President's role

questioned

■ The student body president's position on the SMA was questioned during last Wednesday's Student Senate meeting.

By MARK MCCRAW

A policy concerning student government-media relations could soon take an unprecedented turn. At last Wednesday's Student Senate meeting, a stutue was proposed by acting senator Keith Crawford which would han members of the Student Government from also having a position on the Student Media Authority, Crawford was sitting in for CHASS Senator Los Kleinman.

Joe Kleinman. According to Crawford, there should be a well-defined distinction between government and the media, and this distinction has been infringed upon by Student Government members, including Student Body President Robert Zimmer. Crawford said the president could use his seat on the SMA to blackmail the media by voting to cut media budgets or by threatening to vote for a media head candidate that favors his agenda.

"This sort of government censorship is clearly not acceptable." Crawford said.

acceptable." Crawford said. The president could use his vote to pressure the media head to fire media saff which did not report in favor of his policies, Crawford said. He could also dismiss those whose work could hurt his political agenda. In this way, a president's personal prejudices could deter truthful media coverage of an event or issue, Crawford said.

Crawford said. "This is clearly a violation of freedom of the press," Crawford said. "In a democracy, even at the student level, it is atrocious that this should happen." Zimmer said Crawford was overreacting to his seat on the SMA. I don't use it are more than the seat of th on the SMA. "I don't see it as a conflict of interest," he said. "I don't have any direct power." SMA adviser Tim Ellington also supports reducing the president's power. "He should have a seat, but not a vote. We don't get a vote on the Student Senate." Ellington said. "There is a definite conflict of interest for him to get a vote on a board which reports on his activities."

visit. Clark Hall was built as a dormitory in 1939, and though renovated eight times since SHS moved in, students' needs still cannot be met to the extent that the health staff would like. According to Jerry Barker, administrative director of SHS, "privacy is a real problem" in Clark Hall. Because of space restrictions, students must answer personal medical questions in the middle of the hallway and urine and blood samples have to be carried a great distance through public areas. Barker said the new facility will alleviate Clark Hall's lack of privacy and long waiting times with an additional 13 examining rooms. Plans also include a second for Gynecology. Even though SHS will have an extra 18.000 square feet to work in, Clark Hall's 21.000 square feet), the service will not gain as much in pace as they will in graining a building that is far better organized or the programs being offered. Much of the additional floor space will be shared with four other services. Health Education will be much more accessible to students and will gain a brand new 100-seat classroom. Disability Services and the Counseling center will both leave their existing space in Harris Hall for a much more modern setting in the new center; and Sports Medicine and Physical Therapy will gain four times as much room as it presently has in Clark Hall and will feature full time staff dedicated to helping those students in need of their modern and hi-tech services. Financing for the new Student Health Center will come almost entirely from a $14 per semester student debt fee added as a line item in tuition in Fall 1995. Over the course of 20 years, close to $8 million will be collected in the same manner. A similar debt fee was used to finance University Student Center, Carmichael Gymnasium.

and Witherspoon Student Center. The class of 1992 will also contribute roughly $100,000 for the center at their five year requirements their class gift to the university. According to Thomas Hunter, superintendent of Engineering Design with the Physical Plant, bids for construction should go out within a couple of months, and the bidding process will last 30 days. That puts the ground breaking ceremony either at the end of the Fall semester or at the beginning of that construction with that construction spring semester. Students' affairs in good hands with Stafford

The vice chancellor of Student Affairs says his main concern is students.

At that point, I really didn't have a feel for exactly what I wanted to do, but I decided that I wanted to work on a university campus. As a graduate student at N.C. Similar remarks — supportive of American troops and only mildly critical of the Clinton administration — earned Dole an appreciative telephone call from the presiden Tuesday morning. But Dole's remarks contrasted sharply with tough criticism that his foreign policy adviser, Sen, John McCain (R-Ariz.) had offered on the candidate's behaff Monday, McCain the accused Clinton of practicing a "fackless, photo-op foreign policy" adviser, behave a fact con Monday, Dole had endorsed McCain's remarks and had characterized Clinton's performance on frau as "weak leadership". High gasoline demand will help keep prices down.

