Poole kept notes secret to protect individuals' rights books, photographs, films, sound recordings, magnetic or other tape, electronic data processing records, artifacts or other documents or materials regardless of physical form or character. When asked if him not releasing the draft was going to be a problem, Poole said. "The News and Observer wants to make it a problem."

Samuel Poole said Thursday that he refused to release his notes regarding his investigation of the N.C. State men's basketball program because releasing the notes would jeopardize the privacy of people mentioned in the investigation. Poole headed the four-member committee appointed by UNC-System President C.D. Spangler which lasted six months. The commission spent $40,000 interviewing people and reviewing records of the Wolfpack basketball program.

Local media reported Wednesday and Thursday that Poole and Spangler decided to keep a written copy of the Poole commission's report secret. Poole also ordered two additional copies destroyed, according to the reports, leaving him with the sole copy. Poole presented his report verbally to Spangler in mid-August.

Poole said the document in question is not a written report, only a draft of the conclusions of the investigation. The draft contained his personal comments about the investigation and names and titles of those interviewed, he said in the telephone interview from Washington, D.C. Poole is an aide to U.S. Senator Terry Sanford.

The N.C. Press Association has asked that the "report" be released to the public pursant to the Public Records Law, said Terri Saylor, executive director of the association.

She said there were no plans now to file legal charges seeking the release of the document be released, but Saylor did not rule out that option.

When asked if this draft would fall under the N.C. public records law, Poole said, "I would assume so."

He said he did not release the document because privacy of the individuals men-tioned in the document would be violated. Poole said the names could be stricken, but when "you're dealing with such a small group of people, its too easy to identify them.

"We told everyone we would hold the information in the strictest confidence," Poole said, "and I intend to do that."

Katherine White, attorney for the N.C.

Press Association, said, "Everything written in the course of your business (in a public job) is public record. He (Poole) performed a public function and it's a public matter."

White said examples of cases where there is the right of privacy are criminal investigations or personnel matters. She said student privacy is mandated by federal faw, unless both the student and their parents consent to release of the information. White said this report doesn't deal with personnel matters and it is not a criminal investigation.

Spangler said Thursday that Poole's ver-bal report was satisfactory, and "I received a full report." Spangler also said he gave the investigating team no guidelines as to what kind of report he wanted.

According to Spangler, the UNC Board of Governors unanimously approved the recommendations he made based on the Poole Commission's report.

New Greeks come to N.C. State

By Tracey Tayloe

Epsilon Sigma Alpha, an international service organization, is forming a chapter at N.C. State.

The organization's expansion to NCSU is new and if all goes as planned, NCSU will have the first collegiate chapter in North Carolina.

According to Patti Elitot, local Epsilon Sigma Alpha membership chairperson, the organization is different from the traditional sororities and fraternities already established at NCSU.

The chapter is not associated with the Panhellenic Council. Significant differences in rush, membership fees and obligations further emphasize the uniqueness of the Epsilon Sigma Alpha structure.

Elliot said that once the chapter is established, members will have a great deal of flexibility and will play a vital role in making decisions which will affect the vital role in making decisions which will affect the future of the group.

"They will be able to tailor activities to meet the specific needs of the individual members," said Elliot.

Freely translated, Epsilon Sigma Alpha means pursuit of learning. In keeping with this creed, Epsilon Sigma Alpha stresses personal growth, leadership development and lifterime affiliation.

Elliot added, "the benefits of Epsilon Sigma Alpha extend beyond college."

The experience and growth are valuable and once the member graduates, he or she has the opportunity to continue in a traditional chapter.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha will have a table at the Student Involvement Fair on Oct. 25 and will hold the first organizational meeting on Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. in the University Student Center Green Room. For more information, contact Patti Elliot at 850-0473 or Sharon Long at 872-0565.

Chancellor search committee announces meetings to receive public concerns

The N.C. State Chancellor Search Committee is holding three open meetings for anyone who wishes to help in the search for a new chan-cellor. The 14 member committee will select a permanent replacement for former Chancellor Bruce Poulton. Its first meeting is scheduled for today from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the McKimmon Center.

A second meeting, which the public is invited to, is scheduled for Oct. 27, from 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the McKimmon Center and another is scheduled for Nov. 8 from 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Balloom of the University Student Center.
Bill Simpson, the executive secretary for the Chancellor Search Committee, said that now is the time for people to speak to the committee if they are concerned about the selection of a new chancellor.

Simpson said the committee is "just looking for comments on what they (the public) would like to see in a new chancellor."
He said these comments will be used to help compile a list of criteria that the committee will use in their selection of a new chancellor. He also said that a copy of these

NCSU sends NCAA report, admits violations occurred

N.C. State admitted it violated NCAA rules in a 1,600-page, three-volume report sent to the NCAA Oct.

N.C. State admitted it violated NCAA rules in a 1,600-page, three-volume report sent to the NCAA Oct. 13.

The report was released to the public last week under North Carolina's Public Record Law. The university made the report in response to the NCAA's official inquiry of NCSU. The NCAA sent an ingity-page report to the university Aug. 31.

The report alleged that NCSU basketball players received cash and stereo equipment for basketball shoes and received unusual discounts at a Raleigh jewelry shop.

All current and former players' names in the report were blacked out. University Counsel Becky French said Tuesday the players' names were hidden to protect their privacy.

The inquiry was made at NCSU's request. Former Chancellor Bruce Moulton called for the investigation in January after the release of the book jacket "Personal Fouls." The jacket claimed wrongdoings in the Wolfpack basketball program. The actual book, written by Peter Golenbock, was published in July.

"North Carolina State University deeply regrest shoes violations that did occur," Poulton said in a Sept. 29 letter sent with the report. "The substance of our response reveals that we have dealt seriously with the violations. "Our conclusion is that the violations were unintentional rather than intentional violations of NCAA rules.

"We have also put into place new administrative procedures that insure these violations will not occur again."

TicketsThe NCAA alleged that players traded complement tary game tickets for stereo equipment, money and other items between 1985-1988. Team managers also added and changed names on complementary ticket lists just prior games, the report says, and that people were falsely listed as relatives and fellow students of the players.

