Textile fun

A look at N.C. State's past six games

Spotlight 1B

CHNICIA

What a Fair day

Look at the color explode off our inside fair page, 2B.

Outside

Tomorrow Hi 82 4

Stamping out breast cancer

♦ Charlton Heston, Lauch Faircloth and others spoke on campus on Monday to raise awareness about breast cancer.

DAMIEN HAZEL

It is the leading cancer diagnosed in vomen in America.

It is the leading cancer diagnosed in women in America.

This year, more than 180,000 women will lead for the first time that they have his disease, and more than 40,000 women will lose their lives, according to the American Cancer Society. However, when breast cancer is detected early and treated promptly, suffering and ultimately the loss of lives can be significantly reduced.

On Monday, Senator Lauch Faircloth, Red Cross President Elizabeth Dole, actor Charlton Heston, Pam Valvano and N.C. State women's basketball Coach Kay Yow held a rally in the ballroom of the Talley Student Center to announce the arrival of a new postage stamp to raise breast cancer awareness.

new postage stamp to raise breast cancer awareness.

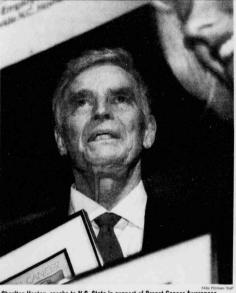

"The new postage stamp will cost 40 cents," Faircloth said. "Thirty-two cents will go to U.S. mail, and eight cents will go to the National Institute of Health."

"With each stamp that's sold, another person will be remembered." Dole said. "Each stamp that's sold will spread awareness and encourage examination."

tamp that's sold with spread awards memourage examination."

Along with the pink ribbons that are worn to raise awareness of disease, the stamp is being introduced during Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Since 1985, when a pharmaceutical group recopirized a serious lack of public information about breast cannot be accounted to the control of the property of the prop

Charlton Heston, speaks to N.C. State in support of Breast Cancer Awareness

National Breast Cancer Awareness month. The month is focused on educating women about early detection of breast cancer. Further, in 1952 President Bill Clinton signed official legislation proclaiming Oct. 19 to be National Mammography Day. Now more than ever before, breast cancer can be Türlerd with early detection and prompt treatment. In fact, 52 percent of early-stage breast cancers are curable. Early detection includes women performing a monthly breast self-examination, a yearly physician's examination and a baseline mammogram between ages 35 and 40, every other year after age 40 and every year after age 40, according to the American Cancer Society.

For Yow and Heston, breast cancer has been a personal fight, Yow, who is about to enter her 4th season as bead coach of the Wolfpack women's basketball team and who guided the 1988 women's Olympic team to gold, is a breast-cancer survivor. Yow was diagnosed with breast cancer 11 years ago. She believes that hope is everything, and when people work as a team, great things can be accomplished.

On the other hand, it was five years ago that Heston's wife Lydia was diagnosed with breast cancer. Fortunalely, she was sent in for treatment at UCLA and recovered. However, this charged Heston into fighting for funds to find a cure.

This stamp will generate enormous amounts of cash for cancer research. Along with the amount of money this stamp will generate, Valvano's $4.5 million raised over the last five years through the Jimmy V. Foundation for Cancer Research will come into play as well.

"We have to knock out this disease," Pam Valvano said. "I don't ever want my grand-children to hear the word cancer like my children had to."

According to Faircloth, 60 major businesses have already pledged to use the stamp. Along with that, the panel is counting on individuals to spread cancer awareness and buy the new stamp.

Group denies fee request

♦ Senate members endorse the Student Health Services fee increase but are not lean-ing toward approval of educational and tech-nology fee increase.

PHILLIP REESE

Staff Writer

Attempting to slow down a rapidly increasing student fee, the Student Fee Increase Review Committee has recommended that the full senate reject a proposed $20 educational and technology fee increase.

The committee, a special group set up by Student Government to review fee increase proposed scheductional group set up to the full senate week, after ruling that another fee increase, a proposed $15 increase in fees for Student Health Services, should be approved. The full senate will consider both proposed fee increases tonight, making a recommendation that will be sent to NCSU's Board of Trustees later this school year.

case tor a nigher education and technology fee is not very strong.

"The problem is that $20 seems awfully arbitrary," he said. "All this money goes in, and it's hard to tell what comes out."

Juby pointed out that the education and technology fee is formulated by a group of administrators, not students. In turn, he said, students have no say in formulating education and technology fee increase proposals.

"Right now, there is not trust," he said. "Why should we believe in what they ask for when we don't believe in the system they use?"

Juby said no education and technology fee.

Juby said no education and technology fee increases should be approved until students have a seat on the committee that formulates technology fee increase proposals.

According to Student Senate President Alexis Met, there is a strong possibility that the full senate will agree with Juby's committee, rejecting the education and technology fee increase proposal and approving the Student Health Services proposal.

BGLA seeks broader policy

♦The focus for the BGLA is not so much the prevention of hate crimes on campus but rather an explicit non-discrimination policy and secured office space.

JACK DALY

News Editor

At N.C State, discrimination based on gender, race, religion, age or national origin is prohibited by university policy.

However, if one were to go strictly by written university policy, discrimination based on sexual orientation is allowed.

"We are working on a non-discrimination policy for NCSU," said Rob Ridings, co-chair of the Bisexuals, Gays, Lesbians and Allies (BGLA). "I do think the university does a good job of handling harasment in the rare occasion that it's reported, but there needs-to be some sort of legitimacy."

Ridings also said the university is not exactive and the said of the over his sexuality.

