Alumnus to be honored with NCSU professorship

By Mark Tosczak
Staff writer

Maybe you've seen him on his PBS show, "N.C. People," or maybe your little brother or sister goes to the school named after him. He is William Friday and on Monday, Oct. 8 Chancellor Larry Monteith announced at a luncheon that funds have been raised for the endowment of a distinguished university professorship to honor him.

The co-chairmen of the Friday Professorship Committee reported total commitments of $1.2 million. R.J. Reynolds contributed $250,000 and the UNC Board of Governors supplied matching funds of $334,000 from the Distinguished Professors' Trust Fund appropriated by the N.C. General Assembly.

Friday, an alumnus of NCSU, was president of his senior class and earned a bachelor's degree in textiles in 1941. During World War II he served as a second lieutenant in the navy. He earned a law degree in 1948 from UNC Chapel Hill. In 1956, still only in his mid-30s, Friday became president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, which at the time consisted of North Carolina State College, UNC-Chapel Hill and Woman's College of Greensboro.

When Friday retired 30 years later, the UNC system included 15 four-year institutions and numerous other activities, including N.C. Public TV.

Friday has been honored with the Watauga Medal, the N.C. Public Service Award and was named NCSU's Centennial Alumnus by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Friday has served on many national and regional commissions and committees, such as the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, the President's Task Force on Education for Presidents Johnson and Carter and the Southern Regional Education Board. Currently he is co-chairing a national study of intercollegiate athletics.

Several notable speakers at the luncheon praised Friday for his accomplishments and dedication to education.

Unlimited Workshop to help students with values

By Lina Cuartas
Staff Writer

With the intention of giving students excitement, motivation and self-confidence to get the job they want, a unique life-changing experiential workshop has been scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 21 at Mission Valley Inn.

The workshop is being produced by Unlimited Potential, a division of Human Dimensions, which is a human resource consulting firm.

"The proper point and time to examine which values you want to keep and which to let go is in your 20s," said Eileen Broer, former vice-president of three Fortune 500 Companies before starting Unlimited Potential.

"What makes our workshop so unique is that students align their values in the order that makes sense for them. When this happens a physical change occurs. People feel more connected, grounded and centered. They show confidence. They experience an understanding of what is happening and they walk out knowing instead of just learning what they want," Broer said.

The workshop is divided into seven sessions: the language of power, how to determine what you want, marketing yourself, professional dining etiquette, how to find the job you want, how to negotiate for the salary and position you want and how to achieve your goals.

The first secret of the workshop centers around determining goals. UP believes that if individuals do what excites them, life will be effortless. The morning will be spent learning how to determine what they want in life based on their values.

"These values," said Ward Williams, senior partner at UP, "go way beyond the job you will get. They can be applied to relationships, employment and recreation. They can also serve as a tool, not just to help find a job but to help find out who you are."

The second secret is preparation. Participants will learn table manners, how to dress professionally and how to act on an interview on a corporate level. Judy Cross, owner of the John Robert Powers School of Modeling, will conduct these sessions.

Helen Crompton, a nationally recognized career counselor, will conduct a session on how to find the perfect job. Participants will learn the process of job hunting that will best fit their personality.

Al Urzi, an interpersonal communications expert, will conduct a session on negotiation skills. His emphasis will be on communication so that students can speak the language of the interviewer to be sure to get their point across.

"This is the first time ever that anything like this has been done at N.C. State University. It is a wonderful opportunity to learn how to control your life to give yourself the outcome that you want," said Williams.

The Alumni Association has endorsed the UP workshop because they feel it is important. The investment in this workshop is $75. Bryant Allen, assistant director of the Alumni Association, who is also in charge of The Senior Program, has provided a $5 discount for every senior who wants to attend.

Allen said, "Make an investment in yourself to make your education work for you."

The speakers individually charge $50-$100 an hour for a private session.

"This is not a lecture; it is a hands on workshop. The panelists are all experts in their field. You build confidence and the proper attitude and skills to know what you want to get out of life," said Broer.

Joe Brown, academic counselor for the men's basketball team, said, "I was glad to hear about the program and I strongly endorse what UP is doing. I see it as a valuable tool for the student to have as they leave college to enter the business world. I feel that the seminar is well worth the investment."

The primary concern of UP is the outcome of the workshop. They intend for participants to feel more positive and confident and to know why they have certain values and how they got them.

