Students reaffirm support for lost peer

Students and family refuse to give up on missing student.

VICKI HOGLIN
Staff Writer

The story of Kristen Modafferi, an N.C. State sophomore, and her mysterious disappearance last June has touched the NCSU students who knew her best, as well as students who never even saw her. This weekend, with the help of the Park Scholars, volunteers from the School of Design and Modafferi's sister, Allison, the rest of the nation may get the chance to hear the story.

On Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Park Scholars and other volunteers will be handing out fliers and yellow ribbons in the brickyard. Students will be asked to wear them in support of Kristen's family and friends and in hopes of Kristen's safe return home. The volunteers will also be handing out ribbons before the nationally televised NCSU basketball game on Saturday.

Terrell Russell, a Park Scholar and one of the main organizers of this weekend's activities, hopes that an audience full of fans wearing the yellow ribbons and a few comments from Allison Modafferi at halftime of the game will gain mention on ESPN broadcasters.

"Our main goal, our main purpose, is to get national attention on ESPN. Maybe someone will recognize [Kristen's picture] or will have seen her. All it takes is one person. We also want more students to jump on the bandwagon, to ask questions."

This weekend's campaign to expose Kristen's story is the latest in a long series of efforts by the Modafferi family and the community since her disappearance.

Kristen Modafferi arrived in San Francisco on June 1, 1997, hoping to enjoy living on her own and supporting herself. She made arrangements to attend a photography course at Berkeley and a dance class at the area YMCA. She was discovered missing on June 24, never making it to her first class at Berkeley.

No one has seen or heard from her since.

The Modafferi family has continued its efforts to get Kristen's picture on as many of the San Francisco area media as possible.

"Over Christmas break, my entire family went back to California, and we had a lot of contact with the local papers and radio," said Allison Modafferi, who is a senior at NCSU. "We also visited the missing children's organizations that are helping us tell Kristen's story. We get new leads every day and the detectives check them all. So far, nothing has panned out, but still, we check them all."

More and more organizations and individuals have jumped on the bandwagon, supporting efforts to find Kristen. Last semester, the Park Scholars began thinking of an event to raise the level of knowledge of Kristen's disappearance. Before the Christmas holiday, the scholars met and planned the ribbon distribution in the brickyard, which had been a useful location for the AIDS ribbon distribution last semester.

"I just thought that we should do all we could for her family and friends," said April Wilson, another organizer of the activities. "Every student on this campus should know what is going on."

The Park Scholars began networking. Russell looked for suppliers of yellow ribbon—enough to make 25,000. He also used his membership in the Wolfpack Club to gain its support of the ribbons at the basketball game. Wilson organized the use of the brickyard. Scholar Kelly Marks wrote the handouts and fliers. Allison Modafferi, who has supported the activities from the beginning, agreed to speak briefly at halftime about her sister's disappearance.

Director of Park Scholars Laura Huntley is very proud of the scholars from Kristen's class, the class of 2000—the first recipients of the scholarships.

"The great thing about this class is that they work together as a class. They are showing incredible organization, motivation and character skills."

Chancellor Monteith and head basketball coach Herb Sendek and his staff have agreed to wear the yellow ribbons at Saturday's basketball game. Organizers feel this will be more of a reason for broadcasters from ESPN to take note and give free publicity to the search for Kristen.

Classmates of Kristen's at the School of Design are participating in this weekend's activities and will continue to support Kristen's safe return. On Friday, there will be four large yellow ribbons on the columns in front of Brooks and Leazar Halls and one in Brooks Courtyard.

"It is good to have something more permanent," said Wilson. "The yellow ribbons will still be there—a constant reminder." Constant reminding is exactly what the Modafferis are counting on to bring Kristen home.

"What we are trying to do is to get Kristen's picture out there. We believe, no, we know, that one person has to know something. That's all we need," said Allison Modafferi. "The students should wear their ribbons because their participation will help us catch ESPN's attention. Then someone will call in that might not have known they could help."

Park Scholars, volunteers and the Modafferi family hope that Kristen's face will appear on the screen and the toll-free hotline, 1-800-VANISHED, which will give viewers nationwide the opportunity to help bring Kristen back to family, friends and classmates that want her home.

Senate cuts funding deadline

Student Senate now requires all funding applications to be submitted at the beginning of the semester.

TIM CRONE
Staff Writer

The Student Senate recently voted to consolidate its workload in the interest of better funding allocation. In a December decision, it was voted that all applications for Student Government funds must be submitted by Jan. 22, 1998. This is a dramatic change from the traditional policy, which allowed applications for funds throughout the semester.