"Every time they met, the advisor would spend of couple minutes advising and the rest of the time talking about how he was going to hell," Ridings said. "That's where a non-discrimination policy is needed. There's no official policy. Technically, the adviser couldn't get fired."

Under NCSU's current policies, any sort of harassing of gay students would fall under the general harasment policy, according to Tom Stafford, vice-chancellor of student affairs. "The university would not tolerate any harasment or violence, physical or otherwise, on anyone based on hate or prejudice," said Stafford. "That kind of behavior is covered in the code of conduct within harassment."

While the university does not have anything explicit on hate crimes on campus, Stafford add that the university does not have anything explicit on hate crimes on campus, Stafford add that the university has a clear stance on the topic.

"I think the university's position is very salt inta the university's position is very strong on this point," said Stafford, "I don't want the fact there's nothing in the code of conduct to lead students to think otherwise." Stafford also said there is not a movement

Housing bills for damages

♦ University Housing policies make certain that damage done to student's rooms is billed to the right people.

SARAH MIANO

For many N.C. State students, the move to the university marks their first experience living somewhere other than their parent's house. In order to ease this transition, NCSU has implemented specific housing policies designed to assure quality living space for all. The housing department insures that the nor-and wear-and-tear during the school year, like hipped paint or scuffed floors, is taken care of by the university. The majority of the 6600 students living in residence halls have no difficulty when it comes to moving in, reporting the existing damages to their room and moving out, dost pay only small penalties. If any cometimes there are exceptions, which require udgement calls on the part of the resident divisers.

dvisers. Minor difficulties include roommates blaming ach other for damages, or one roommate leavage prior to another, which causes conflict over who will pay. It susually leads to a splitting of the ill, according to housing Director Timackadoo. Then, there are moments during the unmner wien students may realize they forgot o return the keys. In those instances, new locks would be required, and the students would be blied to the installation of new locks, charges are usually dismissed.

Only rarely does Public Safety get involved. Although NCSU "rarely has a forcible entry," break-ins or theft can occur. When such is the case, normal policy requires the RA to make the case, normal policy requires the RA to make the call.

"If you've allowed people to go into your room, you are responsible for what happens," said Luckado.

However, if a person damages the room and they are uninvited, or the resident is not present and has locked his/her door, they are not responsible to pay. Luckadoo said. Usually, this is easy to discern because if one has forced his/her way into a room, the resident will file a report with Public Safety or the police department.

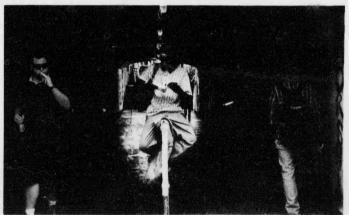

There are times when students and housing may disagree. If so, students are able to appeal the charge by speaking with the coordinator or residence director of their building. The claim is then sent in writing to the Internal Appeals Committee, consisting of approximately fixed faculty members and students, said Luckadoo. If the student is still unsatisfied, he/she may summon the university. Fee Appeals Committee, which handles any disagreements regarding finances.

Luckadoo reports that over a normal school dear, approximately 15 to 20 complaints are Luckadoo reports that over a normal school year, approximately 15 to 20 complaints are filed.

"It's a pretty standard practice. This is the fifth school I have worked at. I think every school in America uses this system," said Luckadoo.

Takin' a breather

Dwight Foster, a freshman in education, takes time from his day to enjoy reading the Bible in the free expression tunnel.

100 oz. Liquid Arm & Hammer Laundry Detergent

2 Liter Mountain Dew, Diet Pepsi or Pepsi

Prices Effective Through November 3, 1998 n This Ad Effective Wednesday, October 28 Through November 3, 1996 In Our Raleigh stores only, serve The Right To Limit Quantities. None Sold To Dealers. We Gladly Accept Federal Food Stamps.

IT CAN KILL YOU IF YOU DON'T RECOGNIZE IT.

DEPRESSION

EAT

CALL 1-800 USA RAIL

Catch the train in Raleigh at 320 W. Cabarrus St.

If you have had FNG 214 or previous experience AND you want to work for TECHNICIAN, call 515-2411 and ask for Farrah Interested in a career in biomedical research?

University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill nerve regeneration growth factors brain circuitry signal transduction receptors and ion channels membrane transporters hypertension cystic fibrosis cytoskeleton cardiovascular diseases

muscular dystrophy neurodevelopment

Competitive Research Assistantships and Health Insurance for Every Graduate Student

For more information, call Jan McCormick (919) 966-3935 or email milg@med.unc.edu. Find us on the web at www.med.unc.edu/physiolo/underway to change the code regarding hate crimes.

BGLA

"From my point of view, we don't need to change the code," Stafford said. "The way [a crime] would be handled, based on our code, would be the same, whether or not it's based on hate — it would be zero tolerance."

based on hate — it would be zero-tolerance."
Ridings said that the BGLA is not so much concerned with the occurrences of hate crimes on campus, as it is with securing a non-discrimination policy and an office space for the NCSU chapter of the BGLA. —"I don't think hate crimes are our focus," said Ridings. "It's not something we can take care of. We are focused on a non-discrimination policy and a space for the BGLA. We are the only major university around here that doesn't have office space."

space."
There is a bill in Student Senate right now that addresses these concerns, according to Ridings.
"Student Senate tried either last year or the year before to get the bill passed," Ridings said. "[Former Chancellor] Monteith didn't see it as a prijettiy.

