Monteith proclaims N.C., Rape Awareness weeks

N.C. Week to link NCSU and North Carolina

By Kristin Rambo
Staff Writer

Chancellor Larry Monteith signed the formal proclamation Tuesday declaring the week of Nov. 12-16 as North Carolina Week at N.C. State.

North Carolina Week, sponsored by the Rural Revitalization Council, will focus on the connections between the state of North Carolina and NCSU, said Graeme Hardie, council chairperson.

The week will begin with a debate at the McKimmon Center on Monday, Nov. 12 at 8 p.m. The topic for debate is: "In considering the state of the state: Be it resolved that North Carolina is a World-Class State."

Student organizations will have a demonstration on the Brick Yard next Tuesday from noon to 2:30 p.m., concerning the "State of the State" theme and current economic and educational issues.

On Wednesday, NCSU college representatives will present topics for discussion to Agricultural Extension agents from across the state. The presentations, which begin at 8:30 a.m. in the McKimmon Center, will be followed by discussions on economic

Week to promote rape awareness, involvement

By Mark Tosezak
Staff Writer

Chancellor Larry Monteith signed a proclamation declaring the week of Nov. 12-15 "Rape Awareness Week." To help educate the N.C. State community several events are planned.

"Education is a big part of the solution," Monteith said. Information tables will be set up from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday on the Brickyard and in the Student Center lobby. There will also be programs in the residence halls during the evening at various times.

"I hope we get as many students as possible involved," said Jeff LaFrance, the chairperson of the Rape Prevention Committee. "This is not just a woman's issue."

On Tuesday from noon to 1:00 p.m. a self-defense demonstration will be on the Brickyard. On Wednesday at that same time, date-rape mini-dramas will be performed in the Brickyard.

"This is an excellent opportunity for students who aren't aware of how large the issue of rape is to become more involved and educated," said Heather Turner, member of the RPC and an executive assistant to the student body president.

Wednesday at 7 p.m. a self-defense program will be held in the North Gallery of the University Student Center. Thursday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. a sexual harassment program will be held in the Walnut Room of the Student Center.

"My hope for the week is that any woman who has experienced an assault or rape will feel that they can speak out openly on our campus," said Kathryn Sullivan, the student co-chair of the "Take Back the Night" march and another member of the RPC.

Thursday evening at 6:30 p.m. the "Take Back the Night" march will begin at the Fairmont United Methodist Church on Clark Avenue and end with a program on the Brickyard.

Organizations aid needy in Woodchop

By Lina Cuartas
Staff Writer

Sitting by a warm fire on a cold December night is far from reality to some of the needy families and citizens of Wake County.

In an effort to provide wood for the needy this winter, Alpha Phi Omega and the N.C. State Forestry Club are looking for volunteers to chop wood in the 10th annual Woodchop at the Wake County Opportunity Center.

On Saturday Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., APO and the Forestry Club will kick-off the event for the third consecutive year. The project lasts from November until March and is a non-profit program.

Mike Richey, project chairman for the 1990 woodchop, said, "We make no money from the woodchop. Actually we put money into it."

"The student government funds APO with $1,500 to get the project going. We have to provide food for the woodchoppers, and gas for the woodsplitters and chainsaws," he said.

Volunteers will have the opportunity to chop, split, carry and stack wood. Food and equipment will be provided. Also, a shuttle bus will leave Jordan Hall starting at 8:30 a.m. and every hour after that if transportation is needed.

APO and the Forestry Club are asking for everyone's help and for volunteers to stay as long as they can. They would like to set up lines for some people to chop and others for stacking, which will help make the process run smoother and more efficiently.

"There is plenty of work to be done. There is an abundance of wood at the WCOCC. We need a lot of people to chop, stack and carry, so we can set up lines," Richey said.

Volunteers are asked to wear comfortable work clothes, gloves and leather boots. For safety purposes, there will be first aid care and everyone will be required to sign a waiver.

"Woodchop is really a lot of fun. You get a chance to work closely with others. If you have the opportunity to work all day with someone you really get to know them well. And there is always satisfaction that you are doing something for a worthy cause," Richey said.

Anyone interested in the woodchop activity can contact Mike Richey at 831-1039 for more information.

Condom machines added to residence halls

By Wayne B. Hall
Staff Writer

N.C. State is involved in a big cover-up. No, nothing scandalous in the athletic department.

Nothing wrong in the halls of academia, either. However, on Oct. 18, NCSU became one of three universities in North Carolina that houses condom vending machines.

