education. If "Reagan sucks" is the best line Breathed can think of, he should return to his ultra-light.

"Calvin and Hobbes" and "Life in Hell" trounced "Bloom County" in depth and laughs. Bill the Cat should have remained dead.

6) Raleigh's commercial radio.

This town is an aural cesspool. Frankly, it is time the people burn down the broadcast towers before more sewage is dumped into the airwaves.

7) Raleigh's movie theatres.

With nearly 40 screens, I still don't want to see a film. Six movies took up half the screens this winter. You can look at the movie section of the Village Voice and realize there are more films than "Raw" and "Throw Momma from the Train." Too many films stay too long in this town.

8) R.E.M.'s "Document."

Maybe this is the band's "Unforgettable Fire." A bad record to capture an audience with. It's listenable, but lacking.

9) My personal life. I don't want to go into it.

10) Rex Reed and Bill Harris. If you ever needed a reason to avoid going to a movie theatre, the fear of meeting these two in a dark room is it. Rex is a pretentious geek with a New York pseudo-intellect, and Bill looks like a goofball that cried for E.T.

Get the edge

A recent survey asked executives at the nation's top companies to rank a list of 15 qualities they considered important when hiring new employees. Even though factors such as grade point average and previous experience were on the list, 92 percent of the executives still ranked communication skills number one.

"Technician offers an excellent way to demonstrate communication skills to prospective companies."

— Walter P. Jones, Director
NCSU Career Planning and Placement Center

If you want the edge on thousands of other college students when you graduate, join Technician. We give you a way to improve your writing and your resume — all while you earn money. INNOVATIVE AGENCY

Large Diverse Known for breaking through technology ISO College Seniors majoring in Math, EE, Counsel or Language for professional, meaningful, mutually beneficial relationship. Must be bright and highly motivated U.S. citizens. See below for details. EOE. (No photo necessary.)

The National Security Agency is looking. We're in search of new professional relationships with both Mr. and Ms. Right. What we offer in return is a unique career that may well be the answer to your personal desires.

What we offer is certainly different. At NSA, our threefold mission is critical to our country's security. We process foreign intelligence information. We safeguard our government's communications. And we secure our nation's computer systems. A mission of that proportion requires a diverse range of leading technology and talented professionals.

Currently, NSA is searching for Mathematicians, Computer Scientists, Language Specialists and Electronic Engineers.

Our Mathematicians work with applied and pure math. They apply—and create—a host of advanced concepts from Galois theory and combinatorics to probability theory and astrodynamics.

Computer Scientists discover a variety of projects and technology that is virtually unparalleled. We use literally acres of computers, including hardware from every major manufacturer. Applications include everything from communications software to artificial intelligence.

Language Specialists in Slavic, Near East, and Asian languages contribute to our mission in many ways. NSA linguists tackle the challenges of translation, transcription and analysis. They use both their language skills and their knowledge of world events.

Electronic Engineers also find a vast array of specialties from Signal Processing and CAD/CAM to Speech Processing and Computer Security.

The mission is vital, the variety staggering. And the benefits are also impressive. Our employees enjoy competitive compensation plus the many advantages of the Baltimore-Washington area.

If you're in search of a meaningful career with variety and distinction, look to NSA. Schedule an interview through your College Placement Office. Or write to us at the address below.

NSA will be on campus Jan. 29th interviewing graduating seniors for Engineering, Computer Science and Math positions.

the bench responded really well. The intensity and effort both teams gave us was tremendous."

Yow, by assigning a man-to-man defense to the Pack starters and a zone to the second team, was able to interchange entire defenses for purposes of rest and concentration. The play proved successful by slowing the Tar Heel offense and enabling State to take a 14-point lead midway through the second half.

"The coaching staff suggested the idea of platooning the defenses and we knew we could get the right kind of effort from our players if we got the right combinations," Yow said.

The Tar Heels battled back to within three points with 2:40 left in the game, but Nicole Lehmann hit a three-pointer, and Carolina failed to score for the remainder of the contest.

The preparation which will take place in the next three days will be a clue as to the Pack's success in its next three games — all are against currently Top 20 teams — Virginia, Duke, Maryland.

State will host Duke Jan. 19th at Reynolds Coliseum.