Fees

I think the chances are good that is [recommendation] is how it

"I think the chances are good that this [recommendation] is how it will be," she said.
Charles Kneifel, interim vice provost for information technology, said his department would not ask the Board of Trustees for an education and technology fee increase without the Student Senate's approval.
In approving Student Health Service's request for an extra $15 per student per year, the fee increase review committee held that rising medical costs justified higher student fees.

rising medical costs justified higher student fees.

"SHS does not operate in a vacu-um," Juby said. "They are affected by things in the market. They have gone three years without an increase."

by things in the control of the cont

Marines should be this tough. Stuntmen should be this tough. But toenails?

Thick tough and mainful math could be a sign of a problem And so are such things as uling, retiness, white spots and red lines. For a free pamphlet on nul problems and the names of call tall free 1-888-302-DERM est. 30

by marko

Upinion

Technician's View

Technology overflowing!

ast week it was Biolex. This week, it's Pilot week, it's Pilot Biotechnologies.

N.C. State, in the last two weeks, has announced strategic involvement in the formation of two technology companies. According to Tuesday's Raleigh News & Observer, the company is being backed with $1 million from several investors, who are being led by Centennial Venture Partners.
However, Pilot Biotechnologies will be based out of Winston-Salem and is also the first start-up company to be based out of Winston-Salem and is also the first start-up company to come out of Wake Forest University come out of Wake Forest University The company will have labs at NCSU's Centennial Campus. Centennial Venture Partners is a $10 million fund that helps start-ups such as these with NCSU financial backing. The first investment is $150,000 for the start-up technology company Biolex, announced last week.

$150,000 for the start-up technology company Biolex, announced last week. Pilot Biotechnologies will be manufacturing a drug from a compound extracted from a special tobacco plant. The plant will be genetically altered so that it will grow a compound, which was created by Wake Forest professor S.H. Chilton. The drug can be used to treat arthritis, asthma and cancer. This is another bold step for NCSU: immense involvement in the

No problem

eating meat

eating meat

Earlier in the semester, a column was written dealing with animal rights and how they should have no place in mankind's diet. I found myself agreeing with many of the writer's opinions and have the same views on how livestock animals should have better living conditions. However, I do not see a problem with humans consuming meat. Sure, this topic is about personal belief, but I feel that all living creatures fit into the food chain, and people eating meat is not unethical. In many ways, the animals we eat fit into the food chain, just as the earthworm is part of the robin's food chain. Since the beginning of human existence, we have generally been a meat-eating species, and I do not see this ever changing. As long as mankind does not abuse this idea, I see no moral or ethical hypocrisy to this traditional method of consuming protein. I feel that the previous column deals with two different topics: the condition which animals live in, and the beliefs about whether or not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals do not have many of the rights about whether or not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals do not have many of the rights about whether or not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals do not have many of the rights about whether or not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals in the carnivorous species. I agree that animals in the carnivorous species. I agree that animals of not have many of the rights about whether or not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals in the carnivorous species. I agree that animals of not have many of the right and the carnivorous species. I agree that animals of not not mankind is a carnivorous species. I agree that animals of the right to not carnivorous species. I agree that animals of the right to not carnivorous species. I agree that animals of the right to not carnivorous species. I agree that animals of the right to not carnivorous the right to not seen the species and the species and

Derek Moretz Freshmen engineering

Traffic cops

horrid at fair

Looking through the campus newspaper to keep up with the local events, I read an editorial in the Monday, Oct. 19 edition titled "Fair, football a had mix."

I happened to read the editorial only a couple of days after having my own experience with the mobs of people that were flocking to the fair and the N.C. State-Duke game. I got up too late to get to the game myself, so I felts somewhat responsible for being stuck in the traffic so long, but let's consider who could have saved many people the trouble of getting through the traffic. Not only did the poor planning affect anyone heading to the fairgrounds or to the football game, but also those innocent people who were delayed from a destination formation of two companies, announced within such a short period of time. Could this be a trent? With the room available to expand on Centennial Campus, it sure looks that way. With well over a million dollars invested in two weeks, the possibilities are astounding. When NCSU students, faculty, staff and alumni hear about these kinds of developments, time stops and moments are taken to listen and appreciate what this school can do. These two commanies reside in the

CAMPUS

These two companies reside in the world of bioresearch and pharmaceuticals. With all the other technolworld of bioresearch and pharma-ceuticals. With all the other technol-ogy and science/mathematical cur-riculums studied at this university, imagine how many other start-up companies could be forged in the next 10 years. This is only the beginning of what could be a "mini-RTP" inside Centennial Campus, possibly laced with engineering, agricultural and other technology-oriented start-up companies with deep ties to NCSU.

Time is nothing but a great asset for NCSU, with the announcement of these two companies in such short proximity. Of course, one can-not expect a new start-up organiza-tion to sprout every week, but the chances certainly are there for new entities to form several times a year.