Mark Denke, associate director of Housing and Residence Life, said there is one machine in each single-sex residence hall, and two machines in co-ed residence halls, with one being on a male floor and one being on a female floor. Appalachian State University and UNC-Chapel Hill also have condom vending machines.

The latex condoms, manufactured by Protex, cost 50 cents each and come with Nonoxynol-9, a spermicidal lubricant for double protection against sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

"We're not expecting any high amount of (vending machine) sales," Denke said, reflecting information given by the vendor. Denke said the vendor has experience in providing and servicing condom machines at other universities and has found the demand has not been that great. Denke added that the vendor will collect money and refill the machines every six weeks, and at that time, the demand can be determined.

Student influence was the primary factor in the university's decision to install the machines, Denke said. "We saw it as meeting the (students') request," Denke said. "So, students can take a lot of credit for the installation of machines on campus."

The ball started rolling on the issue last fall. Ricky Eichinger, former president of the Inter-Residence Council (IRC), formed an IRC ad-hoc committee which studied the feasibility of placing condom machines in residence halls. Eichinger said that student feedback given through his committee's study was the important factor. "It seemed to get a positive response," Eichinger said of student response to the idea of residence hall accessible condoms.

Toward the end of last spring, the condom ad-hoc committee made a proposal to the IRC recommending action be taken on the issue. Eichinger said. From there, he said the proposal was given to Tom Stafford, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, Housing and Residence Life and Student Health Service officials were also consulted, Eichinger said.

Students have been giving positive feedback on the arrival of the condoms. "I think for people that want it, it's good for you. I think if you're going to sleep around, you should use one," Syme Hall resident John Dupree said.

Another resident, Jim Massillo, said he feels the same way. "If you're not going to cover up," he said, "you could get something that stays with you the rest of your life."

Donna Lindeman, an off-campus student, feels convenience is an important factor for having the machines in residence halls. "It's a lot easier to

Second annual Blue Jeans Day scheduled for November 14

By Andy Byrd
Staff Writer

Wearing blue jeans on Wednesday, Nov. 14, will be more than just a fashion statement, it will be a show of support for gay rights.

The second annual Blue Jeans Day will be sponsored by N.C. State's Lesbian and Gay Student Union (LGSU). "Blue Jeans Day is an attempt to raise awareness on campus and to make people think about the issue of equal treatment for homosexuals," said Katherine, a spokesperson for LGSU.

She said, "There is a lot of hostility toward gay people that stems from ignorance and fear. We chose blue jeans because everyone has at least one pair, and jeans would have more impact on the student body than hats or armbands."

There are a lot of misconceptions about being gay or lesbian, Katherine said. "People tend to concentrate on the physical aspects, but the basic things like love and trust are the same as in any relationship," she said.

Statistics indicate that about 10 percent of the population is homosexual. Contrary to popular opinion, a gay person cannot be identified by his or her appearance or by the way he or she acts, Katherine said. People who openly admit they are homosexual often face verbal, emotional and even physical abuse.

Katherine added, "We are not trying to trick people into wearing jeans, we are trying to get people to think about the issue. If people forget and wear their jeans anyway, they will know how an openly homosexual person feels everyday."

The LGSU is an organization dedicated to the reduction of discrimination and harassment of homosexuals through education. The group also provides support for gays and lesbians on campus. The LGSU has been active on campus for three years and has about 40 active members.

go to the bathroom," she said. "A lot of people have problems going to the store and buying them. They're embarrassed." Lindeman and another female student who asked not to be identified, said that women and men alike should share the responsibility for contraception. The other student said she had already seen several women in her residence hall buy condoms from a machine.

According to literature handed out by the Student Health Service, latex condoms are more effective than condoms made of animal skins, because skins are porous; therefore, increasing the likelihood of bodily fluid transmission. Latex condoms are also available at the Student Health Service, 24 hours a day, at $3 per dozen.

Marianne Turnbull, coordinator of the Center for Health Directions at Student Health Service, said many students were tested for STDs and pregnancy last year. There were more than 80 diagnosed cases of herpes, more than 50 cases of gonorrhea and unknown numbers of chlamydia and genital warts. There were also 120 pregnancies, Turnbull said. The actual numbers of STDs and pregnancies can be considered higher because some students go off campus for health care, she said.

