Valvano may move to UCLA's 'greener pastures'

By Abbot and Costello
Associate Sports Editors

Rumors that Head Basketball Coach and Athletic Director Jim Valvano is leaving N.C. State for the Hollywood fast lane at UCLA have been the lead story in North Carolina sports over the holiday. Coach Valvano graciously consented to talk to Technausea to dispel any rumors that may be spreading. Technausea is glad to present this exclusive personal interview.

Tech: Aren't you happy at State?
Coach V: Which state? Ha ha. Just joking. I love the people of this campus and the community and in the buying market. Why I could almost never leave them... almost.

Tech: Yet, to be honest, coach, almost every year you are rumored to be going to greener pastures. We know you're a good coach, but are you satisfied here?

Coach V: Greener pastures? What greener pastures can there be outside of those around the vet school. Me and the boys like to go out to pastures at night and do a little cow tipping. Keeps us like a family, being with each other like that. As far as leaving this beautiful market... I mean university, probably never. So long as I can wake up every morning and smell the smog... I mean fresh air, I'll be satisfied in staying here.

Tech: Yet, coach, when we first heard you were leaving we called Don Shea and your banker at NCNB, who said you already had put your house up for sale. Don refused any more comment, but your banker said it was time for greener pastures. Is there any truth to this?

Coach V: I might be moving onto the vet school... but seriously, me and the love of my life, plus my wife decided that our house was just too small for us. It's a nice place, but I'm a big guy and I'm building a bigger house a little bit on the west side of where my old place is.

Tech: Well, coach, since 1983 the dream seems to have been to build a national championship team around the legendary Chris Washburn, but that dream turned wet when your prize recruit went hardship. Isn't this a good time for you to split?

Coach V: Listen you little weasel, you can't talk to me like that. I'll have Vito f... you over if you talk to me like that again.

Everybody loves me and if you start rockin' the boat, I'm going to push you off. I still love all you folks and I hope you all you beautiful people buy some of my new Jimmy V. hotfranks and popcorn. It's a total meal and it's just like being in Albuquerque watching my 1983 destiny darling team win the National Championship.

Tech: Don't you charge the highest advertising rates in the history of North Carolina radio? Didn't you charge $5,000 for a 45 minute talk to a non-profit group?

Coach V: So?

Howell stays in the Philippines

By J. Word Up
Senior Staff Writer

The administration has finally rid itself of Student Body President Kevin Howell.

According to an official at University Information Services, "Howell will stay at the University of Philippines campus at Los Banos to further build relations between our two universities."

Howell and J. Lawrence Apple, Director of International Relations, left for the Philippines March 27 and were scheduled to return Thursday. Officials at Information Services would not say when or if the two would return.

Earlier, Howell stated that his many confrontations with Chancellor Bruce Poulton and lesser administration officials may one day get him into trouble. Howell's public position and outspoken stance as an advocate for students made him a liability to NCSU.

"Heck, we're not here for the students. This is a research institute churning out engineers and chemists to perpetuate the system. Just look at money law, Centennial Campus. And you can't quote me on that," said one administration official.

Asked about leaving Howell and Apple on a third world island in the middle of the Pacific, the official said, "PU, or whatever, has a graduate school doesn't they? And Apple, he was only relations director for the Philippines—kind of a minor position. You can't quote me on that either."

With the recent political unrest in the Philippines, especially around the outlying campus of Los Banos, it is unlikely that either Howell or Apple will return.

"The few books Howell took with him were a small price to pay to be rid of Howell," the official said. However, in a telephone interview, Howell blasted university officials for their lame duck approach to campus issues and said the university "need to get off their butts and take the initiative."

"Bruce Poultry is the biggest turkey I know. Students could march in his yard all day and the only thing he would do is watch videotaped reruns of The Andy Griffith Show. He's just stupid."

Howell even blasted Technausea for their consistently arriving on campus three hours later than normal.

"Technausea is the main reason Poultry and students have apathy," he said. "People don't get the paper until noon and they are used to get the paper in the morning. If the paper came out earlier, the students would know exactly what is going on on-campus and get involved."