NCSU is proving that it has a lot to offer to this world with the for-mation of these companies, so sit mation of these companies, so sit back and be thankful for it.

that was not the same as the thousands of people who got in their way. Looking at the problem from the view of those stuck in traffic its seemed like something that should be easy to fix, and it would be that easy. Just like the view by Technician, I believe changing the place of the football game during the two weekends of the fair would reduce the amount of traffic greatly. Adding to the problem was my personal disappointment with the traffic guards that were supposed to be controlling the many cars. Things could have been done in a much more organized fashion. The performance of the officers caused not only myself but also the rest of my friends in the car to miss the football game. After waiting in line for an hour and a half, we were in the right lane trying to merge over in get to Carter-Finley Stadium when an officer waved us forward. When we told her that we needed to get over to get to the game, she told us we had it do down the road to the end of the line. The stadium was right there, and we were told we had to drive a mile or so down the road and wait again after already waiting what seemed to be an excessive amount of time.

doughboy classics

Nice boys wanted

KELLY MARKS

Everyday, some girl somewhere utters those four little words. And they think they mean them, too. Arrregghh. Girls, girls, girls, you do not need a boy. No one needs anyone else—the last time I checked, the essential elements for life were water, food, air and shelter. Nowhere did it say anything about significant others. You do not need a boy. You want a boy. You want, not need. Comprehend? And with that thusly stated, I have something else to say. I want a boy. Now before this column gets altogether pathetic or starts to resemble a desperate plea for dates (calling all eligible males, bitter single femalewarf seeking single guy to share the cynicism...), let me just stress this again. I want a boy. I do not need a boy. I can open my own jars and kill big scary bugs all by myself, thank you very much. But they can be awfully nice to have around sometimes.

Boys have great shoulders.

thank you very much. But usey can be awfully nice to have around sometimes. Boys have great shoulders. They're nice and soft and just about the right size for a girl's head to rest on. There's even that spot where their neck curves in and your head fits and it seems like it's just meant to be. They give better hugs than girls, too — trapping you in a great big envelope of arms and squeezing just enough to make you feel like your head might pop off and you're gonna die, but in a good, non-death-inducing kind of way.

And boys, when they think about it, smell good. Boys, even without thinking about it, generally look pretty good, too. They don't seem to have to try, the jerks — even in sweat pants or holey shirts or with really had stick-yup hair, most guys will still do numbers on a girl's head — heck, they could shave their heads and still be adorable. How many girls can one say that about?

And boys (again, when they think about it) can be pretty nice, too. It's not so much when they give you things or when they tell you that you look quite stunning in that low-cut, cleavage-revealing dress. That's all suspect — they give gifts to get off the hook or say 'that's a nice dress' to justify why they seem to be so fascinated with its bodice. It's the other things they do, like when they remember things about you that you didn't even think they noticed. It's when they listen and look sincerely interested as you go hrough all the sordid details of your horrible day. It's knowing your horrible day. It's knowing your horrible and you favorite soft drink and that you eat all of your horrible day. It's knowing you want tood in order or can't fall askeep without the TV on. And sometimes, it's just them stiting with you somewhere in the dark without having to say a word.

Yes, boys are nice. And I think I'd like to have one around. Which leads me to the question that all girls eventually ask themselves (and generally anyone else with an ounce of tolerance for pitful bouts of whiming), which is, "Why don't have a guy?"

I think that for ego's sake I'll avoid tolerance for pithul bouls of whining, which is, "Why don't have a guy?"

I think that for ego's sake I'll avoid the typical female way of exploring this issue and not look at this through the 'what's-wrong-with-me?' line of reasoning. That's a question I can ponder some other time when it won't involve me sharing my personal faults and hang-ups with the rest of the student body. I think the real problem all boils down to one reason anyway.

I'm picky, I always have been — in my youth, I turned my nose up at all things green, and as an adult I still won't eat a banana for anyone. It's all very simple really—I take the same attitude toward boys as food. I won't touch anything with coconut in it, no red meat, no one without a sense of humor and nobody shorter than me (like that's possible).

There's one main problem with white the intitude I measure that I possible).

There's one main problem with taking this attitude. I maintain that I know what I like and what I don't. My friends ask (in much the same tone as my parents over a Sunday supper of meatloaf and peas), "How can you know you don't like something, if you never give it a try?"

There's no real answer here. I can only gracefully try to skirt the issue.
It's like when I was 12 and used my fork and a large hunk of cubesteak for a microphone and performed an impromptu (yet rather rousing) rendition of "Love Me Tender" in a vain effort not to have to eat the darn stuff.

Of course it didn't work then, and Of course it didn't work then, and it won't now (I mean the diversion, not the singing). By trying to draw attention away from the problem, I only make it worse. In the end, I still have to chew on something rather distasteful.

only make it worse. In the end, I still have to chew on something rather distasseful.

So why don't I have a boy? I want one, right? But maybe I don't want one, right? But maybe I don't want one badly enough.

I think I lied earlier. I think there are actually girls, who need guys. We've all met the type—they jump from long-term relationship to long-term relationship. If they're single more than three months, they get all antisy and moody and start comparing themselves to spinsters. And when they do have a guy, he is their world, replacing all of their hobbies and interests and friends within a week of the first date. These girls always seem to get guys. But I think it's because they physically do need them, like junkies need drugs or babies need milk or fish need water—it's a fundamental craving and sometimes a necessary component of the structure of their lives.

Okay, so some girls get boys because they need them. That's the difference between them and me. I just sit by idly wanting but not necessarily enough to drawing about it.

I don't want a boy bad enough to take a chance. Take this as you will —good or bad. I don't want a boy badly enough to try out guys who don't fit my little personal boy trait wish list. This is bad—who knows what I could be missing out on? But I also don't want a boy badly enough to want to be dating him. I don't want to settle. Aye,

TECHNICIAN

Phillip Reese General Manager

Alan Hart

Production Manager Farrah Cooley

Sports Editor K. Saffney Features Editor Christine Oldhar Spotlight Editor Megan Riley Opinion Editor Josh Justin

Photography Editor Mike Pittma es Editor Matt Everly & Mark McLa

Classifieds Manager K. Gaffney Advertising Director Ebonie Polite
Ad. Production Chief Eric Gonzale:

..515-2411 ..515-2829 .515-5133

TOL: Technician OnLine

Campus Forum: techforum-L@ncsu.ed Press Releases:techpress-L@ncsu.edu Information: techinfo@ncsu.edu

Legitimate libertarians don't need a party

NCSU students get a bargain

Brian Preston Freshmen aerospace engineering amount of time.

