Monteith: NCSU will deal with racial violence

By Wade Babcock
News Editor

Student Body President Brian Nixon said it was important to deal with the racial violence that had swept across the state in recent days. Nixon noted that, while he was surprised by the severity of the situation, he was not surprised by its occurrence.

"As a student leader, my job is to be a role model to the other students, and I feel like I have failed in that capacity," Nixon said. "I have been working with the administration and other student leaders to create a plan to address this issue."

Nixon noted that, while he was surprised by the severity of the situation, he was not surprised by its occurrence.

"I think it's important for us to come together and have an open and honest conversation about this issue," he said. "We need to work together to create a community where everyone feels safe and welcome."

Racial violence has been a problem in the state for many years, and Nixon said he was committed to working with the administration and other student leaders to create a plan to address this issue. He added that he was also committed to working with the faculty and staff to ensure that everyone feels safe and welcome on campus.

Roundtable supports condoms at NCSU

By Wade Babcock
News Editor

The Student Body President's Roundtable voted 11-3 Wednesday in favor of putting condom machines in residence halls.

The motion passed after a long debate on the issue. Some members expressed concern for the possible damage that the university's usage might suffer to the eyes of prospective freshmen and their parents if they were to see the condoms. Others were more concerned with the health benefits of the procedure.

Alexander, a former secretary of the Student Body Council, said his pants might have gotten dirty about NCSU's new condom machine when he visited.

"I'm a Student, Alexander and Union Activities Board President Roger Best, a sophomore and former editor of the Student Body Council. Former Student Council President Marlowe Larson suggested that the machines could promote the use of condoms on campus.

"Where do we draw the line? How can we do this?" Best asked.

However, Student Senate Provost Richard Rice said: "I believe that we need to be careful about the health implications of our policies."

Ivan Jones, editor-in-chief of the Technocrat, was asked about his reaction to the motion.

"I'm a little surprised," Jones said. "I thought the Student Body Council was going to make the decision on this issue."

The motion was amended to include putting the condom machines in residence halls.

Rice said: "I think that it's important for us to be responsible about the health of our students."

N.C. State women's soccer team faces racism at NC State

By Paul Woolworth

N.C. State women's soccer team faced racial incidents at NC State.

Racial and ethnic prejudices on campus have reached an intolerable level, Student Body President Brian Nixon said at the Student Senate Wednesday at their first meeting of the spring semester. Nixon mentioned a number of incidents that have led to the violence and said he cannot stand by and let this happen.

"The situation is intolerable and it cannot be tolerated," Nixon said. "I cannot stand by and let this happen."

Wives' stories don't jibe

Officials from Student Government made a Public Safety effort to get an idea of what is going on in the community. The effort was given to the students of Public Safety at N.C. State.

Elliott Streck, a freshman, said he was a victim of a recent mugging. He said he had a brush with a group of men while walking back from the Student Union.

"I was walking back from the Student Union and I got mugged," Streck said. "I was walking back from the Student Union and I got mugged."

State Judicial Board tightens case security

The State Judicial Board, whose mandate is to protect the judiciary, has been criticized for its handling of cases. Eight NC State attorneys are accused of mishandling cases in the past year, with one attorney facing disciplinary action.

The primary issue appears to be the lack of professionalism. Many attorneys have been found to have failed to follow proper procedures and protocols.

The State Judicial Board is a critical part of the legal system, and its effectiveness is crucial to the administration of justice. The board is responsible for ensuring that the judiciary is held accountable for its actions.

The board has been criticized for its slow response to complaints and its lack of transparency.

Students' performance makes 'The Foreigner' a winner

By Mark Schaffer

If you're one of the few people who were lucky enough to get tickets to "The Foreigner," for the comedy ride of your life.

Thompson Theatre's latest soldout performance was incredibly funny — it's hard not to love.

Bill Culpper plays Charlie Baker, a depressed andopensource Englishman with serious personal difficulties, or so he thinks. Charlie is afraid to talk to people and wants to be left alone at his home in Georgia.

His friend Freddy Leesull, played by Edward Pumphrey, suggests that the idea Charlie could pretend to be a foreigner who doesn't understand English. Although Charlie is reluctant at first, he goes along with the plan after considering a conversation he should not have heard.

Since the other characters believe Charlie understands, they launch into long and farcical "sight" where they're not, and Charlie is included.