The SBP in self-exile closed out the interview by wishing Terry Guilian, his replacement the best of luck.

Terry Guilian named interim Student Body President

April May June
Senior Spirit Writer

The Student Senate named Terry Guilian as interim Student Body President immediately following Kevin Howell's decision to stay at the University of Philippines at Los Banos.

Guilian immediately set up a Spirit Committee and announced her plans to sponsor a resolution calling for a Hey Day and autumn Wolfstock.

"This campus needs something to pick up their morale," she said. "Hopefully, the Spirit Committee will come up with some neat ideas. Jeppers, we could've even have a Hat Day."

Guilian says she is the strongest supporter of a Hey Day. "After all, we're supposed to have fun, lots of it."

She says the purpose of Hey Day will be to get everyone to speak to each other and "you know, golly gee, people could actually make new friends."

According to Guilian, each NCSU student will receive a Hey Day package. The package will consist of a shirt that depicts a huge hand that waves back and forth when exposed to sunlight, a matching hat, a Hey Day button that lights up with a pull of the string, and the official Hey Day membership card.

"Everyone will participate to show they can have fun without sex," she said. "Faculty have been instructed to give NCs to all students who do not wear their Hey Day paraphernalia to class. I mean after all, Big Brother's watching!"

Guilian said that students who participate in Hey Day will be given free passes to the N.C. Zoological Park, Carowinds and Kings Dominion. They will be given ice cream and cake as well.

"I would also like to see couples in total agreement, after all, everyone should be happy on Hey Day," she quipped. "My dream is to have the whole campus happy. Everyday could be Hey Day."

Guilian would also like to see an autumn Wolfstock. This would make everyone happy and "they could be a positive person, just like me. The autumn Wolfstock could perk up spirits as big, bad, gloomy Mr. Winter blows his icy breath."

"We could have the guys enter a bikini contest and see their nipples when they get cold," she said. "If that doesn't perk a girl's spirit up, nothing will."

Guilian also plans to increase the number of fans attending NCSU football games this year by offering Hey Day packages to alumni.

"I envision a State-Carolina game with 70,000 fans in Carter-Finley Stadium with their Hey Day T-shirts and hats waving their Hey Day towels having a peachy keen time. Gee, we could set a new stadium record."

However, when Guilian heard that Carter-Finley only holds 47,000 people, she seemed somewhat surprised.

"Gee, how is a girl like me supposed to know how many fans Carter-Finley holds. What do you think I am — Technician's editor? No I'm just SBP."

"I just think togetherness I just think togetherness is happiness and I'm all for happiness so LET'S HAVE A PEP RALLY," she said, throwing her fist in the air.

New Howell Towel leaves SBP's mark on NCSU students, faculty

By J. Word Up
Senior Staff Writer

Student Body President Kevin Howell may be staying in the Philippines to complete his education, but his memory will remain.

After a year of dedicated service to the students, Howell says he felt like students should have something to remember him by. Voila, enter the Howell Towel.

"Sure it's a rip-off, buddy, but the student body would eat anything from me. If I told them I could get them front row seats at the Carolina game if they jumped of the fourth floor of the Student Center, you know they would," Howell said.

The Howell Towel costs $10 and has a picture of Howell's head on a towel hand cloth. He added that the towel would have many uses.

"Besides having a picture of me, the students could wave it ineffectively at the administration whenever they see them on campus. Or they could use it to cover their eyes to the many abuses of this administration."

The towel costs $10 to offset the cost of Howell's tuition in grad school next semester. He plans to research marketing of cheap, tacky souvenirs to glibble college students.

"The Howell Towel sales will provide me with a good amount of research data for my thesis," the self-exiled student body president said.

He said if towel sales are successful, he would expand the line to Howell bath Towels, Howell Beach Towels and even Howell Handy-Wipe Towels. "It's all a marketing venture. I sold all kinds of things this past year worth less than this. Why can't I sell towels? After all, the sales would help me start this campaign for world domination."