Unfortunately, my story is just a small part of the problem that exists. Something must be done to fix the scheduling of the fair and the NCSU football games. It is not hard to do; it just takes a little time to organize it.

get a pargain

I am writing this letter concerning all the commotion over the raising of student fees. First and foremost, I think it is time we give the good folly at computing and health services some credit. These people are professionals and, contrary to popular belief, know what they are doing. They don't want to raise fees any more than they have to, and I am sure when they propose a fee increase, it is probably for a good reason. Many of them may even have children who attend N.C. State. So there is a good chance they are in the same boat as you and I.

Secondly, everyone is forgetting that we are getting one of the best bargains for our education in the nation. I don't want fees raised any more

See Forum, Page 4A

Individuality. What does this mean to an American citizen? We take for granted this right of expression or thought that we use everyday. You might want a tattoo that professes your love for cheeseburgers, or simply you might like to wear black pants. For whatever reason we can show our thoughts, our ideals, even our opinions in many different forms and mediums.

On one certain Tuesday of November every year, we have a time to express these ideas. Yes, this happens to be Election Day. With that day approaching I have decided to talk about a certain party that happens to be represented by a fellow opinion columnist. Let me start out

"A libertarian is a person who believes that no one has the right, under any circumstances, to initiate force against another human being or to advocate or delegate its initiation. Those who act consistently with this principle are libertarians, whether they realize it or not. Those who fail to act consistently with it are not libertarians, regardless of what they may claim." (http://www.webleyweb.com/tle/who oislib.html)

When I read this and think about

oisibl.html)
When I read this and think about all the propaganda Mr. LeBoeuf has written, I cannot do anything but shake my head in disbelief. I have known about libertarianism for about three years. My introduction to the party came from former employers I had who would even neglect their parents to make a buck, i.e., leave grandma in the car during N. C. summer heat while ma and pa work in the store for a few hours. Also, there was always talk of how the "man" was getting these owners down, but they would be quick in picking up the phone to nare on something illegal other citizens were doing. Does this at all conflict with the definition above?

Then I began noticing Leboeufian

with the definition above?
Then I began noticing Leboeufian philosophy and his attempt at trying to win a political race. I rully respect Stephen for his strong convictions, but they do not make sense. This definitely not going to be an attack on his character or his personality, rather, I am questioning the validity of the Libertarian Party's place in American politics.

One of the first ideas that libertarians will ramble on about is a person's ability to stand alone in whatever his pursuit may be. Here is my main question: Why do these types of people need a political affiliation? I mean, you can run as an independent. Why be bothered with structure and the constraints of a doctrine or credo when you have your own concept of how our government should be run? If your platform is something most voters would acknowledge, then you do not need the stamp of approval from a huge party to win a race.

It seems to me that most of the lib-party to win a race.

It seems to me that most of the libertarians are from — or want to be — upper class families or are people who own their own businesses and hope to reach the upper class. When

See McLain, Page 4A

Date: Tuesday, November 3, 1998 Place: Weisiger-Brown Auditorium

(Located between Wood Hall and Derr Track) Time: 6:00 p.m.

Guest Speaker: Head Basketball Coach, Herb Sendek

Would you like to see NC State Athletics achieve this position?

If you have an interest in athletics and Your NC State University, consider attending a meeting to discuss how to become a part of the largest student organization on campus....The Student Wolfpack Club!

THE STUDENT WOLFPACK CLUB WOULD LIKE TO WISH COACH YOW AND THE WOLFPACK WOMEN THE BEST OF LUCK IN THEIR QUEST FOR THE "FINAL FOUR AND MORE" IN 1999

As we prepare to tip off the 1998 basketball pre-season Wednesday, November 4, at 7:30p.m. in an exhibition game at Reynolds Coliseum, come hear expectations for the upcoming season from Coach Sendek himself.

For more information on the Student Wolfpack Club, call 919-515-2112

ORIENTATION SCHEDULE

Students who would like information about NCSU's Co-op Program are asked to attend one of the orientation meetings listed below. Those who would like to co-op beginning the 1999 Spring semester are urged to attend an orientation as soon as possible.

DATE	TIME	ROOM
November
3 Tuesday	4:00 pm	004 WINSTON
11 Wednesday	5:00 pm	G117 TOMPKINS
17 Tuesday	4:00 pm	004 WINSTON
19 Thursday	5:00pm	G125 TOMPKINS
December
3 Thursday	4:00 pm	G125 TOMPKINS

McLain

our forefathers founded this nation they wrote the Declaration of Independence stating that "...We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

There are three very important words in this statement, "created equal" and "safety." Now most libertarians would want you to believe that the most important issue would be happiness to the individual, which I somewhat agree with. This becomes a problem when some people do not get the same opportunities at birth.

Mr. LeBoeuf wants to believe that public schools are not necessary. I really don't want any sort of politician in office who believes this. This really don't want any sort of politician in office who believes this. This is just a selfish attempt to save a little money off your taxes by cutting public school funding. Yes. I will agree that the money used by school boards is being mismanaged, but by no means should it be demied to anyone who is born a citizen of the United States. Education (we should all agree with this because we are all at a learning institution) is the backbone of our society. Every medical cure, every invention and every improvement to our society was the end result of learning. Many of the top scientists, doctors and even politicians would have never gotten where they are today without a public supported education. This is the reason we give up some of our rights to income for the betterment of our nation. Yes, you might not be able to afford that "Girls of the ACC." Playboy issue this month, Mr. LeBoeuf, but what you get in return is much more valuable—like maybe another chance at life if you are reviewed in the EB by a doctor who made it through medicals school by receiving student loans.