However, said Student Senate President Jim Claggett, the decision to try this new approach came as a result of past frustrations over misallocated funds.

Now, "it's strictly on a first come, first serve basis," said Claggett. In the past, "we allocated all our money and then a couple groups came asking for money."

With so many qualified requests, the current system seems to make it difficult for money to be given to the most important campus organizations.

The new system, which is only being implemented on a trial basis, will allow Senators "to compare those requests on merit."

However, there are many negatives.

"The biggest potential problem is that groups that deserve funding might not get funding," said Claggett. Some groups may not be able to submit their completed applications by such an early date, or perhaps not even know about the new method.

"Another problem foreseen by Claggett is the possibility of events that come up during the semester, or new groups that are formed after the application deadline.

Nonetheless, Claggett believes that "at least for a trial run, the positives outweigh the negatives."

Applications for funding must now be submitted no later than Jan. 22. "To be fair to all organizations, there can be no extensions made on this deadline," said Claggett.

NCSU plans fair

NCSU will host a career fair in Charlotte.

LOUISA JONES
Staff Writer

Graduating seniors, graduate students and N.C. State alumni in search of jobs will have to move their search to Charlotte for a day. The NCSU Alumni Association and the University Career Center are sponsoring a career fair that will be held in downtown Charlotte on Tues., Jan. 20.

The career fair, officially titled Wolfpack Alumni Career Conference 1998 (WACC), will be held at the Adam's Mark Hotel in Charlotte from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. WACC conveniently coincides with the extra day added to the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

WACC was initiated by the Senior Class Council, which is headed by Josh Hawn, senior class president, as its senior class project. The fair has become a joint effort between the alumni association and the career center, said Matt Smith, director of Young Alumni Relations.

"The Alumni Association is trying to serve the needs of students and alumni," added Smith.

Approximately 200 companies have been invited to take part in the fair, which is expected to provide a "good cross section" for different majors, from humanities to engineering, Smith said.

"To this date, a dozen or so regional employers out of the Charlotte area have accepted [the invitation]," said Mary Beck Sutton, coordinator of alumni career services. Some of these companies include Anderson Consulting, First Union and Duke Engineering and Services, Sutton said.

WACC is expected to be smaller than other career fairs previously held on the NCSU campus, due to the distance to Charlotte and the fact that many students and alumni have already secured jobs at this point in the year. However, the fair will still provide students and alumni who want to work in the Charlotte area good opportunities to meet with prospective employers, Smith said.

"Charlotte is a really, really hot spot right now," Smith said. Charlotte is the center for numerous companies and is a good base for recruiters, he added.

If WACC is successful, the event could be expanded in the future to cities such as Wilmington, Greensboro and Atlanta, Smith said.

The deadline for students and alumni to submit resumes for the conference has been moved from Tuesday, January 6 to Monday, January 12. Resumes must be given to Mary Beck Sutton at 2100 Pullen Hall by 5 p.m. in order to be included in the resume book that is given to recruiters. If some are unable to meet this deadline but still want to attend the fair, they must inform Sutton before the event so that she can reserve a place for them. These people will be responsible for giving their resumes to recruiters.

For more information about WACC, students and alumni can contact Mary Beck Sutton at 515-2396 at the NCSU Alumni Career Services.

Special forum lists speakers

The leaders of the free world return to NCSU. Again.

PHILLIP REESE
News Editor

While they may not shine as brightly as in years past, numerous, albeit lesser known, stars will still be on display at the 1998 Emerging Issues Forum. This year's forum, entitled "People and Planet: A Fragile Partnership," includes speeches from a top NASA official, the director of the National Zoo and the mayor of Milwaukee, among others. The forum will be held Feb. 26 and 27 in N.C. State's McKimmon Center.

"All of these people are keynotes," Betty Owen, director of the Emerging Issues Forum, said. "Any one of these people would be keynotes at any other conference in the country."

And while the head of NASA and the director of the National Zoo may not be as well known as past forum speakers such as U.S. Vice President Al Gore or House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, this year's speakers are still very well-known

Friday IN BRIEF

History professor honored with a room

A crowd of former students, faculty colleagues and family members gathered to witness the official designation of the Burton F. Beers Seminar Room.

Beers, now emeritus professor of history, became a founding member of the history department when he joined the N.C. State faculty in 1955, former department head Dr. William Harris said.

"This is a most fitting tribute to you, to your career and to the outstanding contributions you have made to mankind. But, you have made a difference," Chancellor Larry Monteith said.