BY TOM INCANTALUPO

Unlike some earlier crises in the Middle East, Tuesday's missile strike on Iraq should have little or on effect on gasoline or heating-oil prices in the United States unless the situation mushrooms into something serious enough to affect oil supplies from other major producers in that region experts and Tuesday. "Assumine there is no disputie

"Assuming there is no disruption of supplies from that area in general, I don't hink there will be a huge effect," said Norman Rosenberg, petroleum analyst for Standard & Poors in, New York. The timing of this latest crisis is fortunate for American consumers. The summer driving season ended Monday, Labor Day, and from now until the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday season, driving and demand for gasoline usually are reduced. Meanwhile, with the weather still summer-like, demand for heating oil has not yet begun to build. Both factors work to hold down retail prices. Arab nations frown on missile strike

Arab nations feel they are subject to a double standard by the U.S. government.

By JOHN LANCASTER

AMMAN, Jordan — The American cruise missile strike on Iraq stirred nervousness and doubt around the Arab world Tuesday, even in pro-Western Arab states that lined up solidly behind the U.S.-led coalition to oust Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's forces from Kuwait in 1991. While avoiding outright condemnation of the United States, Egypt and other moderate Arab states expressed doubts about whether the attack was justified by Iraq's military thrust into northern Iraq over the weekend, noting that Iraq over the weekend, noting that Iraq over the weekend, noting that Iraq out the weekend, noting that Iraq over the weekend, noting that Iraq attack as justified by Iraq's military thrust into northern inaniania at studied silence. Jordan also has taken a dim view of the U.S. action, fearing that to do otherwise could further undermine relations between the desert kingdom and Iraq, its neighbor and largest trading partner. On a grassroots level, many Arabs world has grown weary of Saddam's posturing. There were no reports of anti-U.S. demonstrations such as those that erupted during the gulf war. "I think Saddam has lost much of the mass appeal he had five years ago." said Radwan Abdullah, a political scientist at the University of Jordan. At the cume time. Arabe are

The Clinton administration has, justified the attack on the basis of postwar U.N. resolutions barring persecution of Iraqi minorities, including the Kurds, The United States launched the attack after Saddam's troops on Saturday captured Irbil, a city in northerm Iraq situated in the protected Kurdish area north of the 36th Parallel.

But in the view of many Arab governments, Saddam did nothing more heinous than assert government sovereignty inside traq's internationally recognized borders — and at the invitation of the Kurdish Democratic Party, headed by Massoud Barzani, one of two main Kurdish Tactions vying for control of northern Iraq. Many apparently also were swayed by Saddam's argument that he acted in response to incursions allied with the Kurdish Democratic Party's rival, the Partiotic Union of Kurdistan, "It's Iraqi territory; he's not infringing on territory of another country; he was invited by an important Kurdish faction; and there was an incursion by another country," said Ezzedin, the former information minister.

When is Centennial Center construction suppose to start?

Planning is almost complete for the Centennial Center. Designs are expected to be completed in mid-October. Construction bids will be taken until December 1. But will the center ever be completed?

Since the N.C. General Assembly created the Centennial Authority, the aforementioned dates have been steadily pushed back. It was suppose to be available for the May 1998 for the May 1998 graduatation ceremony, but right now it won't be open until Nov. 1998. If this is going to happen, someone better start digging. N.C. arena. The total cost of the center was originally expected to be $66 million. It would be paid for by the contributors at $22 million contribute each.

This was before they added the sky boxes. The addition pushed the price tag in excess of $100 million dollars. The university will not contribute any more money. The Wolfpack Club vowed to raise at least another $23 million. Wake County should have no problem coming up with the other $10+ million shouldn't be too difficult. The authority will still be authority will still be approximately $20 million short. It seems confident that it'll be able to make up the difference, although they haven't specified how it'll make money on a center make money on a center that's only partially on the drawing board right now. With a rising price tag, continuing studies and numerous added amenities, the Centennial Center may never get off the drawing board. Maybe the authority should commission a study of whether the arena will actually be built if the parties involved continue their present course. Centennial Center may prove to be a prophetic choice of name since it probably won't be finished until sometime in the next century

Student Government shouldn't have a say in the workings of the media.

R ecently a proposed statute was introduced to the Student Senate that would ban student government members from having a position on the Student Media Authority

The first amendment of the Constitution says that [c]ongress shall make no law [...] abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press ..." In other words, the government shall not curtail free speech and free press. Since the regular government should have no say of what is printed. Student Government should not either.

The statute's premise is that it's a conflict of interest for someone involved with Student Government to vote on a board that reports government activities.