The university said one former student-athlete traded his tickets for items of value and also sold his tickets to the 1987 ACC Tournament at Landover, Md.

In a transcript of an interview with French on Sept. 27, the player said he sold his tickets three years ago, but didn't remember how much money he got for them. The report said he had previously told the NCAA he received about $700 for the tickets.

In a Sept. 21 interview with French, a former player said he sold his ACC tournament tickets for two different tournaments. The years of the tournaments were blacked out.

The player also said he received clothing in exchange for putting people's names on complementary ticket lists to regular season games.

The university said a player may have exchanged tickets for a discount or credit on stereo equipment from Circuit City in Raleigh through Circuit City employee Buck Buchanan. The report said the university could not contact Buchanan because he was on disability leave.

The university enclosed listings of people receiving complementary tickets. Many were falsely listed as players immediate family, relatives or fellow students, unknown.

To prevent further abuse, university officials say, players will be required to provide lists of all persons eligible to receive their complementary tickets, along with names, addresses and phone numbers. The athletics department will contact these people to confirm they are eligible.

No "wild-card" or fellow student tickets will be issued.

Senate retains 18-hour limit on camping for football tickets Holm said that 18 was a typographical error made in the final copy of the bill after it had passed. "I believe, since it was the senate's intent last year for it to be 48," he said. Student Senate Secretary, Leslie Powell, admitted to making the mistake last year. Powell pointed out that the mistake became law at the first meeting of this year when the minutes from the previous meeting, listing 18 instead of 48, were approved. The only way to rectify it after that, she said, was through a formal amendment. Several senators did not support the amendment. Senator Jeff Sagraves said "I don't see a problem with 24 hours, but I think 48 is a little strong." Shelly Cole, a senator from the

The Student Senate voted Wednesday to keep 18 hours as the limit for camping out for football tickets.

An amendment had been submitted by David Holm, Student Senate Atheletics Committee chair, to change the policy from 18 to 48 hours.

The amendment was killed by a 36 to 19 vote.

Holm's main argument was that the original bill, passed at the final senate meeting last year, allowed a 48-hour time period.

He said the bill was passed by consent, a procedure in which, the bill is passed without a vote if no one objects.

University Dining stops using styrofoam products

By Christina Biliouris

University Dining has almost completely stopped using ozone-damaging plastic foam cups and plates to hold drinks and food.
All plastic foam products have been replaced with paper except for the small hot dog plates, and those will be done away with as soon as a suitable replacement is found, said Lucie Hunter, University Dining's director of catering.

Paper products are more expensive than foam, Hunter said, but University Dining's Public Relations team decided that it was a "contribution we needed to make." On July 1 University Dining raised its prices across the board primarily because of the switch from plastic to paper. Hunter said. A year ago opened up the eyes of the PR team to the environmental damage caused by Styrofoam and similar products. It took a year to make the switch because paper products companies are experiencing massive back orders. Many businesses city dumps for years. It also releases harmful chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) into the atmosphere. When CFCs reach the upper atmosphere, they are broken apart by the sun's ultraviolet radiation. Some of the molecular fragments that result react with the atmosphere's ozone layer, thereby reducing the amount of it. The ozone layer screens out ultraviolet radiation. Too much ultraviolet radiation can cause cancer. University Dining is doing its best to "stay abreast of trends in the industry," Hunter said. Some students complained they were being billed extra for not having a roommate, but Pappenhagen said "only those students who completed and returned the Temporary Single Room Agreement will be charged."

Those who don't guarantee their single status could get a roommate, Student's assuring their single sta-tus paid different amounts for the quarantee. According to the memo, the amount is prorated for the num-ber of days remaining in the semester and also depends on the area of campus where they live.

Students living on Main Campus paid $58.22, in North and Wood (formerly South) Halls paid $57.21, and in Watauga Hall paid $48.99.

Pappenhagen said the offer may be extended in the spring semester after room verification reports are finished. These should be complet-ed early in the semester.

NCSU sends NCAA 1,600-page report

The NCAA alleged that basketball players sold their shoes, worth about $75, to other student athletes and students and also exchanged them for other shoes and clothing from Second Sole, a sporting goods store on Hillsborough Street.

It said the university did not monitor the players to prevent them from trading or selling their shoes.

The NCSU report said players did sell or trade their shoes to other students and to the Second Sole.

In a Sept. 18 interview with French, James Howser, president of Second Sole, said players never received cash for their shoes, but they did swap them for same type of shoe in different sizes. He said players, staff members from the athletic department or both would come in to make the change, and usually someone from the department called ahead.

"Anyone in the public, the general public, can walk into our store — it does not have to be purchased at our location — and they may come in and exchange it." Howser told French.

He said did no 'know of players receiving different types of shoes or other clothing for their basketball shoes.

Players French interviewed said they did get other shoes.

Players French interviewed said they did get other kinds of shoes and clothing for their shoes. One said he received a pair of #hoes worth $45 and some other clothing items to equal the $75 value of his baskerball shoes. Another platyer said he got running shoes and other metadations.

shoes. Another platyer said he got running shoes and other merchandise. The two said they only got merchandise from Second Sole, not money. Another told French that he exchanged his shoes to a Durham sporting goods store and sometimes traded shoes for clothing with an NCSU swimmer. Other basketball players said they sold and traded their shoes to football players and other students. The players told French that they received new shoes to replace their old ones without question. According to information supplied in the report, some players received about eight to 11 pairs of shoes a year. To prevent players from selling and trading off their shoes, university officials say, each will only be issued one pair at a time. If a player wants to get a new pair to break in, he will have to turn in the old pair.

If he loses a pair, he will have to purchase new shoes.

Jewelry

The NCAA alleged that players received discounts and charge accounts at Walls Jewelers of Raleigh that weren' available to the public.

The university said players did get 20 to 30 percent discounts on jewelry as well as charge accounts. However, according to transcripts with owners D. Larry Dickerson and Bill Walls and their business records supplied with the report, the players did not receive accounts of this counts unavailable to the public.

There were some cases where the public received discounts of 20.1.5 percent.

French interviewd several players who received discounts aid they were unaware they were receiving discounts and only were paying the price the item was tagged with.

