Cadets guard Belltower

By Chris Hubbard
Staff Writer

The Marching Cadet Fraternity of N.C. State University will post a 24-hour guard at N.C.S.U.'s Memorial Tower as a tribute to Americans killed in military service.

The guard begins at 6 p.m. Friday and ends 6 p.m. Saturday with cadets rotating in shifts of one hour each, four cadets at a time.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor and the 31st year the Marching Cadet Fraternity has posted guard.

A memorial wreath-laying ceremony will be held Saturday at noon. Afterwards, "Taps" will be played and a 21-gun salute will be fired.

In past ceremonies, a speech has been delivered by a veteran of the Pearl Harbor attack, but this year there is a 50th anniversary ceremony in Greenville occupying survivors.

Col. Robert Hawkins, a retired Air Force B-17 pilot who fought in World War II but was not present at Pearl Harbor will speak.

Local, state and federal dignitaries, as well as top university officials, including Chancellor Larry K. Monteith, have been invited to attend.

In the past, those in attendance have been primarily Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC and alumni fraternity brothers, but Mark Workman, the information director of the fraternity, encourages all students to attend, and hopes to have a good turnout because the ceremony is on a Saturday instead of a weekday.

The Memorial Bell Tower was built to honor NCSU servicemen killed in World War I.

The names of the 23 men killed are inscribed on a plaque in the shrine room of the tower, which will be open to the public during the ceremony.

There is a 24th name on the plaque, however. One man, George L. Jeffers, recovered from injuries that were initially thought to be fatal.

But his name was already on the plaque by the time it was realized that he would live.

His name was changed on the plaque to George E. Jefferson, which became a representative name for all of the unknown fatalities of the war.

Council officers elected

By Doug Boyd
Staff Writer

The Panhellenic Council officers for 1992 said they expect growth and unity among the Greek organizations at N.C. State University in the upcoming year.

President Sarah D. Tierney, a junior majoring in mechanical engineering from Sigma Kappa, hopes that together with Order of Omega, the PHC can improve Greek unity.

"I want to unite NHC, IFC and PHC, and Order of Omega has already gotten a good start on that," Tierney said. Order of Omega is a national Greek honor society that inducted its first NCSU members Tuesday. "I also want to reinstate Rho Lambda, an honor society for women," Tierney said.

Previously, Tierney has served on the Junior PHC, an organization made up of sorority pledges, and as chair of the PHC campus and community service committee. She said she is happy about the colonization of the NCSU chapter of Delta Zeta next spring.

"I'm very excited about DZ," Tierney said. Elisha Treece, the new vice president of membership, echoed Tierney's views on DZ. "It will be beneficial to have another sorority," Treece said. "So many women want to join the sisterhood."

Treece added that the new sorority will enable the PHC to accept more women who want to join.

"It will benefit girls who go through rush but don't get bids," Treece said. She added that to further increase sorority rolls, future rush schedules will start earlier and will include women from Peace College and Saint Mary's College in Raleigh who plan to transfer to NCSU.

The other PHC officers for 1992 are: Vice President Becky Reynolds, a junior communication major from Zeta Tau Alpha; Secretary Becka Hord, a junior psychology major from Chi Omega; Treasurer Jennifer Lindsay, a junior business management major from Sigma Kappa; Public Relations Chair Radha Ghosh, a sophomore political science major

Public Safety to increase patrols

By J. Christopher Jost Jr.
Assistant News Editor

This Christmas, make sure you don't give presents to strangers.

Students will be gone for more than three weeks, and the thieves who prey on colleges know it well. The long holiday season is a prime time for thieves to strike residence halls, automobiles and off-campus apartments. Over the five-day Thanksgiving break, several campus buildings were broken into and had items taken.

"We've got a lot of folks out covering campus but we can't cover everything," said Larry Ellis, crime prevention officer.

According to Ellis, a little common sense will go a long way in preventing theft. Keep valuables locked up and out of sight, check doors and windows to ensure they are locked, park cars in well-lit locations with valuables locked in the trunk, and keep a list of serial numbers to help identify items if they are stolen.

Public Safety will step up patrols in certain locations and Student Patrol Officers will continue working over the break.