"Self-confidence, belief in yourself. It comes from knowing what you want and how and where to get it with integrity. We are going to show everyone that comes to the seminar that they have unlimited potential," Broer said.

Senate candidate Gantt says education at top of his campaign

By Heather Harrel
Staff Writer

U.S. Senate hopeful Harvey Gantt has placed improving education in America and ensuring equal access to a quality education for all students at the forefront of his campaign.

"I really want students to pay attention to what I consider a top priority issue and that is education," Gantt said in an interview on Oct. 1.

"I feel the federal government needs to get involved in a partnership that provides resources and moral support in early childhood education, and, on the backside of the educational process, loans and grants to college students," he said. Gantt suggests that North Carolina revamp its entire public education system to improve the state's low ranking in SAT and other test scores.

"If we approach this aggressively, it will be an appropriate investment to go along with what I think will be a needed restructuring of the whole public education system in this country," he said.

Gantt also said he objects to any cuts in the federal government or state-level education budgets.

"It bothers me when we start to cut out on what should be one of our top priorities," he said. Gantt believes that it is vital that North Carolina be prepared to enter the 21st century with a well-trained work force, which depends on students currently in school.

"We can't allow education to lag in this state," he said.

One controversial aspect of the Senate campaign in North Carolina has been television advertising. Gantt dismissed the assertion that he has been forced to take a defensive position as a result of Helms' negative ads therefore allowing Helms to determine the primary campaign issues.

Gantt said that he has decided to stay on the offensive with ads on primary issues such as education and the environment, but the abortion issue is a different story.

"The only Helms ad we've really responded to or felt the need to respond to has been the ad involving the gross distortions and outright lies on the abortion issue," Gantt said.

"It's a difficult moral issue to have to deal with. I've said all along it's a decision that women have to make alone," he said.

Gantt denied Helms' accusations that Gantt advocated abortions on the basis of sex selection or in the last weeks of pregnancy saying his statements were taken out of context.

"I've never advocated that and I know no woman who advocates that," Gantt said.

Gantt cited historical figures such as John F. Kennedy, Abraham Lincoln and Martin Luther King Jr. as leaders whom he has admired and who have influenced him.

"Most of my heroes are people who have the courage and conviction to lead even sometimes in the face of a great deal of opposition and were able through their persuasive powers to convince people to

Session to provide information on master of public affairs

Technician News Service

An information session for the N.C. State Master of Public Affairs evening degree program will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 24, at the McKinnon Center, at Western Boulevard and Gorman Street.

The program is 40 semester hours and is designed for students seeking professional management careers in state and local government. It is sponsored by the NCSU Political Science and Public Administration Department.

The session will provide information on the program's curriculum, procedures for admission, Graduate Record Exam, cost and registration schedules for spring and summer semesters. For information, call Alma Biagioli, Monday-Thursday, at 737-2481.

Fornes named associate dean of PAMS

By Punit Chhabra
Staff Writer

N.C. State's College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences named Raymond Fornes as its associate dean for research effective Oct. 1, 1990.

Fornes served in the position for a year as an interim while there was a search for someone to fill the position permanently. He has been a member of the College for 20 years in both the College of Textiles and the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

The Pitt County native has been a recipient of the NCSU Outstanding Teacher Award, the 1982

Fiber Society Award for Distinguished Achievement in Fiber Science and the Sigma Xi Scientist Research Award.

Fornes graduated from East Carolina University in 1965 with a bachelor's degree in mathematics, and then went on to earn his doctorate in physics at NCSU.

Currently, Fornes is working with a group of NCSU researchers in a study to determine the effects of acid rain on polymeric coatings such as those found in the paint on automobiles. So far, the research has shown that one component of acid rain which is released into the atmosphere when industries use coal power, sodium dioxide, can be quite detrimental to many polymeric coatings, Fornes said.

Fornes is also working on a NASA-sponsored project to develop a lightweight graphite-epoxy composite material which is equivalent in strength to steel.

His other accomplishments include chairing the Fiber Science Gordon Research Conference and serving as a National Academy of Sciences committee member. Fornes is also the immediate past president of the NCSU Chapter of Sigma Xi.

When asked about his research goals for the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences, Fornes said "I want to represent the college in its best possible light with a tremendous potential to interact with other programs on campus, as well as have it being the lead college in a number of research initiatives."