Mary Dyles plays Bettyuppary, asking the role of an older, slightly out-of-touch country woman.

Catherine Slatyer, played by Kelly McNeil, is incredibly funny and touching in her second show. Dave Marshall Leelzy, played by Jackson From, is a reliable and funny foil.

The scenes are the most brilliant and best acted. It could not come as a surprise that Thompson's best production of the season is sold out.

Congratulations are in order for Thompson's production of the foreign. The only other chance to see this wonderful show is the next two performances.

Villagers are severely upset in government navels raids. The same company also offers bears. These are probably the same type that Dean Johnson used in "Miami Vice."

Out of the cooled ad is one for a catalog for making your own their is your own home. It is inte- testing, but it seems like a joke. Who would spend $3 for a cata- log that says bear and a toy? You best believe you'll wish you had a bear and a toy baby for $3. The ad says bear and baby for $3.

The way this bears catalog would be a fun toy. The advertisement specifies that this slinger was made especially for campsites, fun- tions and parties. It supposedly launches 130 yards at 30 mph. This dollars is per- tinent, but the part about the speed is missing me out this on my Christmas list.

A real pile of an ad is one that comes out with the candy, wrath, and the classic "Wear a Bear, have an incredible array of bears, shapes and furry things." Cost ad, but it seems like a ware since it's just a box guide for $7. If you cannot come up with your own bears and your friends should not try either.

The prescribed ad is one for removing blackbills. Someone is making a vacuum tank that sucks them out in seconds. This would be good as a gift for some one you love.

I am particularly interested in the ads that seem to be right which is the escapement. There are both national and international guides. I could get some good pictures over Christmas break.

Another company is offering "I've Been Framed By Myer's And I'm a Bumper Stickers." The ad claims Minnie Mouse is the greatest living I'ma sex. A truly dominant woman, and whip-maker. I can live without it, but it is free upon request.

"The Bumberspot is International is offering "A ticket to the "Beach Party and Party." Obviously, the same company that sells nudist camp.

I have always wanted to call those tell-free numbers that offer extremely high paying jobs in foreign land. The kind of job that comes back with a check of $5,000 or more.

The course ships that are for the most part are of no help. However, the Carolina and the Caribbean. I will do that after I am finished reading the book.

The beach is set up in the foreign, complete with the king and lady of the castle, a large, queen, princess, and others.

Annas Turak, who plays Dennis, will leave you feeling happy and energized. The performance is excellent.

The show is set to come on a few times at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. at the Foreign. The only other chance to see this wonderful show is the next two performances.

Wolfpack makes second straight appearance; Tar Heels set eighth championship

By Tim Zettler

The terms "rival cooker rates" has been used in a lot this year in connection with the Tar Heels and the Wolfpack. After the match in which Michael Jordan went to the North Carolina-Duke game in Durham last week, the team will try to take the rivalry cooker all the way to the NCAA finals, a goal the team's won't landscape a North Carolina-Duke semi-final.

The Wolfpack is hosting the NCAA Final Four and will entertain the team from UNC-Chapel Hill, Santa Clara, and St. Mary's in a well-documented matchup. The Wolfpack advanced to the national semifinals after beating Maryland in a thrilling overtime game in which they were predicted to win. After winning the game, they advanced to the national championship game against the Tar Heels. The Tar Heels, however, were predicted to win, and they did. In the end, the Tar Heels emerged victorious, leaving the Wolfpack with a second-place finish.

Sheridan applauds team, Hokie defense

By Lee Montgomery

The Hokies aren’t the only ones enjoying themselves.

Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer has been a little bit of a villain and one of the most enjoyable characters in college football. The Tech has been riding their high all season long, and it’s been fun to watch.

The Hokies have been a force to be reckoned with, and their defense has been particularly impressive. They have been dominating teams on a regular basis, and their high-flying offense has been complemented by their strong defense.

Beamer has been a mastermind behind the Hokie defense, and his team has been a joy to watch. They have been playing with a lot of enthusiasm and energy, and it’s been a pleasure to see them in action.

Racists scum of the earth

Threatening an individual's life is not a laughing matter. Another such threat this past month, several black student leaders have received calls and letters that have threatened their lives. Student Body President Brian Nixon and WKNC general manager Elke Alexander are among the black leaders who have received death threats.