Mr. Basketball Corchiani leaves early for the NBA

By Just Beth
Senior Dingbat

The college basketball world is in turmoil after N.C. State freshman point guard Chris Corchiani's Sunday decision to declare himself eligible for the NBA hardship draft in June.

"I'm tired of playing games with those shorts all the way down to my ankles. I look like a white Shuck and that's pretty scary," the arrogant point guard said. "Contrary to popular belief, my mom didn't send in the wrong sizes."

"Coach V told me if I didn't wear the pants, I would be picking splinters with the other non-factors on the bench," the obnoxious point guard said running his hand through his hair. "He also threatened to take away my Ronzoni spaghetti supply."

One of the main reasons Corchiani decided to go pro was because "it was hard for me to keep my hair from getting wet with sweat."

"You wouldn't believe how much Vidal Sassoon hairspray I use before the game, during halftime and after the game. And the worst part about it was that they wouldn't reimburse me for the costs," the vain point guard said.

Perhaps the main reason Corchiani decided to go pro was because "it was hard for me to keep my hair from getting wet with sweat."

Police find June lynched

Official: June got what he deserved

By Ina Racist
Senior Staff Swinger

Dwuan June, a radical black racist and outspoken Technician columnist, was found tarred and feathered dangling from a tree late Friday night on the lawn of the Chancellor's House. He had a rope around his neck. He was pronounced dead on the scene.

Public Safety officials and the Raleigh Police Department say they will treat June's death as a homicide, despite the fact that they found a suicide note attached to his body. The note said:

"Iz sorry me be causing so much trouble. Me going to place where me can be accepted. Iz done apologized to dem white folk me offended and hope that the Lawd forgive me for being black."

RPD Captain D. Dunkin said his department will treat June's death as a homicide because "many people wanted to see that black boy dead."

"He wasn't the most well-liked guy on campus saying that white people weren't superior when he knew they were," he said. "I hate to say it, but June got what he deserved and it wouldn't really bother me at all if we never found the murderers."

Both RPD and Public Safety believe the N.C. State branch of the White Patriots Party was responsible for June's death.

"We have several sources who will say that June was constantly threatened by White Supremacists and other law abiding factions on campus," said Public Safety Lt. Mac 2day. "Several friends would call and tell us about the numerous death threats he would receive after writing one of his incredibly biased columns against whites. It seemed his friends cared more about him than he did."

One of those friends was Nancy Ina Badsinger.

"During the last month or so, he became increasingly paranoid," she said as she held back the tears. "He wouldn't cross the street unless I crossed first. D was so afraid that someone would tell to cross the street, only to run him over when he was halfway across."

"He didn't deserve this," said Badsinger. "D wasn't as bad as people thought he was. Sure, he was a little obnoxious and maybe even disrespectful and possibly just a tiny bit arrogant, but he certainly wasn't as bad as people believed."

Badsinger said June would wear different hats, shades and even get his hair cut different so the law-abiding factions like the KKK would not recognize him. She added that June began to behave differently after he found a dead bird hanging from his ceiling.

"After he found the dead bird, he really became paranoid. He wouldn't go outside or anything after dark. He was so afraid that his life was in danger. It's just a shame that someone will take another person's life away because they opposed their opinions."

Few people felt the way Badsinger felt. Many people, like Willis U. Honkey, couldn't stand the reverse racism either.

"He got what he damned deserved," Honkey said. "I only wished that I had been there while he was twisting and turning. To think those liberal commie pinkos at Technausea let that black scum write for a paper that was aimed at the good of white superiority. That really burns my

Centennial Campus, library addition collapse

New Atlantis

Tommy O'Dryin
Staff Swimmer

Centennial Campus has sunk into Lake Raleigh, N.C. State officials confirmed yesterday.

"The campus actually sank several weeks ago, but so few people know where Centennial Campus is, the news was slow to spread," said Icy Coldbeer, director of information services.

Head F. Hairs, director of the campus planning and construction office, said he takes the blame for the mishap.

"I should have been more suspicious of all that mud we had when building the new lab down there. I just thought that Redman usage was up amongst the construction workers," he said.

Design School Dean Clawed MyKidney promptly announced plans for a waterway connecting the two campuses.