Dinner to mark beginning of N.C. State Century II Campaign

Technician News Services

Edward Hood Jr., vice chairman and executive officer of General Electric Co., will be the keynote speaker at a kick-off dinner at Reynolds Coliseum Thursday evening that will mark the beginning of the N.C. State Century II Campaign.

Hood, an NCSU alumnus, and Chancellor Larry Monteith will address about 800 university advocates to announce details of the $230 million campaign.

is "Opening New Doors" and celebrates the university's second century of teaching, research and public service.

Funds raised during the five-year campaign will be used to double endowments that support faculty development, graduate fellowships, undergraduate merit awards and support for the university library.

Also to benefit will be international programs, a new visual arts center, a visual and performing arts endowment, engineering research facilities and the proposed Centennial Center.

move life to a higher plane or to look at things in a much broader perspective," Gantt said.

Gantt asserted that government can benefit the people and that as a senator he would concentrate on local issues within the state.

Senators believe that the government can be compassionate, he said.

"It can be a partner that is interested in solving local problems," he added.

"My opponent spends a lot of the time with ideology on a worldwide basis," he said. "Let's focus and pay attention to us as a people," he concluded.

Editor's note: Technician plans to run a similar interview soon with incumbent republican Senator Jesse Helms.

Friday

"We ought to recognize the character of this very special person," Monteith said.

"This great system wouldn't be what it is today without Bill Friday," said C. D. Spangler, the current president of the UNC system. "He literally gave his life to higher education in North Carolina."

Wayne Corpening, co-chairman of the endowment committee, gave Friday credit for keeping UNC-system tuition among the lowest in the nation.

John Jordan, the other co-chairman, said "He directed the higher education of more than a million young North Carolinians." John Caldwell, a former NCSU chancellor, also spoke highly of Friday.

Monteith then presented Friday with several mementos, including an etched plate with the likeness of the bell tower.

When Friday himself spoke, he spoke mainly of the accomplishments of others and talked of the necessity to eliminate poverty and illiteracy in North Carolina in order to develop economic power and growth.

"I hope this professorship will be used in all my alma mater to help fulfill its evolution," he said.

Symposium to discuss issues in agricultural pest control

Technician News Service

Leaders in the field of agricultural natural products will gather at N.C. State for a two-day symposium, "Natural Products and Agricultural Biotechnology: Problems and Prospects."

Hosted by the NCSU College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the symposium is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 24, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., and Thursday, Oct. 25, from 9 a.m. to noon in room 2405 Williams Hall.

The symposium is meant to acquaint the scientific community in North Carolina with the prospects of new approaches to agricultural pest control.

Scientists have recognized the importance of naturally occurring chemicals as safe and effective tools in producing crops with natural resistance to pests. Natural products, produced by living things, are more subject to degradation and are less persistent than synthetic chemicals. The widely used pyrethroid insecticides, for example, with their low human toxicity, were originally developed from extracts of the chrysanthemum flower.

Speakers include internationally renowned experts from academic and government sectors. They will address lessening dependence upon man-made pesticides through biotechnology and the use of natural products in plant disease and insect control.

The symposium is sponsored in part by a grant from the North Carolina Biotechnology Center.

For further information, contact Scott Chilton, Department of Botany, 737-3792 or David Danehower, Dept. of Crop Science, 737-3216.

Gettin' Tired of Haulin' 'Em Around?

Tastes change. No matter how much you love music, there are some albums, CDs or cassettes you love less than others as time goes by—to the point that they become just one more thing to lug and load every time you move. You know you'll never play them again. But it's a shame to just throw them away. And who has time to have a garage sale just to try to sell a few albums? There's a better idea. Drop 'em by The Record Exchange. We'll check them out and make you an offer on those in demand and in good enough condition to be resellable. We probably won't be able to buy ALL your unwanted, but there's a pretty good chance we can lighten your load AND put a little extra cash in your pocket. Or, if you'd like to apply the proceeds towards some new tunes you will enjoy, we'll add an extra 10% to what you earn! And it's not an all-or-none kind of deal—you may wish to accept some offers and decline others. That's fine. Is there a drawback? You may have to find something else to collect your dust. And maybe a different form of exercise!

Struggling Pack gains confidence

Coach searches for answers, starts Jordan, George and Downs

By Jonathan Conrad
Staff Writer

The N.C. State football team went into its game against Appalachian State Saturday with some unanswered questions about its struggling offense.