Additional statistics released by the Student Health Service indicate that condoms used alone are 90 percent effective in preventing pregnancy. Condoms used with a spermicidal foam are 95 percent effective. Students can purchase a multi-

Helms takes senate seat for forth term

Incumbent Senator Jesse Helms (R.) is the apparent winner of the U.S. Senatorial election in North Carolina, according to poll results at 12:30 a.m. this morning.

Out of the 35 nation-wide senatorial races, the Helms-Gantt race in N.C. has had more national attention than most.

Throughout the evening, incumbent Republican Jesse Helms held a 10 percent lead over Democratic challenger Harvey Gantt, averaging 55 percent of the votes.

Helms had 54 percent of the votes by 10:35 p.m. as 68 percent of the state's precincts had reported their results.

According to an ABC exit poll broadcast at 9:30 p.m., Helms had 61 percent of the white vote and 46 percent of women's votes. At the same time, polls showed that Helms was leading in 64 N.C. counties.

Gantt was leading by a slim majority in both Wake and Mecklenburg counties, the so-called "urban votes", throughout the evening.

Another ABC exit poll later showed the race breakdown of voters reflected 94 percent of the black vote belonged to Gantt, while 6 percent belonged to Helms. Gantt had 38 percent of the white vote as compared to 69 percent for Helms. Eighty-three percent of those polled who said that they voted for Helms said they based their decisions primarily on his experience.

Booters jump to fourth in top-20 after winning ACC

State to play winner of South Carolina-Clemson match in 2nd round

By Todd Pfalzgraf
Staff Writer

Nov. 5, 1990 will be a day for George Tarantini to remember. That was the day he heard that his soccer team was ranked number one in the South Region and has the number-one seed for the NCAA tournament.

Never before has a Wolfpack men's soccer team accomplished that task.

"We're just happy to be in the NCAA tournament after going 8-8-1 last year. I'll never forget the low moments of last season," said Tarantini.

The Wolfpack is the number-one seed for the South Region and receives a bye for the first round. They will play the winner of the South Carolina (13-4-2, seeded fourth) and Clemson (16-3-1, seeded fourth) match this weekend.

State hasn't played the Gamecocks in two years but they've already beat Clemson twice this season by identical scores of 3-1.

The ACC is also represented by UNC, Wake Forest, and Virginia which were all placed in the South region. Virginia was displaced to the south from their typical placement in the East Region due to their 2-1 loss at the hands of the Wolfpack in the ACC championship game.

These five teams constitute the most NCAA seats the ACC has ever had.

There was a unique twist to the pairings however. N.C. State will have to play on the road for the first game of the tournament due to a clerical error. The decision can be reversed if the university states a desire to host the game. NCSU officials are scrambling to correct the mix up.

"I'd much rather play at home in the first game," said Tarantini. "But as far as who we play it does not matter."

"I think we'll be prepared, but we just played three very hard games so we have to go back to basics."

Playing at home would provide a supreme advantage for State. This season they have an 11-1-0 mark in their own park but a 2-3-2 record.

It should also be noted that in six NCAA tournament appearances State is 0-6. Tarantini is 0-2 in his tenure as head coach in the tournament.

The last time the team made the tournament was 1987 when South Carolina defeated it 1-0. Only three players remain from that team.

Senior co-captain Curt Johnson, Tom Tanner, and reserve goal keeper Dominic Travis were present for the match.

State is currently riding a five-game winning streak of which only one game was played at home.

The date and time for their first round match should be announced by the middle of next week.

Thompson's curtain raises

"The Colored Museum" starring Chris Hall and Marrissa Nichols will open this week in Thompson Theatre.

By Kelly Battermann
Staff Writer

The air will be full of excitement this week at Thompson Theatre as they present George Wolfe's "The Colored Museum."

This satirical play will present the audience with spoofs of black and white stereotypes, which promise to confront the audience with funny, yet sometimes uncomfortable thoughts.

Composed of 11 playlets, this presentation includes hilarious writing full of music, lyrics and dance. The fierce comedy of the play is, however, only a thin satirical cover for the dramatic undertones in the presentation.

The feelings the play will introduce will be further intensified by the set of the production, a museum which features elements of "Colored History." The set will be accompanied with slide projections which will compound the plays look at common attitudes.

According to the New York Times, Wolfe "has revealed the cultural blend spots of the blacks and whites alike. He is the kind of satirist almost unheard of today."

Many groups have booked already so hurry and reserve your seat today. For group bookings call 737-2405.