Speaker will 'be all he can be' at fall Commencement

News Staff Report

This fall's commencement speaker will be retired Army General Maxwell Reid Thurman.

Thurman is a High Point native who earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from N.C. State University in 1953.

After a 38-year military career, Thurman retired from the army last February.

One of the few non-West Point graduates to reach four-star rank, Thurman was a principle architect of the all-volunteer Army, and played a major role in reshaping the Army's image and recruitment success with the advertising campaign, "Be all you can be — in the Army."

He will probably be best remembered, however, as commander of "Operation Just Cause," the invasion of Panama in 1989.

As commander-in-chief of the U.S. Southern Command, Thurman orchestrated what was, at the time, the largest military maneuver since Vietnam.

Earlier this year, Thurman was named executive in residence in NCSU's Division of Economics and Business.

In that position he will help design and participate in the division outreach programs for the local business community including continuing and continuing education.

Commencement ceremonies are scheduled for Dec. 18.

VISION revitalizes roles of math, science

Project designed to equip students for tough job market

By Jeneen Preciose
Staff Writer

Students in 20 N.C. classrooms are getting a new look at the relationship between the schools and the job market this year. They are the beneficiaries of VISION, an acronym for a new partnership in teacher-training.

VISION was devised by university and public school educators and industry leaders to revitalize math and science education in North Carolina. It brings together industry and education in such a way as to create a learning experience that will prepare students for their future in the job market.

VISION co-directors, Dr. Glenda S. Carter of NCSU and Cynthia F. Copolo of UNC-Chapel Hill, say the program's rationale is simple — math and science educators need to know what is going on in industry, in technical fields especially, to better equip students for competition in the job market.

Simultaneously, industry leaders realize educators need to understand the intricate workings of industry to properly prepare future employees.

Five companies from Research Triangle Park have already become classrooms for the six-week summer program. These companies include: E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.; IBM Corp.; MCNC; Research Triangle Institute; and Northern Telecom.

Carter said, "This partnership is an ideal — something that has been talked about for years. VISION has become a national model and similar programs have begun in California and New York."

The program trains 20 teachers from across the state each summer. The subject matter includes computer-aided integrated circuit design, chipmaking, and software development for aircraft cockpit display.

Corporate instructors, a peer teacher and a university faculty member are assigned to help teachers translate the industry experience into classroom techniques and strategies. Because of VISION, Patsy Hester, a teacher at Enloe High School, developed the interest in writing a grant to get more equipment for her computer science classes. Speakers from MCNC have visited her classrooms, and offered their perspective on the importance of education in the job market. Hester says, "(VISION) has opened up resource ple, and gave new insight on industry and the kind of skills students need to know."

The VISION program is funded by an $80,000 grant from the Semiconductor Research Corporation (SRC) Competitiveness Foundation. It is administered through the University of North Carolina Mathematics and Science Education Network.

Anyone interested in VISION should write to Cynthia F. Copolo, UNC-CH, CB 3500, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27599-3500.

"This partnership is an ideal — something that has been talked about for years."

Swimmers go for second straight win at UNC

By Jennifer Bouck
Staff Writer

After defeating defending ACC champion North Carolina last week, the N.C. State men's swim team has another shot at the Tar Heels this weekend in the UNC Invitational. The Pack men and women will be one of six teams in the three-day competition that began Thursday night at the Koury Natatorium.

Even though the results won't count in the final team standings, head coach Don Easterling expects a tough competition. The Pack has been slowed by a series of injuries to some key swimmers.

In last week's dual meets, State's men outscored the Heels 147-94, while the Pack women lost 195-104.

After a strong comeback, the Pack men overcame the Tar Heels for the first time since 1985. State was behind in points after the 1-meter diving, but came back to outscore the Heels in the remainder of the meet. In five events, the Pack men took first and second place. David Fox and Jesse Cyr were double winners for the team. Fox took the 50-yard freestyle (20:59) and the 100-yard freestyle (45:37), while Cyr won the 1-meter (267.90) and the 3-meter (272.85) diving.

"This victory is what every coach at NCSU lives for," assistant coach Kay Gerken. After the meet, head coach Don Easterling got congratulatory calls from all over the country.