Why would these leaders receive death threats? Several of the leaders feel they have received the threat because of their skin color. Skin color is not an accurate gauge of how well these students perform their jobs. The students were not chosen on the basis of their skin color. Instead, Nixon and Alexander were elected because students and the Student Media Authority, the governing body that chooses the general manager for WKNC, felt they were the best qualified candidates for their positions.

The individual who insists on threatening these leaders is cowardly and the scum of the earth. By threatening Nixon and Alexander's lives, the individual is showing their ignorance. If they have problems with the way Nixon and Alexander are doing their jobs, they should make an appointment with them to discuss their problems.

The university is also hurt by these senseless and cowards threat because it darkens the shadow already cast on N.C. State. For outsiders looking in, N.C. State appears to be a campus under siege by racial turmoil.

Several racially motivated acts of violence have reportedly occurred on our campus. Acts of violence get an individual nowhere, except for jail. Martin Luther King Jr. and Goughi achieved their means through nonviolence, so why can't we do the same?

Interim Chancellor Larry Morehead has said that acts of racial violence "will not be tolerated on this campus. As chancellor, I will suspend any faculty, staff, or students engaging in acts of violence pending the process begins.

Anyone who makes death threats is insensitive not only to the students, but to the university as well. Cowards, not student leaders, die many times before their death. It is in the best interests of our university that the individuals be caught and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Soccer team goes for title

This Saturday may be your only chance this year to see a Wolfpack soccer game. With Virginia Tech and the Hokies in town, the Wolfpack women's soccer team will be taking on the top-seeded University of North Carolina Tar Heels at Memorial Stadium.

Surely you can take an hour or so out of your busy schedule to come support the team. The opportunity to embrace Carolina once again this year should be incentive enough.

The team's tremendous talents have been virtually unnoticed by the student body for far too long. Now is the time to change that. Carolina gets to pop her head for another game. State should at least be able to muster a sizable number of friends.

There is no time to show your support for the team this Saturday. Miss a bit of the football game if you must — seeing our soccer team on its way to a national title will be worth it.

Smetana is wrong

I write in as an ethnic of the from that other world that Professor Smetana obviously fears and despises. Why I ask you, and those insightful comments that appeared in your columns last Monday (Olde, 4:1). The editorial as well as the article by Jim Senior, "In the light of a tragic event," is placed in the center of this fragmented university. Perhaps if the editorial and article were to serve as a uniting element of some sort. A common bond that we as a people can be held together are both articles required reading in all classes on campus.

But perhaps all this is futile. Professor Smetana's lack of sensitivity to the result of the recent events is in itself the cause of a certain muddle that would be labeled another Wake Tech. Is it simply an as should things? Same back to State-College?

I agree totally with Jim Chappell. "Thank you, Dr. Morehead, for taking up for the sad occasion". I would only add that Morehead's memorandum will guide us through the difficult times the university finds itself in.

The question of what racism means to us is not a new one. It is a question that has been raised and discussed for years. But it is a question that continues to be relevant and important in today's society.

In recent years, there has been a growing awareness of the impact of racism on individuals, communities, and society as a whole. This awareness has led to increased efforts to address and combat racism, both at the individual and institutional levels.

However, despite these efforts, racism remains a pervasive and ongoing problem. It affects individuals of all races and ethnicities, and it continues to shape the experiences of people in many ways.

In light of these challenges, it is important for us to continue to reflect on the meaning of racism and to explore strategies for addressing it in our lives and in our communities. This requires a commitment to ongoing education, dialogue, and action. By working together, we can make progress towards a world in which racism is no longer a barrier to justice and equity for all.

Director John Waters, who has gained a notorious reputation with his outrageous and controversial brand of filmmaking, returns to the screen with his biggest and most bizarre epic yet. Set in Waters' beloved downtown of Baltimore, circa 1962, Hairspray is best described by its offbeat creator as "an all-talking, all-dancing sort of big-budget civil rights comedy dealing with glamour-starved teen-age celebrities, their blue-collar stage mothers, and their quest for mental health. Need we say more?"

Featuring an all-star cast that includes Sonny Bono, Debbie Harry, Jerry Stiller, Pia Zadora, and everyone's favorite 300-pound transvestite Divine, Hairspray is a very unusual musical comedy with something to offend, amuse, and entertain everyone.