"We've named it 'Century Canal', and it will have a fleet of paddleboats to transport students back and forth," he said. "And of course every spring we can have rubber duck races in the canal."

Error Guillidiot, a recent candidate for student body president, called the new bay "positively neat."

"This is such a positive thing to happen not only to me but to the university as well because now I can lay out next to the water between classes and work on my totally positive tan and when other people see me doing this then they'll want to do it and that would just be such a positive thing for NCSU."

She added that every year "we could have a 'splash bash' and sell balloons and things, you know, and all get wet and stuff and it would positively be such a wonderful thing."

The Textile School was scheduled to move to Centennial Campus next year and Dean Robbed A. Barnyard does not see why that should change.

"Heck, what's a little water? This is a great chance for the NCSU School of Textiles to become the world leader in wetsuit technology," he said.

The library addition before the collapse. Rescue workers are still searching for fraternity members believed to be trapped in the rubble.

Smega Alpha Phi fraternity members believed to be trapped

By Bill Melater
Staff Party Crasher

The 9.3 million dollar addition to DH Hill Library collapsed early Sunday morning.

According to Lt. Kayce Needermeier of Public Safety, several members of fraternity Smegma Alpha Phi were believed to have been inside the structure when the disaster occurred.

The students were holding an informal party in the incomplete structure, fraternity member Jeff Gann said.

"Most of us aren't 21," he said, "so that's where we go to drink beer and raise hell."

Gann said that he and friend Patty Johnson had gone to the Fast Fare on Hillsboro St. for a beer run when they heard a "very loud rumbling sound." Gann said that he and Johnson thought it was a freight train at first, "but then, we were pretty ripped..."

"By the time we got back, firetrucks and rescue squads were already there, and Public Safety showed up only a few minutes later," said Gann.

"We didn't know what had happened right at first," said Gann. "The whole thing was covered in a cloud of smoke..." Patty kept screaming "Oh my God — they're burning alive..." for a minute we thought the whole building was on fire.

"Then when the dust started to clear, we just had a real, real difficult time trying to deal with the gravity of it all," the student sobbed.

Lt. Needermeier said that Gann and Johnson were arrested for public drunkenness and only after they were taken to the Public Safety Field House did the officers realize that persons might be caught within the collapsed construction complex.

"We weren't as sensitive to these poor students as we could have been," she said, "but we did all we could for them as soon as we realized what had happened."

Additional charges of trespassing were filed after Johnson and Gann made their statements, but those charges were later dropped.

Ms. Johnson refused to speak to Technousea.

Bob May, superintendent for Navarro Construction, said Sunday evening that he had "no idea" why the building might have collapsed.

"We've built 89 multi-story structures on reclaimed swampland since we started in this business, and this is only the second time anything like this has ever happened," May commented.

"I know this just couldn't be our fault," he said. "I'll bet those fraternity boys did something to cause this mess. You know how wild their parties can get."

May said that it would be unwise for him to speculate further, saying that "As much money as is involved here, OSHA (The Occupational Safety and Health Administration) might come down and do a little investigating..."

Fraternity president Mike Harmon, who says he would have attended the ill-fated gathering if he hadn't been at work that night, declined comment on possible causes of the disaster, citing possible litigation.

Don Keener, Assistant Director for General Services at DH Hill Library, says that the problem with the new addition will slow down expansion plans "considerably," but quickly added that "it's a construction problem and there's not much we can do about it."

Keener went on to blame Technousea for the accident, saying that if the paper hadn't printed articles promoting parties at the place, "it probably wouldn't have happened."

Public Safety and Navarro officials had removed much of the remaining rubble by press time, but there is still no sign of the smothered students.

Still missing are fraternity members Mike Neas, Tom Cooper, Greg Skelley, Dan O'Conner and Randy Shackelford. Also unaccounted for is Doodle Kibler, a young lady whose presence at the scene fraternity officials could not explain.

white butt. You think the editor-in-chief was dating a black person or something."

June's death was for the public good of white people, National Association for the Oppression of Colored People (NAACP) spokesman Glen Meller said. "He was no good," Meller said. "Someone should have shut the black trash up along time ago."