Other winner for the Pack included David Fatzinger, 200-yard butterfly (1:51.60); Chucky Cox, 200-yard backstroke

(1:50.98); Greg Torsone, 200-yard breaststroke (2:07.51). In addition, the men took the 400-yard medley relay (3:25.03) and the 400-yard freestyle (3:05.14). This victory puts the Pack at 5-0 and UNC falls to 3-1.

On the women's side, the Wolfpack had a very difficult time fending off the strength of the defending ACC champs. The Lady Pack only got two wins in the meet, from Agnes Gerlach in the 3-meter diving (2:44.225) and Nancy Chapman, 100-yard backstroke (59.70). The UNC women took the remainder of the events and had four double winners.

"Our women just weren't ready for the meet," assistant coach Roger Debo said. "They were too unemotional to be ready. The team did pull together as the meet went on, with several very good swims from the ladies."

The Wolfpack women now stand at 5-1 and UNC raises its record to 4-0.

"This will be a chance for our women to show their real side. That wasn't them at the dual meet," Debo said. "We are a better team than we showed."

Wolfpack to build on confidence gained in Pitt win

By Bill Overton
Assistant Sports Editor

HARTFORD, CT—When the final buzzer sounded on N.C. State's upset victory Monday night, joy was obvious on the faces of the 12 Wolfpack players.

They realized they had done something that many critics didn't give them a chance at doing. This young team, with two freshmen in the starting line-up, overcame a 10-point deficit and defeated a team which probably didn't give them much of a chance of winning.

"We're very happy with our win," head coach Les Robinson exclaimed after the 78-77 victory over Pittsburgh. "Needless to say it was unexpected. In our first two games we did not show signs of being able to compete with a national level team."

After the game most of the players and coaches were congratulatory. It's only the third game of the year for the Pack, and head coach Les Robinson knows the season has a long way to go. Without doubt, there will be a time this season when the Wolfpack is as low as it was high on Monday.

But for the time being, you couldn't remove the smiles from the faces of any of the Wolfpack. State received more than just a win over a Big East team; the Pack is taking home confidence. They know that they can play with strong basketball programs throughout the country. And that's probably more than Les Robinson could have ever expected this early in the season.

"They (Pittsburgh) probably had no reason to think that we could play a decent game," Robinson said. "But, we put it together tonight. We got some good play off the bench, and Tommy Gugliotta, in the second half, played the way he's capable of playing."

Robinson has reason to be optimistic. His freshmen are progressing and growing up in a hurry. One game certainly doesn't make a season, but the confidence that these young players could be invaluable, especially starting point guard Lakista McCuller.

The numbers on McCuller were, by no means, brilliant. A glance at the box score would only produce four points and one assist for the six foot three guard. However, McCuller played 35 of the possible 40 minutes and even wanted the ball down the stretch, according to Robinson.

"Lakista McCuller really progressed tonight," Robinson said. "He handled the pressure very well."

Tonight, State will once again be tested when they face 15th-ranked Alabama in the Tournament of Champions in Charlotte. The Pack will need an even better performance to knock off coach Wimp Sanderson's Crimson Tide. State faces the Tide at 9:30 p.m. in the Charlotte Coliseum tonight and will play Saturday at either 7 p.m. in the loser's bracket or 9 p.m. in the championship.

Pack women to appear on TV eight times

Sports Staff Report

The N.C. State women's basketball team will appear on television eight times this season including five times on the local Musten Sports Network.

The Wolfpack women will play Clemson, Duke, North Carolina and Maryland on the Musten Sports Network. The games will be carried live on WRDC-TV-28. Five other games involving UNC, Clemson, Duke and Maryland will be produced for delayed broadcast.

The announcement of the 10-game schedule will involve the most ever carried by a network affiliate.

"We're pleased to continue broadcasting ACC women's basketball," said Dan Musten, whose video communication firm produced the first live commercial broadcast of an ACC women's basketball game in 1988. "We're proud of women's basketball's evolution into a true spectator sport, and to give the sport the TV exposure it deserves."

Musten said the expanded schedule, from eight games last season, was based on a growing audience of sports fans and viewers, along with the growing corporate interest in supporting the women's teams.

"We expect the excitement to grow, given the strong conference rivalries, and continued spillover interest from the triple-overtime State-Virginia game we carried last year."