While at NCSU, Beers won two Outstanding Teacher Awards, was named Alumni Distinguished Professor and received an Alumni Association special citation for Outstanding Service and Dedication.

He was the first to receive the Board of Trustees' Alexander Holladay Medal for Excellence and was awarded the Hobart College Medal of Excellence.

NCSU art gallery changes its name

On Jan. 1, the Visual Arts Center at the University Student Center became the Gallery of Art & Design.

The new name is designed to reflect the unique mission of the center to collect work in areas especially connected to N.C. State's historic strengths in textiles, ceramics, design and architecture—in addition to the more traditional visual arts.

The Friends of the Gallery, a volunteer association of advocates for the visual arts at NCSU, requested the change, which was approved by Chancellor Larry Monteith.

"The change communicates more immediately and clearly the intent of the facility to be a place where NCSU's collection of arts, crafts and design is housed, preserved and displayed for the appreciation and enlightenment of the university community and the citizens of North Carolina," said John Wall, former Friends of the Gallery president.

Chancellor Search Committee wants input

The N.C. State community and general public will have another opportunity to voice their views to NCSU's Chancellor Search Committee.

The meeting will be held Feb. 2 from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the McKimmon Center, and will be open to the public. The purpose of the meeting is to provide a forum for interested individuals to share their perspectives with members of the committee.

Those interested in speaking should call John Kanipe, executive secretary of the Chancellor Search Committee, at 515-2200.

Speakers will be asked to limit their remarks to five minutes, and they must provide a written text that will be retained for future consideration by the committee.

Others who may not have the opportunity to speak can send one page letters or statements to the Chancellor Search Committee at Box 10409, Raleigh, NC 27605.

within their fields, Owen said. Owen points to Sylvia Earle, explorer-in-residence at the National Geographic Society and 1998 Emerging Issues Forum speaker, as an example of this.

"She is the female equivalent of Jacques Cousteau," Owen said. "She is an explorer of excellent reputation, but not everyone knows who she is."

Ditto for NASA's Daniel Goldin, a man who has quietly changed NASA's fortunes in the wake of the Challenger explosion.

"He has managed to pull NASA up by its bootstraps," Owen said.

Goldin will discuss a high-tech environmental monitoring project, called "Mission to Planet Earth," that gauges the condition of the earth's environment from outer space.

Also on the list of speakers are Michael Robinson, director of the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C.; Ray Anderson, co-chairman of the President's Council on Sustainable Development; John Norquist, mayor of Milwaukee; businessmen Paul Hawken and John Knott; and Theodore Hullar from Cornell University.

Owen said she had no trouble convincing this year's speakers to commit to the forum.

"We always get our top speakers," Owen said. "People love to come." The two-day forum is a little pricey, costing $150 a seat, but Owen said there will be numerous opportunities for students and faculty members to attend the forum at reduced prices.

"All of the [individual] deans provide scholarships to 10 students at a discount rate," Owen said.

In addition to the student scholarships, forum admission costs for 100 faculty members are underwritten by the Provost's office.

If the available scholarships are not enough to cover the expenses of all students who want to attend the event, Owen said she would personally try to round up more financial aid.

"If enough students want to come, I'll talk to the chancellor," she said.

The forum will begin the morning of Feb. 26 and close in the late afternoon of Feb. 27. Students interested in attending the forum should contact the deans of their colleges.

Kaczynski agrees to evaluation

■ Apparently attempting suicide, the man charged with two murders further delays his trial.

WILLIAM BOOTH
The Washington Post

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Unabomber suspect Theodore J. Kaczynski, who authorities suspect might have tried to commit suicide in his jail cell, agreed Thursday to a psychiatric evaluation of his competence to stand trial and to conduct his own defense.

The trial, in which Kaczynski is charged in 10 counts with mailing bombs that killed two people and maimed two more in a campaign against modern technology, was halted pending agreement among attorneys on the scope of Kaczynski's competency examination. In the meantime, authorities said he will be kept under a 24-hour suicide watch.

This will delay proceedings at least until next week, possibly until next month, taking the Unabomber case back to an initial phase soon after Kaczynski's arrest in April 1996 when prosecution and defense lawyers agreed he was competent to stand trial. The new evaluation of his mental health could lead to a reassessment of that agreement, even to a finding he is unfit to stand trial.

No mention of the reported suicide attempt was made in the court session Thursday, in which Kaczynski sought to dismiss his lawyers and represent himself because they planned to introduce the question of his mental health. It was unclear whether U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. or attorneys in the case even knew at the time of the hearing about the incident.