Walls and Dickerson told French the store often has nerchandise marked down.

The university said players whose charge accounts were in default were treated as any other customer.

Dickerson also worked as a security guard at many onne basketball games, but the player's interviewed aid they did not have any relationship with him eyond that.

Dickerson, a former Raleigh police officer, does not receive compensation for working security at the games, officials say, and does not have to purchase tickets to the games he works.

The university supplied copied records of all purchases made by all student-athletes — not just basketball players — at Walls Jewelers.

Food/Lodging/Transportation

The NCAA alleged that in the 1986-87, '87-88 and '88-89 academic years, Wolfback boosters Nick and Dianne Sarrocco provided transportation and meals for players, possibly in violation of NCAA regulations. Also, booster Larry Hall allegedy provided food and lodging to a student-athlete over a scheduled vacation break, possibly violating NCAA rules.

In interviews with French, the Sarroccos said they provided meals in their home to some players. Three stayed overnight on Christmas Eve in 1986, and each received one or two meals.

The Sarroccos said the players rode in their car to midnight mass that night. Players also have had occasional meals at their home, they said.

According to the report, a player stayed with Hall on Dec. 10, 1987 after he was discharged from a hospital because of an extreme illness. NCSUs infirmary was closed because it was during week of final exams before Christmas break.

The report said the player stayed in his dorm room after his discharge, but could not rest because reporters were calling and visiting to see if he would play in upcoming games. To give the player a chance to rest, Hall took him in.

According to Hall, NCSU had assured him the stay would not be a violation.

The university said it would take full responsibility for the action.

Eligibility

The NCAA alleged that NCSU improperly certified the continuing eligibility of a player for the 1985-86 academic year. It said NCSU properly applied a medical absence waiver of the satisfactory progress rule, but failed to properly document the waiver provision through the Atlantic Coast Conference office.

The university said it unintentionally broke the the rule and failed to properly document the player's continuing eligibility with the ACC office, even though it was filed with the NCAA.

The Committee on Infractions

NCSU's possible violations will be considered by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions on Nov. 3-5 in Tucson, Ariz.

STDs may be changing society's sexual attitudes that is.

Dr. Robert Moseley of N.C. State Health Services witnesses this false attitude everyday. And, yes, it may happen to you, especially if you are unsafe. STDs just do not discrimi-ease," says Moseley.

Accouning to a pamphlet distributed by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, STDs are defined as infections disorders spread through sexual activity. Monogamy is defined as having only one sexual partner during a lifetime.

The pamphiet, entitled "America responds to Aids" says the average age for a girl in the United States to have sexual intercourse for the first time is 16 and the average age for a boy is 15.5, which emphasizes the increased sexual activity of this day and age.

boy is 15.5, which emphasizes the increased sexual activity of this day and age.

STDs certainly exist everywhere in society, but, the pamphlet says, college campuses may be more vulnerable to these diseases, including chlamydia, gonorrhea and herpes, By no means is this a new phenomena, centuries ago Christopher Columbus died of syphilis. Here in 1989 however, Moseley says, a dangerous new epidemic of HIV (virus causing AIDS) is on the rise, and people need to start realizing that modern day precautions can save their lives, It all starts with admitting: "It can happen to me."

One female victim of chlamydia lost her naivety the hard way. "I rever thought I could catch something from him. We were dating and I knew he wasn't running around on

"I had never thought about dis-eases — we were in love. It almost makes me think couples should get tested before beginning a sexual relationship. You never really know for sure what has gone on in the past.

The pamphlet names chlamydia as the most common STD. It is also the biggest cause of sterility in the United States. According to NCSU Health Services, 114 men and 148 women at NCSU had reported STD cases in 1988, but Moseley says there may be many more.

Chlamydia almost always has no symptoms in women. Symptoms that do sometimes show up include vaginal discharge, non-menstrual bleeding, painful urination and abdominal pain accompanied by fever and nausea. For men, symptoms are painful urination and a watery drip from the penis. Like all STDs, chlamydia is spread during intercourse, oral sex and anal sex.

NCSU Health Services reported 83 cases of herpes, the second most common STD on campus. This virus causes small, painful blisters to develop on the genitals or mouth within one week to one month after contact with an infected partner. The pamphist says the initial outbreak lasts one to three weeks, and after that, outbreaks lasting seven to ten days occur several times a year. Herpes has no cure, though treatment helps lessen the severity and the amount of outbreaks. The pamphlet describes the disease as non-iethal to adults, but newborn babies can die from it.

Gonorrhea, also known as the Clap, Drip, or G.C., develops within three days to three weeks after exposure. The pamphlet describes the main symptoms, which may or may not show up at all, as a thick yellowish discharge and painful urination (burning) in both sexes. Complications can lead to sterility, heart trouble, skin disease, arthritis and blindness. NCSU Health Services recorded 52 students treated for Gonorrhea in 1988.

Only one case of syphilis among students was reported last year. This potentially dangerous disease begins with one large painless ulcer lasting one to five weeks. The second stage-begins two weeks to two months later with a rask (anywhere on the body) and flu-like symptoms. If left untreated, the pamphlet says, a third stage could include heart disease, brain damage and blindness. The end result of syphilis used to include death; but now, treatment is simple—thanks to penicillin.

The pamphlet also describes genitals one to eight months after sexual contact with an infected individual. These highly contagious warts not only itch and burn, they spread. The spread at an alarmingly increasing rate.

Figures from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services-Center for Disease Control show more than 18,000 people between the ages of 20 and 29 have been diagnosed with AIDS as of Spring 1989. The disease is caused by HIV (human immunedeficiency virus) which may be present in the blood-stream for 10 or more years before any signs of AIDS begin to show.

Menu HIV enters the blood-stream, the pamphlet describes, a person does not yet have AIDS and appears completely healthy. Even in this stage those infected may infect their sexual partners. HIV may go unnoticed until AIDS develops. AIDS begins when the body's immune system quits working to fight off infections and diseases. Resulting symptoms include never ending flu-like symp-toms, diarrhea, extreme weight loss, severe pneumonia, various forms of cancer and damage to the nervous system. According to the pamphlet, to the AIDS patient, even a common cold is life threatening. Though drugs such as AZT and DDI can help somewhat in treatment, there is presently no cure for AIDS.