Q. My boyfriend believes I don't need birth control if he is using a condom. I don't! What can you recommend to use in conjunction with this method to be extra careful?

A. That's because he can't become pregnant. If you want extra protection a spermicide method such as VCF® is a great backup to use with a condom. VCF® Contraceptive Film is simple, effective and discreet. Most women can't even feel VCF after it's inserted.

Thousands of gynecologists across America have been recommending VCF Contraceptive Film to their patients. VCF Film comes in the form of a 2" semitransparent square that is extremely soft, most women say they can't even feel VCF after it's inserted. VCF is one of the easiest forms of birth control that you can buy today. All you have to do is simply fold VCF over and insert like a tampon. VCF begins to dissolve in a matter of seconds. No need to worry about removing VCF, because there is nothing to remove. VCF simply washes away naturally. Each square of VCF contains an effective amount of non-oxynol 9, the leading spermicide recommended by doctors. SOUNDS LIKE A WINNER!

This is it, the end. The Rat ... er, Pig race is just about over for 1991. Our leader is still Mike "The Rookie" Borden with 101 victories to lead the pack. Last year's winner, Tom Suiter, is only a game back with his counterpart, Rick Sullivan, only two back. Technician's own Joe "Have a Merry Christmas" Johnson has 98 wins.

Although stymied in the early going, Larry Campbell has been consistently strong down the stretch to make him a contender along with Al Daniel and Buzz Peterson. Even the slumping Bill Overton can grab top pig awards with some miraculous picks. The only one that is really out of the race, unfortunately, is Amanda "Agro" Marsh. Better luck next year!

This week, the guest is me, Mark Schaffer. Hopefully you've enjoyed reading the little bit that I write here. I know I had fun writing it. Thanks for putting up with it all.

But now, onward and upward to much greater things: Bowling for Dollars.

The most overrated bowling award goes to that tradition rich, golden domed team from Notre Dame. Notre Dame's name got them this bowl, and I hope Florida isn't too disappointed to playing the Irish.

Both the Sellout award and the Rivalry award must go to the Peach Bowl, which has managed to pit N.C. State against East Carolina. This will be a game for the record books as the Pack and the Pirates slug it out in Atlanta. I can't wait to see it. In person, no less!

The National Champion award will either be given at the Rose Bowl, where Washington and Michigan will tiptoe through the tulips, or down in Miami in the Orange Bowl, where Miami and Nebraska meet in a battle of wits. Yeah, right.

In another fruity bowl, Clemson should peel California in the Citrus while Georgia Tech will bathe in the sun as they take on Stanford in the Aloha Bowl.

Red-hot Virginia will try to take a bite out of Oklahoma in the Gator Bowl and Florida State will try to stuff Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl. If all goes well, the ACC will be 5-0 in the bowls. Not bad for the former basketball conference, eh?

I would like to thank all the Pig Pickers for the friendly competition that we had during the year and I wish you well in the bowl weeks. Happy Holidays. And remember, you heard it here first.

Fall sports seasons bring out best in the Pack

Peach Bowl Bound

N.C. State's Sebastian Savage leaps up to make THE RECOVERY against Marshall. The Pack then went on to beat Marshall in the final seconds. From there, State put together a string of close games, finishing the regular season with 9-2 record. State's next game will be a New Year's Day date with 10-1 East Carolina in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, Ga.

Larry Dixon/Staff

Spikers finish strongly

The N.C. State volleyball team came on late in the season with victories over some strong teams. Senior Kim Scroggins (15) was a big part of the resurgent Wolfpack attack.

1991 ACC Champions

The N.C. State women's cross country team defeated a strong field to win the title. Head coach Rollie Geiger (kneeling) was named coach of the year in the ACC.

Missed chances against UNC

Despite having a great season, setting a record for most wins to open the season, the Pack was unable to defeat North Carolina in women's soccer. During the final three weeks of the season, the Tar Heels beat the Pack in the regular season game, in the ACC Championship game and in the NCAA tournament. Senior Jode Osborne shows a little frustration after UNC won the final regular season game 3-0.

Chris Hondros for Technician

ACC Player of the Year

Senior Henry Gutierrez (10) earned his second consecutive ACC Player of the Year honor in 1991. Gutierrez also led the Pack to the Wolfpack to a birth in the third round of the NCAA Tournament.