Meller is also associated with the NCSU branch of the White Patriots Party, RPD and Public Safety believe Meller is one of several suspects in June's apparent "suicide." Meller flatly denied that his organization had anything to do with June's death.

"It looked to be an obvious suicide," Meller said. "The way the noose was tied around his neck and the way the feathers were tarred on him. You can just tell he slipped into that noose and tarred himself beforehand."

"I mean a professional racist like myself wouldn't do it that way," he continued. "Amateurs like them good ole boys at State would though."

Killema Blackboy, the president of the White Patriots Party at NCSU, did not deny the charge, but he did not accept the accusation that his party was responsible for June's death.

"I'm not surprised that they accused us," Blackboy said. "I mean, June had beliefs we didn't believe in. His writings caused blacks to rethink their positions in society."

"Who knows who killed June? We could have killed him. We had access to him. If we wanted to kill him we could have. June wasn't too hard to find. As a matter of fact, we paid him a couple of visits late in the night."

"I just hope that it doesn't get blacks to rioting and stuff," Blackboy continued. "It's the last thing I would want his death to cause."

Posters depicting June in his trademark sweatpants and a Snoopy T-shirt with "Black By Popular Demand" written on it, boxcut and black Chuck Taylors with the slogan "Death to Whites" have appeared on campus. Badsinger believed June's death will cause the blacks to grow and unite under that goal.

chiani made the decision to go hardship was because there "were just no more individual — and I do stress individual — awards to win in the ACC."

Corchiani received Pepsi's The Best of the New Generation award during his freshman year. The conceited shrimp was not surprised by the fans' choice because he figures he is the best freshman to hit the ACC ever. Corchiani was also named Florida's Mr. Basketball two years straight.

"It feels so good to walk around campus and hear a senior yell 'hey, there's Mr. Basketball,'" the swell-headed former Mr. Basketball said. "It makes me feel good all over."

Frank Pop Goes the Weasel, associate athletic director, said "the hell with him."

"We were negotiating with him, trying to get him to stay at State," the Weasel said. "We promised him Valvano's 300 ZX, but when he asked for 20 % of the athletics department's budget, we said arivederci."

Holmes statue erected in porn star's memorial

By Michaels Hugel
Senior Staff Writer

The Physical Plant has erected a life size statue of John Holmes to replace the Bellowler the vagrants destroyed when they overran the campus in the spring semester 1988. The monument will commemorate Holmes' 14,000 sexual encounters. Holmes died of AIDS last month.

Porn advocate Mega Virgin said there will never be another man who exemplifies "perfect manhood."

"There will never be another one like it," she said. "Oh, John was a nice guy too. He had huge assets. He was solid as a rock."

She added that sex without Holmes would not be quite as painful now that he doesn't exist.

"That man could kill a woman when he decided to give it his all," Virgin said. "After all, there are plenty of women who kept duct tape around when Holmes was at his best. Just ask Seka."

Joe Corey, Senate President, said "I can only stand in shame and jealousy of my own lackings. If I were like Holmes, I might have been SHIP. After all, he was a professional. Now he's dead."

"I don't see anything special about that," said an NCSU basketball player who asked not to be identified. "He should see mine. Seventy-five percent of the girls on campus have."

Physical Plant officials say they are worried that Carolina girls may harass the statue and try self-sacrifice by impalement.

TECHNAUSEA Opinion

April 1, 1988

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activities and in fact the way this campus cheers is registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves can have better, neater, more wonderful pep rallies.

Technausea endorsements

Student Body President — Bruce Poulton

Come on folks. Let's cut the crap. We really know who runs this campus. It's high time we realized that a Student Body President, or any student for that matter, is powerless to help the students around here. The only person who really counts is the big guy, the deep voice, the deep throat — Bruce Poulton.

Yes, he's the big cheese. So why doesn't the student body just elect him SBP?

If Bruce is SBP, it'll be the first time in the history of his administration that he's taken the opinions and concerns of the Student Body President seriously. It would be the first time the SBP and the Chancellor would see eye to eye. It would be a really neat, positive and wonderful step for this university.