There are two main ways HIV is transmitted: through vaginal, anal and possibly oral sex with an infected partner or through contaminated needles and syringes. This includes needles used to inject stroids and unsteriel needles for tattooing or ear piercing.

The pampheit warns that HIV can also be given to babies by their mothers. In the past, people have been infected by receiving blood transfusions, but since 1985, care Action. Adventure. Assistance. That is what volunteering is all about. But do N.C. State students give their time freely to the community, get experience out in the "real world" and participate in important service programs? Sara Strutt, coordinator of Volunteer Services, says some do — these are students who take part in the Volunteer Services Program. NCSU has had the program for at least four years. It evolved from a need to get more students involved in the community and to give them real-life, "hands-on" experience.

Strutt says students should recognize the importance of the Volunteer Service Program.

The program places interested students in an area of the community that they have an Interest in. Strutt says, this gives the student a chance to say "I did this" and feel good about what they did when they are finished. Volunteer Services offer many different areas to choose from. Some of the volunteers help the elderly, spend time with the handicapped, tutor and work with groups such as 4-H and Big Brother/Sister. All in all there are over 200 different community agencies in contact with the program.

Approximately 40 NCSU students are currently participating as volunteers, Strutt says. Campus organizations also take part in setting up service projects and giving their time. Strutt says three to five hours per week is the average amount of time a volunteer might give.

program, works with Habitat for Humanity. The group helps provide housing for people who live in substandard homes. "It helps provide a sense of dignity for the people," he says.

Brent says he feels good about the work he is doing and the things being accomplished. "In the words of the founder, Millard Fuller, "we are building houses for God and that is what we are here for."

Strutt is new at the job this year. A new graduate stu ent takes over the seat each year, so the job basically dent takes over the sear each year, as they changes.

Strutt says the program has been very successful this year and has a promising future. "The students placed have responded wonderfully as well as the community agencies. Friends refer other friends and our volunteer numbers just keep growing."

On Nov. 19, the program will conduct Volunteer Services Day in which students will have the opportunity to become more involved with other community volunteer agencies. "We're hoping to match students to the opportunity." Strutt says. Some of the activities will include visiting a local nursing home and organizing a food drive for the North Carolina Hunger Coalition. There are also other advantages to joining a volunteer service, says Strutt. "Many corporations look at volunteer experience highly. This is a plus when looking for a job." Strutt stresses that the office is a service to the stuful screening and testing of the blood supply has prevented this from occurring.

According to the pamphlet, you cannot be infected by donating blood. Other myths to dispel includes getting AIDS from sweat, tears, coughs and sneezes or any casual contact with infected people. You also cannot get AIDS from mosquito bites, toilet seats or shared objects such as phones, clothing and utensils. As of yet, the pamphlet says, there has never been one case of HIV known to be transmitted by any kind of kissing, and most scientists agree that it is extremely unlikely that it could happen. However, the remote possibility of transmission through deep, prolonged kissing has not been ruled out until further testing is done.

Recently the American College Health Association conducted a study on 19 college campuses, ran-domly collecting blood and testing it for the presence of HIV. Their findings indicate that on average, one out of 500 students has HIV. While no infected blood samples were found at 10 of the campuses, at five colleges, one in 200 was at five colleges, one in 200 was found to have the disease, and at one campus, one in every 100 students carried HIV.

While NCSU was not included in the study, others schools from the Southeastern United States were included. From this study, Moseley estimates that at NCSU, 40 to 50 students are infected with HIV and do not know it.

Currently there are 1,000 known AIDS cases in North Carolina, he says, including three known cases of AIDS on this campus.

Sidetracked Tigers seek revenge against Wolfpack

Anthony Barbour will return against Clemson this weekend after sitting out two ga The Pack hopes to continue their success with the run against the Tigers.

Saturday's N.C. State-Clemson game was supposed to be one for all the marbles. Both teams would be coming in undefeated and ranked very high in the polls.

It would be a battle with ACC and gather in the polls.

It would be a battle with ACC and maybe, just maybe, national championship implications.

But somewhere along the way, Clemson was sidetracked by Duke and Georgia Tech. The Tigers are a mere 5-2 overall and a mediocre 2-2 in the conference.

mere 5-2 overall and a mediocre 2-2 in the conference.

Don't let the record foot you. Clemson is hungry and will be loaded for bear, er, Wolfpack.

"The game has developed into a special kind of rivalry — one that has a lot to do with the championship in our conference," Wolfpack head coach Dick Sheridan said. "We have a tremendous amount of respect for Clemson and that really hasn't been diminished.
"What Clemson has reconstituted."

ished.
"What Clemson has accomplished in this league deserves everybody's respect. They have carried the banner of the ACC on a national level like no other ACC team has ever done."

But now, Sheridan and his team want to tote that banner. If the Pack's play against Clemson is any indication, State will soon take over the Tigers' place at the head of the ACC.

The Wolfpack has beaten Clemson three straight years, including a 30-28 upset in Death Valley in 1987 when State finished 4-7.

"Every game's been kinda different," Sheridan said. "There's not been a pattern in any of the three games. And we expect more of the same. Gosh, the margins have been close in every game."

Forgive Sheridan for having a short memory. In 1986, Sheridan's first year as Wolfpack coach, State smacked the Tigers 27-3. The last two have been close (30-28 in 1987 and 10-3 last season).

And this one should be more of the same.

and 10-3 last season).

And this one should be more of the same.

"I know they're going to be intense, mad and ready to play."

Sheridan said of the Tigers. "We look at it more from a practical standpoint. Clemson has two losses in the league. That helps Virginia, Duke and N.C. State."

Sheridan expects maximum intensity from Clemson, even without the loss to Georgia Teel hast week.

One key to the game could be the running attacks of both teams. Clemson rushed for only 111 yards last week against Tech and has averaged only 133 yards on the ground in the last three losses to State.