"The Colored Museum" is scheduled to run November 8-10 and 14-17 beginning at 8 p.m. There also is a matinee on Nov. 11 at 3 p.m. Tickets are available at the Thompson Theatre box office. Tickets are $2.00 for NCSU students, and $7.00 for non-students. For more information call 737-2033.

'Friends' hosts international ballet

Ballet Francais De Nancy will perform this weekend in Reynold's Coliseum. This event is definitely a highlight of the Friends of the College season.

By Brandon Vickers
Staff Writer

One of the highlights of this year's Friends of the College season is headed your way this weekend. The Ballet Francais de Nancy, though a mere child as ballet companies go (12 years old), has recently undergone a thorough renaissance and is astounding critics and audiences alike.

Through graceful, traditional ballet, the company exhibits its prowess as an influential organization and it challenges the preconceived notions regarding what ballet is and is not. Under the guidance of Patrick Dupond, former principal dancer of the Paris Opera Ballet, the troupe has undergone a rebirth in style and content. Dupond is already known in performing circles as one of the superlative performers of our age.

In 1976, Dupond won a gold medal at the International Competition in Bulgaria. This is remarkable not only because this was achieved by only two dancers (Vassiliev and Baryshnikov), but also that this occurred only one year after his first solo performance. As Directeur Artistique of this company, he continues to amaze audiences worldwide.

This exquisite corps de ballet consists of 30 expert dancers and is based in Nancy, France. Established in 1978, the troupe was formed by the city and the French Ministry of Culture to promote development of the arts in the outlying regions of Paris.

The company performs about 120 times per year and has made many international tours. Though they often stage classical works by choreographers like Balanchine, Dupond has allowed them to branch out and embrace such works as "Faust et Gretchen" by Ulysses Dove or "Pulcinella" by Moses Pendleton.

Another notable aspect of the troupe is their skill in nurturing an intimate relationship between scenic/costume designers and musicians, choreographers and dancers.

Ballet Francais de Nancy will perform this Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in Reynold's Coliseum. Two tickets can be picked up by NCSU students with a current AllCampus card.

There was once this really bad sit-com about a boy who imagined that the people from television would come from behind the glass screen and they would pal around.

Later the TV stars told the kid that he was living a fantasy life and he had to know what reality was.

And for the most part I've kept the fantasy of TV away from the reality of life. I know that the people on TV weren't who they pretended to be. I knew that Superman flew on wires, that Doogie Howser can't really perform surgery, that newscasters don't always understand the news they read.

And I also knew that comics were normally the opposite of their stage personas. I had witnessed overheard Gilbert Gottfried turn into a timid quiet guy over dinner.

So when the Higgins Boys and Gruber were coming to town for a show at Charlie Goodnights last Sunday, I love to watch their show on the Comedy Channel (36 for Raleigh residents with cable). There's no finer way to relax at 5 p.m. than watch a trio of guys sitting around a kitchen table, smoking cigarettes, drinking coffee, and swapping crazy stories. They are like a bunch of pals from video land. Plus they do really odd and funny skits and show old cartoons so it is like some sort of club house.

Dave and Steve Higgins (they are brothers) and Gruber (Dave Allen) seem too good to be real. Especially since they have two strikes going against them: being on television and comics.

For all I knew they were misanthropic introverts who only smoke and drink coffee on camera.

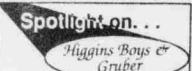

But when I met the respected trio at their hotel, I knew that they were for real when Gruber asked if I knew a place to get cartoons of cigarettes cheap. They were even dressed in the clothing they wear on the show down to the Converse Chucks on their feet.

Since it was lunch time, we all piled into a rented red Cadillac and headed off to Char-Grill to savor the best hamburgers in Raleigh. Joining the guy on this trip was Patrick Whitney, who makes appearances on the show as the pizza delivery boy and is the show's associate producer.

As we waited for our orders, I asked them why they don't host the Saturday night movie anymore. HB&G would set up a 16 mm projector, and act like they were showing the film in their apartment set. "Because the films really stunk," said Dave.

"And we didn't want any part of it," Gruber added. A rangy guy about to put in his order did a double take when he saw the trio. Gruber immediately introduces the fan to the Higgins Boys and asks what the fan likes about the show. The threesome signs an order slip for the guy and tells him to see the show at Charlie Goodnights and keep watching.