After the proceedings reached with agreement on the examination, Sacramento County Undersheriff Lou Blanas announced that U.S. marshals informed him at mid-morning that Kaczynski had arrived at the federal courthouse Thursday wearing his jail jumpsuit but without his underwear on. Kaczynski changes from the jumpsuit into his own clothes at the federal courthouse each day. He reportedly told the marshals he lost his underwear in the shower after they noticed it was missing.

Blanas said a subsequent search of his jail cell did not uncover Kaczynski's underwear, which his jailers said they suspect he flushed down the toilet after a failed suicide attempt. U.S. marshals also reported they saw a red rash on the right side of Kaczynski's throat while he dressed for his court appearance, leading them to conclude he had tried to hang himself with the missing underwear sometime before leaving his cell.

The Unabomber suspect reported feeling depressed Monday but otherwise has been described as "a model prisoner." Blanas said he will now be watched around the clock by a nurse and be forced to wear a heart monitor.

The morning began with prosecutors preparing to present their opening arguments. Burrell had said during proceedings Wednesday that Kaczynski was barred from changing attorneys and had agreed to stick with his current defense team, meaning the arguments could begin Thursday morning.

But then defense attorney Judy Clarke stood.

"Mr. Kaczynski has a request," she announced, "that he be permitted to go forward as his own counsel."

Clarke explained that her client emphatically did not want his lawyers to offer a mental health defense, that this was "a situation he simply cannot endure."

Kaczynski's attorneys have long wrangled with their client over the use of a partial "mental defect" defense, in which they would argue that he might have sent mail bombs, but could not form the criminal intent to murder or maim because of his delusional state of mind.

Clarke said she believes Kaczynski's mental illness - diagnosed by defense experts as paranoid schizophrenia - manifests as one of its symptoms "the undurability" of hearing himself described as psychologically deranged.

With this announcement of his desire to represent himself Kaczynski's younger brother, David, began to sob as he sat in the front row of the courtroom with his mother, Wanda.

David Kaczynski tipped the FBI off that his brother might be the infamous Unabomber, shortly after publication of an unsigned 35,000-word manifesto against the technological civilization of modern times, but he has bitterly opposed the government's desire to put his older brother to death if he is found guilty.

seriously looked at. "Everyone is doing homework and research on this," he said. "It's not something that you would want to do at the last minute."

However, Carter stressed, "There has been no formal decision on what we will do. That won't happen until probably around the end of February."

But he added that the wishes of Duchovny and co-star Gillian Anderson would weigh heavily on the decision. "If David and Gillian want to be down here, their wishes are part of the equation for keeping the show good and successful. They are the ones we're listening to. They've been filming abroad for five years, and they've given up their home lives for this show."

A spokeswoman for Duchovny declined comment. But the actor proclaimed last year that he would not continue with the show if it did not move. "Either they'll move the show to L.A., or I won't be on the show anymore," he told one interviewer.

The drama features Duchovny and Anderson as FBI agents tracking down UFOs, vampires and other unexplained phenomena. A film based on the show is due this summer.

Duchovny's statements have caused some anxiety among the Canadian crew working on the show this season, Carter said. Fans of "The X-Files" have speculated that the mood and feel of the drama would change dramatically if the show moved from Vancouver to Los Angeles.

Yet, my greatest concern about this entire journalistic faux pas is the extent to which racism damages the victim. For the saddest statement in all of this is that an African-American drew the cartoon. For such an individual, there obviously has been no connection made between the legacy of his ancestors and his own presence at this university. There has obviously been no source of inspiration to teach him that as black people in a predominantly white environment, we do not attack ourselves and define ourselves as villains. At a time when affirmative action attacks confront us on every hand and when those strategies put into place on this campus to welcome, nurture and support African-American students may be up for grabs, it is obvious that we have yet to begin to scratch the surface in race matters, and we still have a long way to go.

Marines should be this tough. Stuntmen should be this tough. But toenails?

Thick, tough, and painful nails could be a sign of a problem. And so are such things as scaling, redness, white spots and red lines. These days there are all sorts of new treatments and new medications that can effectively treat these problems. That's why you really should see a dermatologist. Not everyone realizes that dermatologists are the experts in problems related to skin, hair and nails. And they receive constant ongoing training about new technologies, treatments and medications. So they know all the options available. For a free pamphlet on nail problems and the names of dermatologists in your area, just call us toll free 1-888-302-DESK, extension 33.