Student Senate president — Joke O'Rey

What the Senate has been lacking this year is a guy with a really neat haircut who can get good press. Joke O'Rey is the man for the job. He's a no-serious, no-jive-talking man who can't get anything constructive done in the Senate next year. This is good for us at Technausea because then we won't have to think about any serious issues next year.

Joke O'Rey has shown he doesn't have to go to the press. The press comes to him. WRAL was even suckered into interviewing Joke in his room on campus. He also suckered the network news program "48 Hours" into interviewing him for their profile on NCSU athletics. He can sucker almost anybody into interviewing him and giving him a good profile. "48 Hours" gave him 45 seconds. Who cares he's not qualified?

Student body treasurer — Will Casay

This former Athletics Director really knows how to handle his cash. The audits he caused of the Athletics Department really prove that.

Under his tenure as Student body treasurer, we expect Student Government to promote more, neater and better concerts with much more profits. Student Government can become a money-making corporation so they don't have to gyp student groups by going bankrupt two-thirds of the way through the year.

Of course, you have to be a student to hold a Student Government position, and Casay retired a couple summers ago. But Technausea got it on a hot tip that he's enrolled in night courses pursuing his degree in economics this semester. That makes him eligible to run for a Student Government position.

Isn't all this neat, wonderful and positive.

Student attorney general — J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall

We've had a lot of problems with students not following the rules here at NCSU. The campus needs a get tough law enforcer. J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall are get tough kind of guys. Just ask the folks at the bar on Western Boulevard. Ask Mike Tyson and Sugar Ray Leonard. For student attorney general, Technausea endorses them both. Technausea feels their get tough approach to troublemakers is the right thing for this office. Just look at how they've handled troublemakers in the past. Unfortunately, the law enforcement system allows troublemakers to slip through when they should have received the gas chamber.

With these two bad boys Co-Student attorney generals, anybody who slips through the cracks the first time will be executed.

But then again, Reid/Bucknall probably wouldn't let anybody slip through the cracks the first time. They'll be a one two punch for law enforcement at NCSU.

New editor is neat, wonderful person

Hello. My name is Michael F. You. I am the new editor-in-chief of Technausea, NCSU's hangerover helper since 1920.

I would like to talk to you today a little bit about my plans for improving Technausea, by making it a true student newspaper. A happy place where friends can gather, smile and wave at each other — just like the Agromack down the hall.

I am a experienced and very positive-minded person. I am very experienced and open-minded. I am so experienced, so open-minded and so wonderful that Technausea sent me to St. Louis last year to represent them in front of a bunch of very experienced, open-minded and wonderful professional journalists.

The newspaper spirit in St. Louis is so overwhelming. I hope to bring that spirit here, to Technausea. The spirit is great. Everyone just walks around and says hey to everyone. I am very fortunate and privileged to have the experience to communicate with all these professional journalists.

Technausea could have sent anyone to St. Louis. Anyone at all on the staff. But they sent ME because I'm so experienced and positive-minded. I'm a great person who everybody likes and everybody wanted to send me to St. Louis because of that.

I even have a friend. No, make that two friends. No, make that one friend. The other one got lynched. His name was Dwuan June. He really helped me out. The other is Joe Corey, TV personality. He doesn't want to do anything with his life. He just wants to be famous.

But I'm not like those two at all. I'm alive. I'm very positive and open-minded. I am so experienced, so positive and so open-minded.

I even have real ideas to improve Technausea next year. One of the main problems at Technausea is a severe case of the "blahs." The "blahs" are when everybody walks around and frowns. Staff pep rallies help, but they've been poorly attended in the past years. We need more and better staff pep rallies.

Michael
F. You
SPIRIT EDITOR

To organize more and better staff pep rallies, I propose the creation of a Technausea Spirit Committee. This committee would have people on it. They would be staff members. The Technausea Spirit Committee would be in charge of creating more and better staff pep rallies.

We need to find a better place to hold pep rallies. The third floor is just too small. We'll find a bigger, better, more positive, more open-minded and more wonderful place to hold Technausea pep rallies. The Technausea Spirit Committee will do that. This is a very positive step for the newspaper.