Students hit the ski slopes over the holidays

By Greg Cohoon
Staff Writer

It will soon be over. Your last exam will be a thing of the past and the semester break will lie ahead of you like a great ski slope. If you're thinking about skiing over the break, it's not too early to start finalizing your plans.

There are almost as many ski vacation options as there are people who want to ski. Many resorts have slopes that cater to the beginning and intermediate skier, while some resorts target the more experienced skier.

The level of skiing offered is one of many factors that should be taken into account when choosing a resort. Other factors include the amount and condition of the snow, the number of available slopes, how far away the resort is and the method of transportation you plan to use, other activities available at the resort, and the total cost of the trip.

Nationwide, the most popular resorts are in Colorado and Vermont. Some resorts include Vail, Beaver Creek, Winter Park and Avon in Colorado and Mount Snow in Vermont. Ski resorts in Colorado tend to be larger than those in other parts of the country, boasting more slopes, better snow and better instructors.

These factors make Colorado a popular place to ski. According to the "Travel Agent Guide To Colorado," 10 million skiers visit Colorado every year.

In addition to the resorts in Colorado and Vermont, there are many resorts in states closer to North Carolina, such as West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Of course, there are also ski resorts in North Carolina's own Appalachian Mountains. A trip to one of the closer resorts may be more feasible for students on a limited budget.

Speaking of working on a budget, exactly what will this trip cost? Well, for five nights of double-occupancy lodging and four days worth of lift tickets, a ski trip to Colorado can easily cost between $500 and $600. A comparable package in Vermont can cost between $150 and $300. These packages do not include transportation to and from the resort. By choosing to ski at a resort a little closer to home, you could easily save a lot of money in transportation costs. The cost of skis and lessons must also be considered. Either you have access to your own pair of skis or you will have to rent a pair. If you don't know how to ski, it is usually a good idea to take a few lessons, which are offered by most resorts.

Most resorts start their ski season in the middle of December; the prime skiing time is between January and March. The best thing to do when planning an outing is to pick up some resort brochures from a travel agent. If you are planning a long trip, talk over different options with a travel agent, but beware of low price deals that seem to good to be true. And since the prime time is upon us, it's a real good idea to make reservations early.

For general ski information and conditions across the country, the News & Observer offers a daily ski report on "Cityline." The telephone number is 549-5100 and the extension is 7544. Armed with the information provided by these sources, you'll be ready to conquer any slope.

Technician needs five typesetters. Must type 50 wpm. Please contact Heather Gool at 515-2411 for more information.

NCSU scrutinized at bowl

NC. State University students going to the Peach Bowl should remember one thing — because of the past history of the NCSU-East Carolina rivalry, the conduct of NCSU students in Atlanta will be closely scrutinized. If NCSU students act sensibly and responsibly, NCSU will look good. If NCSU students act rudely and irresponsibly, NCSU will look bad.

Over the years, ECU's student body has carefully cultivated its image as one of the most immature and irresponsible student bodies in the nation. Tearing down the goal posts at Carter-Finley Stadium in 1987 went a long way toward establishing ECU as a school of fools. NCSU students must not allow themselves to sink to the level of their ECU counterparts. Otherwise NCSU will be associated with the same kind of reckless behavior that has been associated with ECU students.

When you think of ECU, do you think of it as a quality academic institution or do you think of it as a party school? Do you want NCSU to be thought of as a party school first and a real school second? Prospective employers have the same perceptions that you do. If you are going to the Peach Bowl, you must be aware of how your behavior will affect NCSU as a whole. Peach Bowl-bound students are the university's representatives, whether they like it or not.

The responsibility to favorably represent NCSU does not mean that you should not party in Atlanta. But all students should know their limits. Adrenaline, staggering and stumbling, falling on people and throwing up in the stadium seats just looks a fool. Don't make NCSU look foolish.

Of course the most important thing for students to remember is that they should never drink and drive. Drinking and driving is the height of irresponsibility, immaturity and stupidity. If you are going to drink, just make sure there is a sober and brave soul to do the driving. After all, drinking is not required to have a good time at a football game or on New Year's Eve.