We talk of Captain Lucky, their cartoon show's host, who is a drunken sailor. He does occasionally receive liquor and cartoons in the mail. Plus the membership cards for the S.S. Fun are for real. We also chat about the week they staged a telethon to help American kids become convenience store clerks.

The threesome, which sort of hails from Iowa, was hyped about the fact that they would be flying up to Chicago to shoot an HBO one-night stand. Last spring they had been a featured act on the Fox network's "Comic Strip Live."

"That was a good time. They knew how to treat us right," Dave said.

The guys enjoyed Char-Grill. They actually finished their burgers. Next thing I know I'm heading down Interstate 40 towards Chapel Hill in search of a coffee house with the Higgins Boys and Gruber. The car has an MPG meter on the panel and Dave Higgins is driving weird in order to get the car to go less than one mile per gallon — like a real Cadillac.

So we end up at the Hardback Cafe in a nookish table drinking coffee by the pot smoking cigarettes and swapping rube stories about New York City, Speed Racer, and Merv Griffin. In the middle of the conversation I learn that Pat taught Penn Gillette of the magic team Penn and Teller how to eat fire. "It's one of those tricks you either get on the first try or forget about it," Pat says.

It felt so much like being on the show. I was waiting for Dave Higgins to introduce the puppet classic "Super Car" or Gruber to toss a videotape with a clip from "Simon" out of my sight. It was one of those moments where the fantasy and reality blur so that I "Merlin and the Color of Magic" will be performed this Saturday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Stewart Theatre.

Center Stage hosts magic show in Stewart

It's show time for kids both young and old. The Kidstuff series begins Saturday in Stewart Theatre.

T. Daniel & Company will perform "Merlin and the Color of Magic" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. With of Britain into the enchanted stone, so that Arthur may one day pull it out and become king.

far some home viewer is watching. The trio is a laid back version of the Three Stooges without the torture being quite so physical. As we drink, Gruber gets kidded about his baldness. Steve is poked for his premature gray hairs and the fact that he is the father of a new-born baby. Dave gets ribbed for his weight.

That's not saying they are exactly the people on the show, but their TV personalities are part of them and not completely pre-fab roles to don for the small screen. Some people come up to them as they walk down Franklin Street and say "Hey, dudes." When asked if each member is recognized when alone, all three said that they get noticed, but it helps to be together.

The girl with purple hair behind the counter at School Kids doesn't recognize them and is the usual ice goddess when asked if the store has any Young Fresh Fellow records. Luckily, Dave finds a copy in the used CD section. The trio has yet to hit the fame level of Jay Leno, David Letterman, or Eddie Murphy, but the people who recognize them aren't rabid worshippers. It's just like a TV visit.

Speaking of rabid, later that night we watch Joe Piscopo's HBO special. It is supposed to be his comeback, with nearly half a million dollars invested. Pat states the group's press release of the shows, "Piscopo did it for our company so we would have to say that it was one of the finest pieces of comic entertainment ever."

The most interesting part of the show was Steve and Dave pointing out the parts of the UCLA auditorium that they painted and guessing how much Piscopo paid for his friend's bust enhancement.

Tune in to next week's Happenings for an Q & A interview exclusive with The Higgins Boys and Gruber.

Fraternity donates money to state charity fundriaser

By L. Scott Tillett
Staff Writer

N.C. State's chapter of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity contributed $16,780 to the 1990 N.C. State Employees Combined Campaign (SECC) Wednesday.

The fraternity raised the money through its Annual Lawn Party Concert Benefit, often considered "the last party of summer" by many North Carolina college students.

By the request of the fraternity, the donation will be contributed to the United Way of Wake County, with $6,000 of the money going to Haven House, $6,000 to the Alcohol and Drug Council of North Carolina and $4,780 to Urban Ministry Center.

SECC is an annual event that allows state employees to donate part of their pay to the campaign which will in turn donate the money to a certain charity specified by the employee donor.

In a letter to NCSU employees

Raymond Camp, the 1990 NCSU SECC chairman said, "This year, our goal is to raise a quarter of a million dollars, a challenge of some magnitude."

Current donations stand at around $180,000, but Vice Chancellor for University Relations Al Lanier said he feels confident that the campaign will reach its goal by the end of November.

"Delta Sigma Phi's contribution certainly provides a boost to our campaign on campus," said Lanier, who has been involved in the SECC for the past four years and who also serves as a member of United Way of Wake County's Board of Directors.