I even have more ideas, because I am a very positive, very experienced, very open-minded and wonderful person. People at Technausea sometimes walk past each other without saying hey. Saying hey can be a very positive step for Technausea. Just look at Willie "The Say Hey Kid" Mays.

This leads me to another of my very wonderful ideas. See how clever and wonderful I was to lead up to it? This idea is Technausea Hey Day. Everybody would walk around the office and say hey to everyone else who would be walking around at the same time.

Everybody on the staff would get a really wonderful, neat, positive t-shirt that would say "HEY" on the front. They would also get a little waving hand like you see on truck windows. The hand would stick on the front of the t-shirts. This would be really neat, positive and wonderful. I can't wait to implement this idea. Technausea Hey Day has another positive thing about it. Everybody can have cake and ice cream, free. I would get advertising sponsors to pay for it because they would see, just like you wonderful folks, that I am such a wonderful and positive person. If possible, we could go to the zoo afterward and see the lions and tigers and bears. Maybe we could invite Natalie from "The Facts of Life."

Another neat, new and positively wonderful Technausea idea I have is the creation of a fall Wolfstock, sponsored by the paper. This would be really neat, new and positively wonderful. Sponsoring Wolfstock would make Technausea look good on campus.

Money would be no problem, because I am such a neat, wonderful person that I could get corporate sponsors to pay for it. It would create a very positive, neat and wonderful image for Technausea on campus. No longer will we be viewed as a liberal, commie, pinko biased newspaper. We will be a forerunner in the support of student spirit. Technausea will not be stuck down students' throats like a middle finger any more.

To end this column and give it a conclusion, I would like to say what my main ideas are again. Technausea needs more staff pep rallies. To create more and better pep rallies, I propose to create a Technausea Spirit Committee, made up of people.

These people would be staff members and would find a place to hold more, better, more wonderful pep rallies. I would also create a Technausea Hey Day to have the staff say hey to everybody else on staff they would see while walking around the office that day. And last, but certainly not least, I would create a fall Wolfstock, sponsored by Technausea. A fall Wolfstock would give Technausea a very positive image on campus.

I'm qualified. I'm experienced. I'm ready to work. I'm Michael F. You.

Don Valvano's future may be west, out in greener pastures

Tech: Well, in Hollywood, if you took some acting lessons and some basic speech lessons, you could really start to project a professional image.

Coach V: What are you trying to get at? I'm going down to Wilmington to be in the sequel to "Angel Heart." I'll be playing Mickey Rourke's older and more attractive brother. Don't we look like brothers? Huh?

Tech: How about your famous cigar and popcorn diet? Will it be in national bookstores?

Coach V: Of course, but all the good copies will be on sale first in Raleigh for my faithful fans and other people with wads of bills to blow.

Tech: Since you've been Athletic Director, you've talked a lot about making N.C. State one of the lucrative, 'er I mean leading athletic programs in the nation, along with Coach Sheridan. Won't your leaving cause a trauma for everyone else in the department as far as revenues?

Coach V: I'll show you a trauma you little prick. Me and Dicky have been talking about this whole lie that was prefabricated by that... well you must know and nothing was more traumatic than when Jim Pomerantz left me for the money of desktop publishing.

Tech: How about the CBS television program, "48 Hours." Wasn't Dan rather biased for, as they say at Duke, Biased?

Coach V: I don't know. I wasn't watching the show, but I'll tell ya, that jerk who kept asking me how much money I made was a pain in the ass!

Tech: Well what were you watching?

Coach V: I was watching the lovely and talented Lisa Bonet. What a woman. We're going to be neighbors... I mean, well it's none of your business. I did feel that they shot that Joe Corey's nose to be bigger than mine. But it was only a camera trick. I still got four inches on him.

Tech: Do you think the "48 Hours" program will damage State's reputation?

Coach V: We got one? I think it will do no damage to our recruiting because all the boys watch Lisa Bonet and Bill Cosby. They don't care about Dan Rather. Why should they?