There is also no need to yell "ECU sucks." Such an action would be rude, obnoxious and stupid and could lead to the same violence that has previously suspended the NCSU-ECU rivalry. The bottom line is that there is no need to cause problems of any kind.

However you decide to enjoy the trip, your behavior will reflect on the entire university. Remember to keep your head. Besides, if everything goes smoothly, the NCSU-ECU series might be renewed, and NCSU will be able to enjoy many more years of domination.

Research alternative aid

As the cost of college tuition steadily increases, the amount of financial aid steadily decreases. However, students fail to realize that although federal aid has only risen 59 percent as opposed to the 70 percent tuition increase, there are other sources of financial assistance available. It is just a matter of knowing how to find it.

Hundreds of small businesses and organizations offer a variety of different scholarships. For example, students belonging to Greek organizations, descendants of certain war heroes and Baptist or Catholic students are eligible for funds.

The problem, however, is that students do not take the time to research these opportunities. They are too dependent on federal aid in the form of scholarships, grants and loans granted to qualified needy students. But the funds offered by these other sources are in many cases granted without a need-based requirement. This increases the eligibility status for a large number of students.

Many may argue that these small businesses and organizations do not provide an adequate amount of aid. This is not the case. If one award is not enough, apply for another. Several sources of aid combined can add up to as much as, if not more than, what the federal government provides.

Students must realize that in order to maintain economic stability and decrease the federal deficit, the U.S. government has resorted to decreasing education funds. As more and more students receive less and less aid, university enrollment and drop-out rates may increase. In order to avoid these situations, students should take advantage of what these other sources have to offer. One great place to find out about alternative aid is the library, so go to the library now and request information before it's too late!

Israel damages peace talks progress

The second round of Middle East peace talks is scheduled to begin in Washington Wednesday, but this time around the biggest obstacle to peace appears to be Israel. This is in stark contrast to the recent past, when nations such as Syria and Iran were explicitly endorsing terrorism and violence against Israel and other pro-Western factions.

Recently, however, we have seen a public tempering of radicalism in the Middle East. For instance, after years of captivity Western hostages are being released. Many Washington insiders hope that the release of the last three hostages can take place by the end of the week.

Israel, on the other hand, has created a public opinion furor by steadfastly refusing to cooperate with the timing, the location and the substance of the peace conference.

Many of Israel's publicity problems began when the Bush administration asked Congress to withhold payment of proposal loan guarantees to Israel for at least 120 days. Bush saw the loan guarantees as an obstacle to future peace talks because the money would have gone, either directly or indirectly, to building permanent Jewish settlements in East Jerusalem — one of the areas contested by the Palestinians as their own. The Israelis then compounded their problem when a cabinet official publicly called President Bush an anti-Zionist. Prime Minister Shamir moved quickly to apologize for the insult, but the sentiment was clear to the world.

Israel further alienated itself from the peace conference by arguing over the location and time table of the talks. Israel wanted them held in Middle East capitals and in Tel Aviv, which would imply, at least subtly, official recognition of Israel as a sovereign state.

Within the past week, Israel has offered a few conciliatory gestures such as agreeing to meet in Washington, albeit a few days late, as well as an admission that it is willing to discuss the "land for peace" proposal.

The Bush administration's goal for the peace conference is merely to keep the two sides talking in the hope that incremental concessions by either or both sides will lead to future, more substantive talks. The establishment of a reasonable dialogue is clearly the first step toward a lasting peace.

Despite the rhetoric of either side, a lasting peace is needed for the average Israeli and Palestinian living in the disputed territories. Certainly these people are ideologically opposed, but they must live side by side. If they are to do that, then for their sake it should be in peace, without the vicious cycle of terrorism, bloodshed and retaliation.

College bowl system needs renovation

You used to think that a school needed talent to get into a bowl game.

Now it seems all that is needed is a name — case in point, Notre Dame. Notre Dame is in the Sugar Bowl only because it draws a large viewing audience and the Sugar Bowl has been getting killed in the ratings by the Orange Bowl. The Orange Bowl starts a half hour earlier than the Sugar Bowl: 8 p.m. EST New Year's night.