When the game was over, the team came out of the game feeling better about its offense as State rolled to an easy 56-0 victory over the Mountaineers.

The offense was led by great performances from younger players on the team such as starting quarterback Terry Jordan, Ledel George and Gary Downs. The game brought out a lot of determination and emotion from the Wolfpack players as they tried to find some answers to their season-long problems on offense.

Not since the Western Carolina game had the State offense taken control of a contest as they did against ASU. With help from the Wolfpack defense, ranked sixth in the country, the offense started many of their scoring drives in good field position. This enabled the offense to begin to work like a cohesive unit once again.

Terry Jordan, sophomore starting quarterback, got over a shaky first half — five completions in 13 attempts for 46 yards — and played a solid and consistent second half. He completed all five of his passes in the second half for 76 yards.

Overall, Jordan threw for 122 yards, two touchdown passes and only one interception.

"I was a little nervous at the beginning of the game and happy to get the first play over with," Jordan said. "The coaches told me at half time what my problems were and I tried to correct them in the second half."

After the game, Jordan was still critical of his performance.

"I'm still not playing up to par, and I've got a long way to go," he said.

The offense got a spark from freshmen running backs Ledel George and Gary Downs. George returned six punts and one kickoff for 110 yards, and he ran the ball twice for 48 yards. Downs rushed 14 times for a total of 99 yards. Together, the whole backfield gained over 300 yards against the Mountaineer defense.

Head coach Dick Sheridan was pleased with the performance from his young players.

"I think Terry handled the decision-making part of it well. He didn't throw the ball as well as he is capable of," Sheridan said. "If he had been on target, he could have had a really big game."

"Ledel George is definitely a talented football player, and we must use his ability. He had a big impact today," Sheridan said.

The Wolfpack offense needed the solid performance they had against the Mountaineers. With the exceptional play of the younger players like Jordan, George and Downs, the Wolfpack can now make some headway in turning around the offensive misfortunes that plagued the start of the season.

Seventh-ranked booters to face Davidson

By Todd Pfalzgraf
Senior Staff Writer

The seventh-ranked Wolfpack men's soccer team will face a tough challenge against Davidson College today at 3:30.

Davidson (10-3-1) already shutout Duke and the top ranked Division-II team UNCG earlier this year.

State will also have to deal with the loss of forward Alex Sanchez. Sanchez, the Wolfpack's second leading scorer, was ejected with a red card in the second overtime Saturday at Virginia. By NCAA rules, Sanchez must sit out next month.

Midfielder Erwin Aguilera will most likely start in the absence of Sanchez. Aguilera has scored one goal in four matches this season.

State's defense will have to rebound after being shelled for a season-high three goals against Virginia last weekend. Goalkeeper David Alfred's GAA has inflated to 1.20.

However, State will still have the advantage on offense despite Sanchez's absence. The Wolfpack leads the ACC in scoring with 41 goals, averaging almost four per game.

Davidson may not be able to match State's frontline speed. If that is the case it could be a long day for the Cougars.

An interesting fact at last weekend's Virginia match, senior defender Curt Johnson registered his third assist. Only halfway through this season Johnson has exceeded his totals for his first three years at State.

With last week's loss State drops to number seven in the ISAA poll. The Pack is number 12 in the South Region behind Clemson who beat two top 10 teams this week.

This afternoon's match will be at Method Road Stadium. State is a perfect 8-0-0 at home this season.

The soccer team plays Davidson today at 3:30 at Method Road Stadium.

The fair is scheduled to open this weekend at the N.C. State Fairgrounds, where you, too, can feed the animals in the animal nursery exhibit.

N.C. State Fair '90

By Joe Corey III
Staff Writer

If you come to school on Hillsborough Street past the Dorton Arena, you better come up with an alternate route — it's time for the N.C. State Fair.

The fair starts on Friday morning and continues through Sunday, Oct. 21. But it should prove to be a traffic jam of fun. Unless you get stuck behind a horse trailer.

To start off the fun, Jerry Clower is going to be telling his coon-hunting stories on Sunday night. Can you say "Haha?" If you're from the North, Jerry will smarten you up to the South that exists outside the Triangle.

The major acts, which are free, are actually quite good if you're into country music. That new bo-hunk of Nashville, Clint Black, will be killing time on next Wednesday night. I think he cleaned up the trophies at this year's country music awards. Patty Loveless will be faking it Tuesday. She recently was forced to admit that she's married to her producer. And please don't take my "faking it" to mean her show's on Menorex. It's only a comment on loveless relationships that are faked just for the sake of milking the other person financially and emotionally dry.