We need government in our society.

We need government in our society to act as a voice for the people. We have institutions like the FAA to make air travel as safe as possible for every citizen. Just look at the safety records of the third-world country air-ines compared to ours. So what if you loose a dollar per share on American Airlines of they instituted a safety device? We also have organizations like the EPA that monitor big businesses to keep them from polluring our back yards. This is our collective tax dollars at use. We can stand alone to support ourselves, but at the same time one person could not support a lawsuit against a multi-million dollar chemical company who polluted their drinking water.

Tax money is needed, social programs are needed. We definitely need to reform how our country is run, but not destroy the institution that runs it. In today's world one person cannot stand alone for life liberty and the destroy the institution that runs it. In today's world one person cannot stand alone for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Maybe this could have worked in an agrarian time, but not now. If we empower the underprivileged, it will only mean our economy and our lives will be better as a whole. That is the important issue here. In the United States of America, we are individuals, but there will be we are individuals, but there will be justice for all.

I have no political affiliation. I do like cheeseburgers. cmmclain@unity.ncsu.edu

Gaffney

Hall and Jones have been circulating e-mail and talking to groups, trying to generate support from students. Their main focus is a phone number (1-800-400-6278) that students can call and express their opinions about the event directly to the men's basketball staff.

The telephone number appears on the e-mail, which was started by a member of the men's basketball team.

team. Editor's note: Thanks to Mitch, Editor's note: Thanks to Mitch, the unidentified UV student who helped with this. Kim can be reached at kim@sma.sca.ncsu.edu. Hall and Jones can be reached through the University's Student Government office.

The biggest threat to depression is your awareness of it.

DE PRESSION

Marks

there's the rub. What's a girl to do? there's the rub. What's a girl to do?

If you're me, you whine a little.

Okay, you whine a lot. And then, just maybe, you might slowly realize that the boy's not going to come to you. Of course, you'll wait a while longer just in case. Sighing is optional. But you know down deep in your heart that what we want isn't always what's best for us. And then just be glad that you don't need it.

Note: Kelly must apologize for producing yet another one of her fluffy, non-political diatribes. Alas, we can't all be libertarians. Are you a boy? Feel like being needed? Better off not e-mailing kmarks@ unity.ncsu.edu, then. But know that

Recycle Technician

Forum

than the next guy, but I feel secure knowing that when I graduate from N.C. State, I will be as competitive as someone who attends a more expensive university, and I won't have the loans to pay back that the other guy will. There may be some way to charge students on a per use basis. But there would need to be an extensive study to determine the best possible way to go about implementing such proce-dures, and that would only waste more time and money than is neces-sary.

sary.

Next time computing or health services proposes fee hikes, remember that these people know what they are doing and consider yourself lucky that you are attending one of the best buys in college education today.

Chance Tucker Freshman, Electrical Engineering

October 31, 1998, Noon til 7:00 pm Trinity Farms - at Blue Ridge Rd. and Trinity Rd. Across Trinity Rd. from State Fairgrounds All Ages Show

Featuring:

Shawn Mullins

EVERYTHING

Blue Dogs

Tickets Available at:

TRANSPER (919) 834-4000

GENERAL JOHNSON AND THE CHAIRMEN OF THE BOARD

Juinnip Little

Chilldren

No Coolers – Beer, Food, and Soft Drinks sold at event

$

Changing Your Major? learn about transferring to the COLLEGE OF MANAGEMENT

Information Session for students with less than 60 credit hours.

Wednesday, November 4, 1:30PM Boardroom (B25) Nelson Hall

Sign up IN ADVANCE at Nelson 114.
Students with more than 60 credit hours, call 515-5565 for an appointment.

Gaurdsmark, a leader in the security industry, has full-time and part-

- Free Health and Life Insurance
- · College Tuition Reimbursement Program
- Professional/Corporal Work Environme
- Career Advancement and Growth Potential
 No experience necessary—full paid training

50% of out officers are local college students Apply in person: Monday-Friday 8:30-5:00pm. Must b 4601 Six forks Road, Suite 130

Raleigh, NC 27609

Visit Our Website: www.Guardsmark.com

Guardsmark

OCTOBER 29, 1998

TAKE BACK THE NIGHT MARCH

7pm Gather at Harris Field OR the Quad

8pm Speakers in the Brickyard

9:30 pm Speakout in the Women's Center

N.C. State Students!

Run With The Pack By Picking Up

Your Student Discount Card Today!

Show your Student Discount

Card and get $1 off our already low sale price on all eight of these great new titles. Don't see something you like? No problem! Show your card anyway and we'll give you a free cassingle by some of today's hottest artists!

.

*Also use your Student Discount Card to get $1 off entry into all concerts at 2302 Hillsborough St., (Next to Planet Smoothie); M-S 9-10, Sun. Noon-6; 831-966 2109-144 Avent Ferry Rd., (Mission Valley); M-S 10-10, Sun. 1-6; 831-2300

Where Creativity and Technology Meet

Walt Disney Imagineering Will Be On-Campus

Thursday, October 29, 1998 & Friday, October 30, 1998

Our representatives will be recruiting Juniors, Seniors, and Graduate students for Spring 1999 Florida Internships.