We know State can throw the ball, and in the last three pames the Pack

Clemson is the best seam State has faced so far in 1989 and the Pack is sure to know more about how good it is. Over 80,000 naar, "housile," very loud fans will be at Clemson's Memorial Stadium ("Death Valley") ready and warding to avenge the 3-year juggernaut the Wolfpack has had over their beloved Tigers "Even nationally, it's one of lunique places to play," Sheridan said. "Any way you want to measure it — the lan support, the volume of fan reaction — it's a first-class operation."

But Sheridan is a first-class opera

Price not hindered by pressure to match her freshman success

For Katrina Price, staying on top nay be even harder than getting

For Katrina Price, staying on top may be even harder than getting there.

Price, a sophomore on N.C. State's fourth-ranked women's cross country team, made a big mark on collegiate distance running last year as a freshman. She was named all-American three times and earned a place on the junior national cross country team. Price was the first American freshman to finish at the cross country NCAA meet, finishing 28th overall. She also finished in the top 10 for 5000 meters in both indoor and outdoor track.

One would think the biggest problem after a season like that would be the pressure to do even better. Not for Price, who is taking it all in stride.

"It don't think anything is that different," she said. "I still feel like the youngest person on the team."

Price added the pressure on her to perform might actually be less this year.

"I don't have to prove myself. Everybody knows what I'm capable of," she said.

This is not to say that the season is going completely smoothly. Only that the obstacles she faces are of a more tangible nature, namely injuries. Price was diagnosed last month as having a stress fracture in her left shin.
"It bothered me for about a year," Price said. "Then it got so intense I had to get a bone scan."
The scan revealed the stress fracture.
To help protect the shin, Price is ture.

To help protect the shin, Price is now spending a lot more training time on a bike or in a pool, and less time running. Still, she thinks she will be ready for the major races.

"I think I am as fit, especially because of the water workouts," she said. "Because I'm not confined to non-running workouts, it's not a problem." If motivation is a problem, Price need look no farther than teammate Suzie Tuffey, Tuffey has struggled through a number of injuries in the past and finished iffeeth in the nation last year despite doing most of her training in the water. "Knowing everything Suzie has been through it so going to help me get through my own injury." Price said. "The mere fact that she is still running for us is an indication that injuries are not the end of the world."

The presence of Tuffey, a fifth-year senior, was one of the factors in Price's decision to run through her injury rather than redshift. "This is Mary Ann's (Carraber, also a senior) and Suzie's last year," Price said. "I think we should make the most of the opportunity to have them running with us. "I don't think my stress fracture is so limiting that I could desert my team," she continued.

If you read the box scores of N.C. State football games closely enough, you'll notice that the attendance figure of virtually every game played at Carter-Finley Stadium ends in an exact hundred.

This year, the Wolfpack has drawn home crowds of 41,700 for Maryland, 40,800 for Georgia Tech, 57,100 for North Carolina, 35,400 for Kent State and 41,200 for Middle Tennessee State.

This is not an isolated coincidence, With the exception of 1970, every year's season attendance figure at Carter-Finley ends in zero, and all but four end in double zeroes. Amazing!

"I don't want to be the deciding factor that wasn't there. Also, it's obviously more exciting to run for a nationally contending program (than to redshirt.)"

State coach Rollie Geiger is well aware of the effort Price is putting forth. "There are very few athletes who could run through a stress fracture,"

he said. "Obviously Katrina is one of those few. "Realizing this problem goes back several months, it's very impressive what she has done already." Geiger said. "We both look forward to the end of the season when she can rest."

Price started the season well as one of six Wolfpack runners to tie for first at the UNC-Wilmington Invitational.

Then, as if one injury wasn't enough, she suffered a sprained ankle while training for the Wisconsin Invitational, further limiting her running.

Price was still able to compete in Wisconsin, finishing tenth to help lead State to victory. Geiger said he felt the race was not a true indication of Price's ability, because the racing strategy she employed.

"I think Katrina was frustrated by her placing." Geiger said. "But she was running conservatively to protect her ankle. She will be at her best going into the big meets."

Price enters next weekend's ACC Championships as the number two returning runner, after last year's fourth place finish. She will lead a State team looking to win its third consecutive conference title. "I think we can win again," Price said. "That's why I'm going through this."

Soccer Club gets two wins

Last week, the N.C. State Women's Soccer Club opened its fall 1989 season with victories over both the UNC and Duke Clubs.

In their first game, the State club faced off against UNC. Julie Resager, a returning senior and the team captain, scored the goal in the 1-0 victory.

Two days later, the Pack took on Duke in a very physical game.

State played a good passing game and the team's overall performance was much improved from their first game.

Junior Aimee Occhetti score both Wolfpack goals in the 2-1 victory.

This season, the Women's Soccer Club has 10 games to play in the North Carolina Women's Soccer

They have high hopes of winning the state tournament and getting a shot at the regional tournament of champions.
For anyone interested in the club, practice is on the intramural fields at 5 p.m. on Tuesdays and at 4:30 p.m. on Thursdays and Fridays.

Officials essential to intramurals

By Jeff Vukovich

Every year, the Intramural Department at N.C. State employs students to officiate games. Officials are needed for flag football, volleyball, soccer, basketball and softball games.

Therefore, officials are essential to have a successful season.

Students find the employment opportunity of being an official attractive, not only because of the money, but because there is no experience required and they can set their own hours in which to work.

Interested students attend clinics where the Intramural Department goes over the rules and the mechanics of the sport. Then the students must successfully complete a test on the rules and the mechanics to become an official.

Once an official, a student may work as often as he/she would like. Most officials put in six to 10 hours of work each week. By the end of the year, some officials will have officiated over 100 games.

In 1988-89, over 35 officials worked 60 games and three of those officials worked over 150 games. "Intramural officials do a good job of officiating while keeping control of the teams involved in the game," Pat McCail, a student who frequently participates in intramurals, said.

"Without them, there would be no intramurals, and.

Anyone interested in becoming an

Anyone interested in becoming an official should contact the Intramural Office at 737-3161, or attend a rules and mechanics clinic. Basketball clinics are Monday, Oct. 23 and Thursday, Oct. 26 at 6 p.m. in 2014 Carmichael Gym.

Poole should open notes

amuel Poole needs to get off his horse and give UNC System President C.D. Spangler and two board members copies of the Poole Commission notes.