Tech: Well, we've had some differences, but overall you're the best coach this program has had in recent memory. In fact, you've made it a program. If you choose to leave, you'll certainly be hard to replace.

Coach V: Am I that the beauty of it all?

Tech: In fact, through it all, we've always thought you were a brilliant coach. But we've thought you have demanded that your fans look at you as perfect, without any faults at all. Do you think the L.A. fans will buy that image as easily as we have?

Coach V: Listen here, they still see Charles Nelson Relfy as a star along with Suzanne Sommers. How can I go wrong if I went out there? But I love you folks too much to ever think about leaving this lovely people in North Carolina.

Tech: Thanks, coach. We know you'll do what is best for all concerned.

Coach V: Hey, you wanna buy my parking permit?

It's official.

N.C. State has been replaced by the Murray State Racers in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Racers are former members of the Ohio Valley Conference (OVC). The Athletics Department is appealing the decision.

ACC Commissioner Gene Corrigan said the conference had been considering replacing either State, Duke or Carolina because the three universities have been dominating the conference.

"The three own the conference. They should call it the RTP Conference," Corrigan said. "With the addition of Murray State, the scrub teams like Clemson and Wake can have a shot at winning the championship."

Murray State Coach Steve Newton was elated about the university's induction into the ACC.

First, the OVC Coach of the Year, the win over State and now this," he said. "I'm just so proud for my team. But, I do feel so sorry for Jim. Pysche! I lied."

Athletic Director and Coach Jim Valvano was on his way to catching flight to Los Angeles to interview for the UCLA head coaching job. However, he did comment on the possibility of playing in the OVC.

"What do I care for," he said. "I'm heading to UCLA. They deserve it. They can't even get past the first round of the NCAA's."

Rumors are floating that Chancellor Bruce Poulton is considering resigning or swapping universities with the OVC chancellor. Poulton could not be reached for comment.

At his exclusive Technausea interview, Head Basketball Coach and Athletic Director Jim Valvano shows off his famous popcorn and cigar diet, a possible new freewheeling haircut, and the brand new Jim Valvano / Nike Smokeless Cigar Hose.

Yes, real news did happen last week, including NCSU Student Government elections. Here are the results. This is a real page. The stories are real. The graphics are real. The ads are real. And this is real. So are pages 4 and 6.

Spring 1988 election results:

Nearly 14% of the student body turned out for the Student Government elections last week. That's up from last year's 10% turnout.

Elections Board Chair Charlie Helms said 3,259 students voted.

Pam Powell will face Billy Maddalon and possibly Don McCorquodale and Derrick Cook in tomorrow's runoff for student body president (see related story, this page).

Brooks Raiford defeated Felicia Helms in the race for Student Senate president.

N.C. State's next student body treasurer will be Brian Nixon. He defeated Haley Haynes and Marty Massey.

Tony Jackson lost to Charmette Brown in their battle for Student Center president, and Chris Wyrick had no official competition in the race for student attorney general.

Students picked Vinny Del Negro for the Outstanding Athlete Award.

Candidates whose cumulative votes totaled at least 50% of the ballots cast would be in the runoff. Under that policy, McCorquodale and Cook would be on the runoff ballot.

"I told some of them (the candidates) that I wasn't sure how we were going to do it," Helms said Thursday. "I told a couple we'd go with the 50% rule. We decided to go with the top two."

Cook turned in his appeal Thursday; however the Student Government office reported McCorquodale has yet to do so.

McCorquodale could not be reached for comment, but his mother said he probably would attempt to get on the ballot.

Powell had 17.9% of the 3,259 votes cast. Maddalon had 14.9%, Cook had 10.8% and McCorquodale had 9.3%. These votes totaled 52.9% of the ballots cast.

The two could appear on the ballot with Maddalon and Powell because of confusion regarding what qualifies candidates to be in a runoff.

According to Student Government policy, a candidate must have more than 50% of the votes cast to become student body president. If no candidate has more than 50% of the votes, the policy says, "There will be a runoff between the top two contenders."

However, Elections Board Chair Charlie Helms told some presidential contenders that the group of top