Please join us for an information presentation on:

Thursday, October 29, 1998 6:00 - 7:00 pm Tompkins Hall G125

To be considered for an on-campus interview, fax your resume to us by Monday, October 19, 1998, at (407) 560-5053 or contact your Cooperative Education Office for information on how to apply.

WALT DISNEY Imagineering

© Disney

We are an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Drove downtown in the rain? 9:30 on a Tuesday night? Call us at 515-2411 or e-mail us at Sports@sma.sca.ncsu.edu.

Vol. 79 No. 40

Mad about midnight

About three weeks ago, I received an e-mail from a friend of mine in Student Government. It seems that students within the N.C. State University community were starting a campaign for the Wolfpack's own "Midnight Madness."

After a late start and too little publicity, the motivating forces couldn't pull together enough student support to sway the "powers that be" in the N.C. State men's basketball office.

But the crusade is on for next season.

son. Last week I met with N.C. State University Student Senators Elam Hall and Doug Jones, who are spreading the word about "Midnight Madness" and what students can do to bring the program to State next year.

"[The Athletics Department] is always trying to get the students out to support the teams," said Hall during our meeting. "Why not start the season on a high note. I can't see N.C. State failing at something like this."

N.C. State failing at something like this."

Two weeks ago, on the men's basketball media day, State Coach Herb Sendek said that while he enjoyed the "Midnight Madness" festivities at Providence and Kentucky when he was an assistant coach with those programs, he thought that it was important for his State players to "get a good night's rest and be ready for practice."

The idea for "Midnight Madness" started in 1970 when Maryland's legendary Coach "Lefty" Driesell held a midnight session on the first available day of practice. In the past 25+ seasons, "Midnight Madness" has not only come to mark the opening of the college season but has evolved into a monarbus described in the service of the past of the past 25+ seasons, "Midnight Madness" has not only come to mark the opening of the college season but has evolved into a monarbus event that has swept the nation.

Men's and women's teams from Men's and women's teams from strous event that has swept the nation.

Men's and women's teams from Los Angeles to Columbia, S.C., to Houston open up their arenas to the fans and put on a show. High-pro-file programs like Duke and Arizona have used the pseudo-practice to give fans a chance to welcome back the veterans and introduce the newcomers, while schools like Seton Hall, Rhode Island and even Yeshiva University have tried to generate a fan base with the event.

to generate a ran base wan tocevent.

At some schools, such as Clemson and the University of South Carolina, the event includes live bands, free food and resembles a high school dance more than a basketball practice. But gimmicks and themes are apparently working, because the fans are coming out.

Even at the smaller schools,
"Midnight Mandness" draws fans, in some cases more fans than regular season games. But that doesn't mean that the plan is fool proof. At the University of Virgimia this season, the Cavaliers held "Midnight Madness" in Memorial Gym, while regular basketball venue University Hall is under construction. The Cavaliers, who posted a 3-11 mark in the ACC last season, pulled about 2,000 fans to the 45-minute event.
The highlight of the evening, according to one UVa student was the fans' reaction to first-year Coach Pete Gillen.

At Georgia Tech, the Yellow Jackets' madness stemmed from the season-ending injury that go-to guy Dion Glover sustained during the event. Tearing his ACL, Glover is not expected to take the floor for Tech and Coach Bobby Cremins
this season.

Hall and Jones, and a group of this season.

Hall and Jones, and a group of other students within and outside of Student Government, are continuing the campaign for "Midnight Madness" at N.C. State, only for

See Gaffney, Page 4

History in the making

1997
Clemson 19, N.C. State 17: Clemson's Scott Padgett put in two field goals, including a 20-yard attempt with just 19 seconds remaining on the clock in Raleigh. The Pack had held the Tigers scoreless for most of the first half, allowing just three points from a Padgett field goal on the scoreboard. Torry Holt and Tremayne Stephens scored touchdowns for the Pack.

Cremson 40, N.C. State 17: At Death Valley, the Tigers over-powered the Pack at the end, racking up 20 points in the fourth and final quarter of the game. Clemson's 20-point run was highlighted by a nine-yard fumble return for a touchdown. During the loss, three field goals from Mark Primanti extended his record-chasing streak to 21 consecutive conversions.

Clemson 43, N.C. State 22: Clemson outscored the Pack 20-0 in the second quarter en route to averaging the 1994 loss to State. State found a lead early at Carter-Pinley Stadium, but let the Tigers slip back into the game. Clemson QB Nealon Greene completed just eight passes, two for touchdowns, while Jeff Sauve added three field goals for the Tigers. Senior QB Terry Harvey threw three touchdowns and 395 yards for the Pack, who dropped to 1-4 on the season.

N.C. State 29, Clemson 12: The Pack picked up its second Textile Bowl win of the decade behind 255 rushing yards and the play of Steve Videtich, who kicked three field goals in the game. The three conversions pushed his streak to 11, a school record at the time. Eddie Goines was named the game's MVP after catching two touchdown passes on the road, one from Terry Harvey and the other from reserve quarterback Geoff Bender.

1993
Clemson 20, N.C. State 14: Home-field advantage pulled through for the Tigers. State's 14 fourth-quarter points were hardly enough to propel the Wolfpack to victory. Two early touchdowns in front of almost 70,000 fans at Memorial Stadium, from Marcus Hinton and Chris Franklin, gave the Tigers the advantage down the stretch. The loss knocked the then-No. 24-ranked Wolfpack out of the national polls.