The Lawn Party, which was on Sept. 22, was sponsored by local businesses and sororities, as well as Technician and University Dining. Funds were primarily raised through T-shirt sales and the sale of tickets to the party which featured the bands "Dreams So Real" and "Liquid Pleasure."

Additional funds came from the sponsoring businesses, especially those donating a percentage of their profit raised at the party.

Delay in presenting the contribution to SECC was due to the fraternity's incurred bills as well as a delay in calculation by contributing sponsors.

"It just took us this long to basically calculate everything," said Lawn Party Committee Chairman James Spare. "That's why we're donating the money so late."

Around 5,000 students from the Raleigh area and from across the state attended the Lawn Party.

Student Body President Edwin Stack, who is also a member of Delta Sigma Phi, was present when the fraternity's president, Ross Cowan, donated the sum to the SECC.

"We were pretty happy to be able to donate such a large quantity of money to such a worthy charity," Stack said.

In his acceptance speech at 11:45 p.m., Helms said "There's no joy in Mudville tonight. I'm sorry I'm late, but I've been at home watching the grieving face of Dan Rather."

He told a crowd of supporters gathered at the Brownstone Inn that the "mighty ultra-liberals have struck out."

"My family gathering around me join in thanking you from the bottom of my heart," he said. Those people who understand his "North Carolina values," he said, "are the honest, decent, god-fearing people of North Carolina."

Shortly after, at the Democratic headquarters, Gantt told his supporters, "I have not regretted a single day of this campaign."

"Sometimes you've got to keep striving even when it looks like you haven't won," he said. "We gave our very best."

In the race for the U.S. House 4th District seat, incumbent Democrat David Price was declared the winner at midnight, although only 76 percent of the precincts had reported total votes. Price was leading with 57 percent of the votes over Republican John Carrington at 11 p.m., with 50 percent of the precincts reporting. Half an hour earlier, with 48 percent of precincts reporting, Price was leading with 56 percent of the district's votes.

Earlier in the day, technical malfunctions with the polling equipment in Durham County caused major delays. A district judge ordered the polls to stay open until 10 p.m. At 10:15 p.m., these results had not been released as many more people still stood in lines to vote at the various precincts, although the polls were technically closed.

Voter machines breaking down and the extremely high voter turn-out were to blame for delays and long lines during yesterday's elections.

Committee discusses library problems

By Terry Askew
Staff Writer

The Chancellor's Liaison Committee, a group of student and faculty leaders who meet regularly to discuss campus issues, met last Wednesday to give input on some current problems at N.C. State.

In an attempt to tackle some of the problems with NCSU's libraries, Interim Provost Franklin Hart reported that a commission has been formed to investigate the libraries and make recommendations.

"We are looking every place we can for short-term solutions," Hart said. Margaret King, associate English professor, said that the commission looks at both short and long-term goals for the library. The commission doesn't want to get so caught up in the short-term crisis that it fails to plan for long-term growth and innovation, said King.

The commission also discusses strategies for improving the ranking of D.H. Hill among research libraries, Hart said. Alumni funds have accumulated $60,000 for the library and a proposal has been made to expand the electronic library network system, he said. The commission is to have a completed report by the end of November.

In other business, David Haas, a physics professor and chairman of the Faculty Senate, discussed a resolution recommending that students on academic probation not hold offices in any organization or represent organizations in any way.

Haas said that the resolution is not a rule, but a recommendation. He said that some extra-curricular activities support academics and others do not. The university is here for academics and extra activities are a part of university life, he said.

A suggestion was made by Ron Burns, a representative for the Society of African American Culture (SAAC), to require that Introduction to African Literature, ENG 248, be taken by all students in the College of Humanities and Social Sciences.

A proposal is being developed for the addition of the course and a revision of the African American Studies minor, said Burns. These changes would have to be made through the CHASS Student Council and the CHASS dean.

The committee also discussed university policy. A representative from the Lesbian and Gay Student Union asked that an addition be made to the university's anti-discrimination clause. The LGSU would like to add additional information regarding sexual orientation to this clause in the policy.

The LGSU representative said that homophobia is not recognized as a problem on campus. "Education is the key to eliminate homophobia," the representative said.

Chancellor Larry Monteith said that he would review the existing policy before making a change.

these committees there will be committee representatives available at the meeting to discuss membership. After introducing the various committees the UAB will have its regular business meeting, which is open to everyone.

UAB president Lee Casey said he urges all students to come and hear what goes on behind the scenes of the UAB and to gain a better understanding of where some of the student fees are spent.