Poole, the board vice-chairman, kept the lone copy of the notes, notes that cost taxpayers $40,000. An attorney for the N.C. Press Association says it is public record no matter who has the report.

Poole wants the investigation to "die a natural death" by keeping it secret. Poole is actually keeping it alive by arousing the curiousity of the media and the Board of Governors. Keeping the Poole notes secret posse various questions about the BOG, N.C. State and Spangler's policy and decision-making.

The Poole notes is not a policy-setting document. The notes was an investigation of the NCSU basketball program, and Spangler based his Aug. 25 decision on that report. The BOG members should have a copy of the notes because it may contain information that may concern them, but did not concern Spangler.

notes because it may contain information that may concern them, out did not concern Spangler.

There could be some information in the notes that would support the termination of men's basketball at NCSU. There could be some evidence that supports head basketball coach Jim Valvano. The board and the public only got what Poole wanted them to get.

The law states that all documents, made or received, connected with the transaction of public business are public records. NCSU is not only a public institution but a business.

NCSU is trying to recover from the "Personal Fouls" hoopla. By keeping the report secretive, the wounds are not healing. Instead, the wounds are widening and becoming infected. If NCSU is to heal properly, the Poole notes should be open to the public.

A different kind of fair tarting Wednesday and running until Sunday is N.C. State's annual Dry Days Fair. The fair, which runs in conjunction with Alcohol Awareness Week, is a celebration of sobriety.

During those days events will be sponsored to show the unenlightened, the many, the ignorant, that alcohol is not a necessity. Obviously, fair planners are not trying to end the practice of imbibing spirits and liquid grain. Rather, they are attempting to encourage responsible drinking.

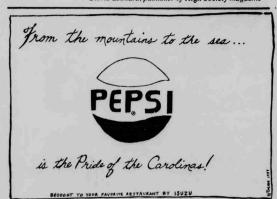

Students may even learn that they have the option not to drink and it will not affect their having a good time. If anyone should doubt the wisdom of this, just try this little test. Go to the next suite party or "dry rush" fratemity party at Brent Place, pick out a victim and sit back and wait. As their blood alcohol content increases so does the fun you can have. Play little mind games, do neat tricks with your hands, or just borrow their wallet and let them treat you to dinner. Come morning they will never remember. Plus you can tease them about giving sacrifice to the porcelain god.

Not only will the fair stress that parties can succeed without alcohol, it will attempt to educate people about the stupid selfishness of drunk driving.

This fair is an excellent idea. Anyone who has ever gone to a campus party has noticed the importance placed on alcohol consumption. Often times partygoers feel that to have fun they must drink. How often have you or your friends gone out and gotten "puking" drunk? Nothing like a little retching to prove that you are having a good time, eh?

So go out and see the booths, see the presentations and keep the fair's theme in mind.

Nation needs more clothes, less pride

Playboy should be banned! I am absolutely delighted with the Women's Resource Coalition and the protest hey staged against Playboy. As one WRC member was quoted in the Oct. 13 edition of Technician, "We don't think Playboy is appropriate to an educational institution." I wish I had someone like that to make intelligent decisions for me, because all too often the rational side of my mind is blinded by the overwhelming lust and violence promoted by Playboy. Yes, when I see a nude woman, especially a college student, I lose all sanity and restraint as I envision women as trivial sexual objects. Of course, such lusty reactions should be chopped off at the base of the problem, which happens to be the proliferation of sultry pomography throughout our nation's educational institutions. (Shame, shame! What did you think I was going to chop off?)
Many steps would have to be taken to ensure the purity of our campus.

What did you think I was going to chop off?)

Many steps would have to be taken to ensure the purity of our campus.

To begin with, the numerous rolls of microfilm containing past years of Playboy issues would have to be apprehended from the authorities of that horribly liberal institution, D.H. Hill Library. It does not matter that the films are black and white negatives (which renders nude photographs virtually incomprehensible), there just might be some perverted male on campus who would attempt to derive cheap sexual stimulation from the films. Despite the amount of scholastically beneficial information contained in Playboy's surveys, articles and interviews, the possibility that a deranged mind could receive sexual gratification necessitates the burning of all scandalous microfilm.

geranged mind could receive sexual gratification necessitates the burning of all scandalous microfilm.

The next course of action would be to expel any student who considers herself attractive enough to pose for Playboy. This policy would not be limited to those women who actually posed for the magazine; any female on campus who appears to consider herself good-looking would be eligible for expulsion. After all, N.C. State is not an institution for modeling opportunities.

This brings up another problem: it would appear that some people think the purpose of a university is to provide a foundation for career development. Hey, get with it people!

The real purpose for attending this school is to focus and narrow our views so that we will become ardent supporters of narrow-minded politicians who oppose outrageously degrading art and pomography like Playboy.

Twenty years from now our generation will be looked upon to correct the faults of the U.S. Constitution, like the freedom of religion, and even worse, the freedom of religion, and even worse, the freedom of respech (hopefully, our esteemed political predecessors will have already done away with such nasty little hindrances before it is our turn to rule the country).

Anyway, to finalize the moral purification of our campus, it would be necessary to es, less pride institute certain clothing ordinances. The first step would involve the burning of any flashy, colorful apparel that would attract undue attention to the wearer. Therefore all yellow, red, orange, pink polka-dot and bright blue garments would be replaced by gray, brown, black, camouflage and olivedrab clothing.

The next step would be to set a minimum requirement on the amount of clothes that each person should wear, thereby hiding any and all bodily traits.

During the fall and spring semesters the minimum would be 30 pounds of clothing while in public, with a generous reduction to 20 pounds for private areas like apartments and residence hall rooms.
Students taking summer courses would have a minimum requirement of 25 pounds of clothing and would be allowed to carry umbrellas to block the sun's heating affects.

Obviously, the long-range benefits of the plans outlined in this column would be the reduction of male lusts and desires for the female form. Since the male would not be able to see the basic shape of the female body, he would naturally forget what it looked like and lose all interest in women (out of sight, out of mind), devoting all of its time to drinking beer and watching sports.

With a little time and luck, we can get this

sports.