And you'll see a lot of those type of couples meandering the Midway in pursuit of big stuffed animals and beanie Simpsons' junk. Last year, all the kids screamed for was faked merchandise from Batman, the California Raisins and Guns N'Roses. Ms. picks for this year's icons to puke for are the Simpsons, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and the Cocteau Twins.

To wrap up the fair, favorite son Ronnie Milsap will be tickling the ivories, and a couple of ebones.

For those not in a country mood (perish the thought) there will be two alternative acts. The oldest crowd will be pleased with the Platters on Saturday. And for you rockers, Michael Damian will be busting out all the glass in Dorton Arena next Saturday. I'm just kidding. Damian will be lucky if he could step on a Dixie cup and crush it. His weak version of "Rock On" should make anyone on the fairgrounds consider going to watch the non-fogger goop demonstration.

But don't limit your vision to the headlining acts. For the fair is an almost around-the-clock entertainment and an educational experience.

Just the Scheer's Lumberjack Show on the east side of the lake should make you bring your favorite ax westward. Every day there will be three shows of wacks and hacks.

Also, the folks who almost sued David Letterman for illegal use of a registered trademark will be performing. Yes, the one and only Dancing Waters shall be flowing in beat.

Letterman declared the fountain installed in front of his desk "the Dancing Waters". But by law he was forced to call his production "the Prancing Fluids".

The Grandstand shows will rotate between the Jane Chirwood Thrill Show with his Hell Drivers, a tractor pull and a draft-horse pull. Plus the shows will be pulling on your purse strings since they cost to view. Don't go see the "semi-freak" show on the Midway. It's not worth the cash to see a couple farm oddities. I think some of the "freaks" are, in fact, surgical disasters. Go see Michael Damian if you really want to see a freak.

The Winn Troupe Aerial Show will be dangling near the Industrial Building. So don't look up until you're safely out of the area.

Now don't forget the true reason the State Fair is held. No, it's not to mark the time of the year when Elvis would lock himself up in a Kentucky Fried Chicken stand. It's the exhibits of agricultural produce.

You can easily get lost looking at all the poultry, sheep, goats, rabbits, eggplants, and horses. But try not to

This week's top billings

Thriller in Erdahl-Cloyd Theatre tonight

"The Third Man," starring Joseph Cotten, Trevor Howard, Orson Welles and Akida Valli will be shown tonight in the Erdahl-Cloyd Theatre. The film is a classic thriller. It follows the Black Market operations in Vienna after World War II and provides the backdrop for the plot that ends with a manhunt through the sewers. Wells stars as the sinister fiend who will stop at nothing. The film is scheduled for 8 p. m. in the library and is free to students.

International film to play Stewart

"Wedding in Galilee," starring Ali M. El Akili, Bushra Karaman, Makram Khouri, Nazih Akleh, Anna Achdian and Sonia Amar will be shown tomorrow night in Stewart Theatre. The film is the winner of the International Critic's Award at Cannes. The award winner may be the most important and heartfelt exploration of the Israeli-Arab question to date. Director Khleifi's film transcends propaganda and dramatic faculty to present a complex, thoughtful and affecting picture of an Arab village in Israel, which is torn by violent demonstrations. The village's Mukhtar, or chief elder, wants his son's wedding in the traditional manner - from sundown to late into the night. The film is scheduled to be shown Thursday night in Stewart Theatre. Admission is $1.50 for students.

Thursday Madness

Comes back with a vengeance!!

All seats at Studio I & II for these two special shows tomorrow night are 99 cents with presentation of a valid N.C. State student ID.

I would've bought a Macintosh even without the student discount.

Greg Gallant
Consumer Economics and Housing
Cornell University

"The first time I saw a Macintosh, I was immediately hooked. It's a work of art. I saw the student pricing and my next move was obvious: get one.

"Some other computers are cheaper, but they're a pain to learn, and working on them can be a grueling experience. Last year, a friend bought another kind of computer against my advice and has used it for maybe 15 hours. What a waste.

"Macintosh, on the other hand, is a logical extension of the mind. It lets you concentrate on what's in your paper, not on how to get it on paper. You can create professional-looking documents in minutes, and you lose the fear of learning new programs because they all work in the same way.

"Once you've worked with a Macintosh, there's no turning back."