Notre Dame's invitation has nothing to do with Notre Dame's 8-win, 3-loss record; if it did, Notre Dame wouldn't get in for three reasons: Michigan, Penn State and Tennessee.

The bowl system is a crock. At this rate, there will never be a true national champion of college football. If there isn't going to be a play-off system, which is the only fair way to have an undisputed national champion, the top two teams should play New Year's Day for the title.

Does anybody remember when 2nd-ranked Penn State played then 1st-ranked Miami in the Fiesta Bowl the day after New Year's and won? Why there aren't more games like that is beyond me. Until the officials of the NCAA stop being a bunch of spineless wimps and institute a play-off system, the term national champion will have the same meaning as the term military intelligence.

The only bowl that is really etched in stone is the Rose Bowl, which will feature the Big Ten champion hosted by the Pac 10 champion. This year's winners are the Washington Huskies of the Pac Ten and the Michigan Wolverines of the Big Ten. However, if the NCAA wants to do this bowl thing right, it needs to wait until the last weekend of the season to hand out invitations to the post-season, instead of giving them out early to teams such as Notre Dame and telling other teams, such as Arkansas, to win one of its next two games and then it can go bowling.

The thing that is really irritating about the bowls is that some teams, such as Washington, are locked into their bowls. Another team with the same fate is the Western Athletic Conference champion BYU Cougars, which is bound for the Holiday Bowl in San Diego. Also, the Big Eight champion is bound for Miami and the Orange Bowl to play the detested Miami Hurricanes, and the Southwest Conference Champions, the Texas A&M Aggies, are bound for the Cotton Bowl.

Some teams are not locked into their bowls; ACC has a contract with the Florida Citrus Bowl which states that if the ACC champion is ranked among the top three teams in the country and is invited to another bowl, then the Florida Citrus Bowl will let the team out of its contract.

Unfortunately, the Washington Huskies don't have such a contract. They are forced to play the Rose Bowl. Although they get part of a $6.5 million purse, they don't get a chance to kick the Miami Hurricanes' butts in the Orange Bowl.

Depression common during holiday season

This is the time of year when there is an increase in suicides. The holidays are a bad time for some people, especially if this is the first holiday apart from family. A feeling of loneliness at this time of year is not unusual.

Many people have this feeling; the way you deal with them is important.

In our society, suicide seems to be the answer for a lot of people. People who find themselves feeling depressed or alone should talk to a friend.

If you can't confide in a friend, then there are people at the Counseling Center who are trained to listen.

Not only will they listen and keep it to themselves, but they really do care what happens to you.

You are not crazy or unstable for feeling depressed at this time of year.

You are only adjusting.

The reason I am writing this is because I would hate to see the world lose the person who may be the connecting link to solving one of life's puzzles.

You may turn out to be the engineer who builds the first lunar base, the economist who helps regulate the national debt, the veterinarian who produces a new strain of cattle to raise in Ethiopia.

Technician Campus Forum

Or you may be a parent who brings one of our future great individuals into the world.

Whatever your role is in the future, please don't shortchange the rest of the world. Stick it out.

If you do, you will find that anything can be dealt with in the right frame of mind and with the right help.

Take this from a 33-year-old freshman who has had his share of depressing situations.

I can honestly say that it won't always be down.

Some days are up and some days are down, but in the end the ups outweigh the downs.

Contraceptive foam and film do not offer safety

Recent advertising in Technician promotes a new contraceptive product that is similar to contraceptive foam in function and effectiveness.

The ads, however, fail to acknowledge the issue of sexually transmitted disease. Contraceptive foam or contraceptive film does not prevent the transmission of herpes, gonorrhea, chlamydia and syphilis.

Even though contraceptives containing nonoxonyl-9 seem to have some inhibitory effects on the HIV and HPV (genital warts) viruses, more studies are needed to confirm this belief.

To reduce your chances of getting a sexually transmitted disease, you should practice abstinence.

Should you decide to be sexually active, have sex in a mutually faithful monogamous relationship and practice safer sex by using a condom with a spermicide containing nonoxonyl-9, even if another method of contraception is used.

To better understand safer sex, pick up a "Safer Sex" pamphlet at Student Health Services.

You can also contact the Center for Health Directions at 515-2563 or the gynecology department at Student Health Services at 515-7762.