With a little time and luck, we can get this country back to the Puritan standards it was founded on.

Eliminate favoritism

It was with shock and outrage that I recently learned of the assault by seven wrestlers on three citizens of Raleigh. This only reminded me of times as an undergraduate when I would see an athlete at a party physically intimidate or assault another student. The typical response by the university was to "warn" or "reprimand" the individual. In other words nothing was done other than to perpetuate the notion that an athlete at the university lived by a different set of rules.

Certainly, there is a great deal of pressure to field-winning teams in today's college athletics. However, while athletes are enrolled at N.C. State, they should have education as their primary focus and they should conduct themselves like civilized members of society.

If these young men are guilty of these crimes, they should immediately be members of society.

If these young men are guilty of these crimes, they should immediately be expelled from the university. Any other action would state that athletics are simply too important to impose minimum standards of conduct on "the gifted ones".

Wet head is better

This letter is in response to an article printed in the Oct. 9 edition of Technician, in which the writer came into "The Cutting Edge" for a haircut, as well as visiting two other hair salons on Hillsborough Street. He mentioned that he paid more at one place for a haircut, which he was not satisfied with, but thought it was better because it cost more. We would like to correct him on the point about The Cutting Edge specializing in "dry cuts." This is not how we work.

We prefer to shampoo first, which costs us

Edge specializing in "dry cuts." Into its non-how we work.

We prefer to shampoo first, which costs us more. Therefore, there is an additional $2 charge. Unfortunately, most students cannot afford the extra expense. To make things less unpleasant for the cutter as well as the customer, it is our policy to spray the hair with a water bottle. Dry hair tends to slide away from the scissors, linger in the air, or land in the stylist's eyes or on the customer's nose. It would make no sense for us not to take the extra minute that it takes to dampen hair when the alternative would be undesirable for everyone all around. This person who visited our shop was either grossly uninformed or just has a negative attitude.

The assumption that we would rush through a cut to go eat is ridiculous. We have a microwave to heat cold food. A bad haircut leaves the customer unhappy. Doing hair is our "bread and butter." Why would we risk losing customers when it is they who put our food on the table? We were also amused to see our coupon which we regularly run in Technician just beneath such a bad review. We are just hard working girls that do take pride in our work and are very offended by the article. Everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion, but to write an opinion as if it were fact, is unfair to us, our profession and all of our satisfied customers.

Editor's Note: This letter was also signed by four other employees of The Cutting Edge hair salon.

I am a student at N.C. State, classified as a junior, a fourth year resident of Metcalf Residence Hall, and a "R" permit holder. I could have paid $156 for one of the new '9D'" permits, but I decided instead to save $36 and purchase an "R" permit. After all, there were an abundance of spaces available for "R" permit holders that were much closer to Metcalf Residence Hall than the Dan Allen Drive Deck would be. I was also afraid that in the event "DD" permits ran out I would be assigned a "F" permit. Living on Central Campus and having a "F" permit mans long walks so I preferred to go with what appeared to me the more likely choice of getting an "R" permit. I did get my "R" permit to go with what appeared to me the more likely choice of getting an "R" permit.

I did get my "R" permit but I was instantly made aware that it was no longer worth the $120 I paid for it. Most residents of campus took the news that the "C/R" lot on Cates Avenue was being reassigned for "DD" only ratther harshly. We became aware of the difficulty in finding a parking place near our places of residence right away on the night before classes started. All of the spaces I could see from Sullivan Residence Hall to Reynolds Coliseum were filled, except for the "DD" lot. I thought to myself, "I know the Commuters are going

The bottom line is that we, the holders of "C" and "R" permits did not get what we had bargained for. I can be open minded about the weather related delays in the completion of the Dan Allen Drive Deck. I am glad that you realize that the "DD" permit holders did not get what they paid for and are giving them refunds and a place to park in the former "C/R" spaces. However, just as the "DD" permit holders did not plan to not have a deck to park in, we the "C" and "R" permit holders did not plan on not being allowed to park in the Cates Avenue Lot. Therefore, I feel that the "C" and "R" permit holders deserve the same refund of $3 per month as the "DD" permit holders.

Solution for racism

Solution for racism

Every time I pick up Technician I see either an article or letter about racism. It appears everyone has some sort of opinion (or something like that) on the subject.

--Well, I am here to say I have a solution to racism that is guaranteed to work. Now, it will take world cooperation. The plan? Everyone must marry a person of a different race than they are.

Their children will be half and half (Amazing!) and they must marry someone who is a different half and half. etc. You get the picture. In a couple generations we will all look the same (sort of a yellowish, I guess) and live happily ever after.

Now, I know you are saying, "What color is this guy and what kind of woman does he want?" Well, I am white and I have this thing for Hawaiian women!

Catenis, Philp lead tennis team to tourney

By Fred Hartman

The N.C. State men's tennis team will travel to Atlanta this weekend to play in their second tournament of the fall season, the Georgia Tech Invitational of the fall season, the Georgia Tech Invitational.

Singles and doubles competition will begin today and continue through Sunday. Teams from through Sunday. Teams from throughout the southeast, including South Carol in a Davidson, Furman and all of the ACC schools, will send players to compete in individual competition.

Henry explained that there will be no team totals scored. He went on to say that each player will represent his respective team but will only compete to establish points for an individual rank me. Henry said the team's fall tournaments are basically a time for himself as the coach "to get a look at our own team members in competition, especially the younger kids. It gives the freshmen some good experience with other ACC competition."

experience with other ACC compe-tition." Wolfpack team captain James Catenis and sophomore standout Glen Philp will lead the squad in what should prove to be a produc-tive tournament and season. "The team should be really good," Catenis said. "It hink that we've got the potential, it's just a matter of everyone coming together and play-ing well."

As a senior, Catenis will assume a leadership role this season in an elfont to help some of the younger players adjust to a higher level of competition.

"I guess that since I've been on the team for several years, it's sout of my job to share my experiences with them," Catenis said.

Also on his list of goals for the season, Catenis expressed a strong desire to win the ACC championship in the spring.

"I want to win the ACC because this is my senior year." he said, "but more important than myself, I want the team to win the ACC championship."