Elvis and the Cat's Cradle will rock tonight

By Joe Corey III
Staff Writer

What's big, red and eats rocks?
A big, red rock eater. What's a reggae band that plays Led Zeppelin songs with an Elvis impersonator as a vocalist?

Dread Zeppelin. Sure, it sounds weird, and judging from their album "Un-Led-Ed", it is. But it's a good type of weird. Like the first time you mix large amounts of peanut butter and milk chocolate.

Plus it appears that the band has the shell life of ice cubes at a steel forge. Don't fret, because tonight they'll be doing that "Oh, baby-noon" thing at Cat's Cradle in Chapel Hill.

Having seen their video for "Heartbreaker (at the End of Lonely Street)" Dread Zeppelin looks like a band that is worth seeing live—at least once.

To see the lead singer decked out in Elvis garb and post-Aloha era cut and the kinetic antics of the rest of the band looks like the lounge show at the Beat Hotel-Reno.

Even if you have a killer organics test tomorrow morning, skip it. That course will be offered in the spring. Dread Zeppelin might not survive the frost. I don't want to hear anyone mumble, "I could have seen them."

A synthesis of these three elements brings out four of the great movements of the '70s. The four being Reggae, Hard Rock icons, Elvis impersonations and hard punk. The only part missing is disco. Perhaps they do an encore of KC and the Sunshine Band classics?

Speaking of '70s retro hell, Jellyfish at the Rialto last Monday proved why one must burn their old clothes. Talk about bad mod outfits from the planet Lovetron. The U.S. flag pants, the shiny shirts and elevator clogs made me want to start a boycott of Goodwill. And when they did an encore of Supertramp's "Logical Song," I had to sit down from a case of nausea.

Their original tunes weren't too bad. But I can't take anymore of this '70s revival. If we're not careful, Dick Nixon will win back the White House. We don't want that. Or do we?

Why can't we revive the '90s and stop bating in kitsch culture of the "me" era? Stay out of your attics and don't go through your parent's closets. It's not cute and fun. Why, double-knit polyester is what incubated the AIDS virus.

World Party was a bit of a surprise when they took the stage after Jellyfish squirmed off.

Karl Wallinger is slowly becoming a British pop sensation with his more-sexier-than-Elvis Costello looks and more soulful voice than Paul Young. His guitar got into the core of the songs and stayed there.

In a sample-hungry music world, Wallinger is satisfied the old-fashioned way of swiping licks and lines. The "woo-woo's" on the end of "Way Done Now" are right off the Rolling Stone's "Sympathy for the Devil". But it isn't a case of just playing Mick and the boys in the background. World Party makes the train sounds through their own pipes. And Wallinger places it in a song worthy of the stolen steam's presence.

The four members backing Wallinger were up to his snuff. For the most part, Wallinger plays every instrument on the band's two albums: "Private Revolution" and "Goodbye Jumbo". It did not sound like Wallinger was having to hold up the whole affair, although it is his baby.

The band was really getting into the beat and extended one song by nearly five minutes. Wallinger apologized for being self-indulgent when the tune was finished. But it was such a fine excursion, no apology was needed.

At the end of the show, I was convinced we are in safe hands with Wallinger piloting the "ship of fools" past the bridge and into the night.

Rumor has it that Iggy Pop will be coming to Raleigh at the end of the month. So save up your pennies, so you can be his dog.

The N.C. State Fair offers rides, food and fun for people of all ages. This year's event will be held from Oct. 12-21. For more information call Barbara Williams at 821-7400 at the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

N.C. Fair

get too lost in the cow barn, else you'll be washing your shoes off in the Dancing Waters. The cement floor has more cow patties than the Moscow McDonald's.

And don't forget to play all the Midway games because only 100 people will lose every day. The best game is when you hammer a frog onto a revolving lily pad.

Also don't forget to sample all the food. There are ample bathrooms in case you can't take the whiplash of the cholesterol express lane.

And the best event is the Racing Pigs, Goats and Ducks. I was in awe of the speed a duck can achieve when properly motivated.

And every night there are fireworks. So if you're bored after classes, go west on Hillsborough Street. Otherwise just stay away — you don't want the aggravation of vehicular stagnation.

The musical "Les Misérables," is being performed now at Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium through Oct. 14.

Nearly 67 million Americans have one or more forms of heart or blood vessel disease according to American Heart Association statistics.