By having a voting position on the board, government members could use their power to influence the media abusing the position hasn't come up, but it's good to stop problems from happening in , the future Student government should have some say about what goes on in SMA, since it represents the students and regulates student fees. It needs to know what happens to student fees and make sure they are properly used. Student Government should see what goes on without the possibility of influencing it. This is why the student body president or any other members of student government shouldn't have a vote in what goes on. They can still let the students' concerns be heard, but they will not be tempted to use their vote to sway media. The proposed statute is an appropriate move for the times. The question is — w the student senate see it the will same way?

And the band was "cool" at dragging out the best in its songs, whether it was "Two Step" or "Lie In Our Graves," both from "Crash," or "Recently" from "Remember Two Things." "Thety did a great job of extending the songs that needed to be extended," Robert Plank, a senior in business management said. "But they also ended early some songs

Continued from Page 5 Jump Little Children is a creative band with a lot of energy, and they obviously enjoy making music. They will be playing again at the Cradle on Oct. 5, (and this time they'll be headlining, so their show won't get cut off) and at Ziggy's in Winston-Satem on September 20. But best of all, Jump Little Children Will appear at the Brewery on September 14. The Freddy Jones Band played a completely different kind of music and show. While it is obvious that Jump Little Children is a very promising, developing band that puts on a fun, original show, the Freddy Jones Band has already Continued from Page disease or detached from reality and "selling out to the man." Believe it or not, it's actually an update of the classic opera "La Boheme." Much of the musical seems to rely on visuals to convey the story. On the recording, many of the unknown cast's voices blend together, and unless you've listened to it several times, you can't tell what's going on. The result is truly a mixed bag. One actress that comes to mind is Daphne Rubin-Vega, who plays Mimi, the exotic dancer dying of ADDs. She sounds like a bizarre cross between Marilyn Monroe and Rosie Perez and makes me cringe. Another actor, Anthony Rapp, sings his part with such enthusiasm that he just screams "Hey! I'm in a show" Most of the other actors fare better, but they are ultimately undistinguishable. The best part about the soundtrack of "Berd" is its musical arow. The undistinguishable. The best part about the soundtrack of "Rent" is its musical range. The writer/composer Johnathan Larson, who tragically died moments before the first organized production of his show, has created a beautiful array of ballads, disco tunes, hard rock and even a bit of reggae.

and even a off of legae. that needed to be ended early, like 'Too Much.'' Despite the band's unwillingness to do things the normal way, the DMB kept to tradition by saving its mainstays. 'Ants Marching' and Bob Dylan's. ''All Along the Watchtower' (a ten-minute journey) until the end. ''Ants Marching'' served as a wake-up call to the crowd after the slower-moving 'Typical Slutation.'' ''All Along the Watchtower' began with a sluggish Matthews quietly uoging with the song, until the rest of the band thundered in for a climactic end. Basically, everything the band did

But the words to the songs are awful. There's a song about a cow jumping over the moon. One that someone actually sings "Take your AZT." In another, a character bells "I'll kiss your Doc Martins." It's a very Doc Martins." It's a very odd batch. Maybe the lyrics evoke a new view of musicals in the '90s, but the actual music is very much old style. And that's not bad. The music is the best thing about it.

about it. I have a strong hunch that "Rent" is better experienced visually. There is better experienced visually. There are some very good songs here, including "La Vie Boheme" and "Seasons of Love." But when listening to the musical as a whole, it comes across as shrill, garbled and confusing. The most tragic irony of it all is that the characters sing about refusing conformity and embracing the Bohemian life. How can we agree with them the Bohemian life. How can we agree with them when the last track of the CD is Stevie Wonder singing the show's anthem, "Seasons of Love." It's an odd end to a very odd CD.

went over well with the audience. Unfortunately, it was what they didn't do, namely "Satellite" that irked the crowd. After the encore, many people mulled around in disbelief, even after the house lights

"I was kind of hoping they'd play "Satellite," Plank said. "But I guess after you've played it for years and years, you just get tired of playing it."

it." Maybe so, but it was apparent from the concert Friday that the Dave Matthews Band enjoys what it's doing and doesn't seem to have any regrets. And neither do the fans who come to hear them.

The Freddy Jones Band has been together for about five years, plus or minus one or two changes in members and a move or two. Lead guitarist Wayne Healy; bassist Jim Bonaccorsi; Simon Horrocks on drums; and Rob Bonaccorsi and Marty Lloyd on guitar make up the current members of Freddy Jones. Each of the guitarists took turns with lead vocals and harmony — a nice change from many bands where the lead singer is the only person to make any kind of noise with their own voice the entire show.