Sophomore Philp should prove to be the dominant force on the court for the Wolfpack this season. After coming off of an injury from a few weeks ago, Philp is looking to get back into the flow of playing again.

The injury was a dislocation of the thumb on his left hand. Since he is a left-handed player, Philip was forced to sit out and wait for the injury to heal.

"It's getting better," he said. "I'm not one-hundred percent yet but my play is coming along fine."

Like Catenis, Philip is looking formad to the team developing into a legitimate contender for the spring.

"The team is looking really good," Philip said, "It will be great for us to get a boundary (during the fall tournaments) as a judgement on where our progress should be in the spring."

ACC Roundup

Time: Noon Site: Byrd Stadium. College Park, Md. (45,000) Series: Maryland leads 18-14, including a 34-24 win last year TV: ACC network, live

Duke hasn't beaten Maryland since 1972, so the Terrapins have history on their side. Unfortunately for Maryland, that's about it. Duke had a week off to prepare after impressive victories over Clemson and Army. Duke senior defensive captain John Howell, who hasn't played this year after starting at linebacker in 1988, practiced this week and could see action against the Terps. Howell should provide support against Maryland quarterback Neil O'Donnell. O'Donnell and running back Ricky Johnson combine for a potent one-two offensive punch. But offense isn't coach Joe Krivak's worry. Maryland has given up almost 350 yards per game, including almost 200 on the ground. Duke QB Billy Ray, wide receiver Clarkston Hines and running backs Randy Cuthbert and Roger Boone have packed most of the offensive firepower for the Blue Devils.

Technician Prediction: Duke 31-17.

Game: North Carolina (1-5, 0-3) at Georgia Tech (2-3, 2-2) Time: 1 p.m. Site: Bobby Dodd Stadium/Grant Field (46,000) in Atlanta Series: Tied 11-11-2, including a 20-17 UNC win last year

Georgia Tech has to be fired up for this one. After all, the Tar Heels' victory last year over Georgia Tech was their only victory of 1988. This year, UNC already has one, so the pressure for a win is off coach Mack Brown. Don't expect win #2 for the Heels in this one. The Yellow Jackets proved they can play with anybody by thrashing Clemson 30-14 in Death Valley last week. Georgia Tech held the Tigers to 111 yards on the ground, a season low for Clemson. QB Shawn Jones has tossed six touchdown passes and no interceptions in the last two gaames. And we all know about the weak UNC pass defense. The Heels ar now going with Jonathan Hall at quarterback due to the injury to Chuckle Burnette. Also, UNC lost its starting fullback, Michael Benefield, to a neck injury.

Technician prediction: Georgia Tech 33-17.

Game: Wake Forest (1-4-1, 1-2) at Virginia (5-2, 3-1) Time: 4 p.m. Site: Scott Stadium (42,000), Charlottesville, Va Series: Virginia leads 19-11, including a 34-14 win last year

Virginia is on a march to a possible ACC title and Wake Forest is in the way. The Cavaliers are lead by the nation's top passer (effeciency-wise), junior Shawn Moore. Moore returned from an injury last week against UNC, throwing for 207 yards and two touchdowns in limited playing time. Moore's favorite targets are sophomore wide receiver Herman Moore and tight end Bruce McGonnigal. The pair have combined for 47 catches, 940 yards and 10 TDs. The Virginia defense has been porous, giving up 383 total yards per game. Wake QB Phil Barnhill, who has passed for 1,335 yards and six touchdowns this year, will test the Cavaliers. If he has a good day, it could be an interesting game. Technician prediction: Virginia 34-10 shots from point-blank range and Gutierrez took a third, but a diving goalkeeper and a scrambling Radford defense stopped the

Finally at the 73:11 mark, Radford ran out of

Guiterrez threaded the defense with a perfect pass to Brose, who drilled it in.
Tonly 55 seconds later, the Wolfpack scored again. Bell took three shots in a row, all of which were blocked or deflected, until the ball came to Bader. He killed a shot from 15 yards out to put the game out of reach 3-0.
Wolfpack coach George Tarantini then sent his team into its time stalling offense. Radford couldn't mount a counterattack because they could never hold the ball against State's double team defense.

Whenever a Radford player got the ball in scoring range, two, three or sometimes four Wolfpack players would swarm to the ball.

Tarantini had good comments about his team's play.

"Today we finished and that's the main thine."

Tarantini had good comments about his team's play.

The Radford woes continued when, with only 56 seconds left in the match, Brose blasted in his second goal from 10 yards out on the left corner. It was the second time in three matches Brose had scored two goals.

The Pack's new three-forward offense featured Brose, Gutierrez, and a rare start by Mera. Mera started because Alex Sanchez is on the bench with a knee injury sustained last week.

The Wolfpack dominated the game statistically,

Florida problems should keep Spurrier at Duke

So where has everyone been? Last year, State set a season attendance record of 328,700 and had three home crowds of more than 50,000. It'll take a miracle to equal that this year.

The season opened with three home conference games in the first four weeks of the season, and attendance barely cleared 40,000 for the first two of them.
Last year's team was coming off a 4-7 season that seemed very much like a step backwards, yet the fans quickly took to that team and began filling up the stadium.

The Pack drew 237,400 for its first five home dates last year, and while Clemson and South Carolina helped pump that up considerably, the difference over this year is more than 4,000 people per game. Where are they?

When you balance the admittedly weaker schedule on the one hand with greatly increased expectations on the other, you'd think this team should draw about as well. Why hasn't it?

Aren't you glad you're not a Florida fan these days? Besides being the only fans in this time zone with less class than South Carolina's fans, Gator fans must have a lot on their minds these days, such as, "Will we have a football or basketball team a year from now?"

Even if Fle ida escapes the death penalty in both sports, the squalor left behind by Galen Hall and seep Steve spurier at Duke for another year, which didn't seem possible a week ago. That would be poetic justice for Duke, which got screwed out of a berth in the Hall-of-Fame Bowl by the Gators last year when Hall, his job in jeopardy even then, refused to play the Blue Devils.

Seems Hall didn't want the folks at Florida to make the obvious comparisons between himself and Spurrier that a bowl matchup would provide.