N.C. State 20, Clemson 6: In front of a home crowd, the Pack held the Tigers to just two field goals. The game was tied, 6-6 after the third quarter, but State's offense came alive in the final 15 minutes. Damien Covington and Reggie Lawrence scored touchdowns for the No. 23-ranked Wolfpack. State tailback Anthony Covington collected a game-high 140 yards on the ground to lead the Wolfpack. Lawrence's game-winning touchdown was set up by two catches by Eddie Goines, who finished with 44 yards on four receptions.

Not even All-ACC rusher for tags yout o Tenumen Stephens (20) could help the Pack win the Textile Bowl. The Pack will try to win its first Textile Bowl in four years this weekend when N.C. State travels to Death Valley to take on the Clemson Tigers.

Anybody game?

Torry Holt will try to propel the Pack past Clemson this weekend. In three Textile Bowls with the Pack, Holt has never seen State prevail over the Clemson Tigers.

♦ Can anybody run with the Pack at the ACC Championships?

JOHNNY NOEL

With the N.C. State men's cross country team on track for yet another conference championship, here's a look at who could potentially challenge them. The Pack has yet to face ACC competition this year in any valid form. And while no other team joins the No.4-ranked Wolfpack in the national rankings, a big performance out of several teams could present a hurdle to the Pack.

Clemson: After a third-place finish a year ago at ACC's, the Tigers are hoping to move up. At last week-end's Tiger Classic, the Tigers finished right behind 38th-ranked Tennessee Chattrooga. Seniors Esteban Diaz and Joe Gibson headed a strong returning squad for the Tigers, and freshman Joe Gibson has already made a large impact for the Tigers. The Tigers are ranked sixth in the southeast in the latest regional polls.

Duke: Duke appears ready to make the leap from mediocrity after moving to 26th in national polls. Continuing a strong season, the Blue Devils placed second at the Intercollegiste Associate Amateur of America (IC4A) Championships at New York City's Van Cortland Park. The Devils finished two places above the Virginia Cavaliers, who finished fourth. Led by sophomore Brendan Fitzgibbon, senior Tom Becker and sophomore Terry Brenan, the Devils have a tightly packed trio that should fare well in ACC competition.

Florida State: Last year's cellar-dweller in the ACC cold have problems again after struggling to a last-place finish on their home course a year ago, if mishing an embarrassing 208 points behind the first-place Wolfpack. The Seminoles top returnee from a year ago is Reid Montini, who finished 66th out of 69 runners on his home course last year.

Montini, who finished 66th out of 69 runners on his home course last year:

Georgia Tech: The Yellow Jackets are well on their way to a fine season, as they reconded their second victory in three runs with a win at the Troy State Invitational. Georgia Tech placed five individuals in the top 10 to walk away with an easy victory. Runner Phillip Gable was ACC men's performer of the week for Oct. 24 and has combined with Joe Stegall to give Tech some reliability up from. But Tech will need strong performances to move up from last season's seventh-place performance.

Maryland: Competing at the IC4A championships along with other ACC competition, the Terps did not run well. Senior Matt Green turned in a solid 37th-place performance, but the team finished 14th overall and should finish in the lower tier of ACC cross country yet again.

UNC-Chapel Hill: For a program in turmoil, this year's

The rest of the field will have to fight to keep N.C. State from winning its fourth-straigh ACC title next Monday.

championships could face a major challenge for a team that finished fourth in the ACC a year ago and in the upper echelon of cross country. But despite the obstacle of not starting the season with a coach, the Tar Heels have responded well, finishing seventh out of 42 teams at the Paul Short Invitational. The Heels have lost last year's individual ACC champion John Cline but return junior Jeff Connoly and sophomore Nick Winkel, both top-25 performers a year ago.

Virginia: Bob Thiele leads the Cavaliers this year. Thiele, a sophomore, has gained ACC runner-of-the-week twice already this year, the second coming after a fourth-place performance at the IC4A championships. The Cavaliers finished second there as a team. But the Cavaliers will need more than strong individual performances after losing three seniors from a team that only finished sixth a year ago.

mances after losing three seniors from a team that only finished sixth a year ago.

Wake Forest: The Deacons return to the ACC championships as returning ACC runners-up, but without the services of three key seniors from a year ago. Without former ACC champion Nolan Swanson leading the Deacons, the team has struggled this year. Returning from last year's squad are junior Brieft Straham and sophomeror Stephan Pro. With one of the ACC's youngest squads, the Deacons have fallen, finishing 10th out of 11 at last week's Wolverine Interregional.

Williams provides spark through for the Pack last weekend and looks to build on strong performance.

When N.C. State volleyball Coach Kim Hall looked at her team the first day of practice this summer, she was faced with a lot of unknowns. Specifically five untested freshmen. But Hall looked at the situation as a possibility and this weekend saw the third of her five freshmen come through with a big game. This weekend against two-time defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland, Charece Williams exploded with 21 kills and 18 digs.

defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland. Charece Williams exploded with 21 kills and 18 digs.
"She was just a spark for us," said
Wolfpack senior co-captain Katlin Robinson of Williams' play, "She proved herself to be consistent and dynamic. She really just did what the team needed her to do."
The totals for Williams, from Columbia, S.C., doubled both her kills and digs totals for the season.
"I was a little surprised when I saw the stats," Williams said of her performance against the Terps on Saurday might. "I knew that I was hitting the ball well every time, I was just doing what I thought was necessary."
Williams' weekend started with an inne-kill performance against Virginia
on Friday night.
"She just felt really comfortable this weekend," said Wolfpack Assistant
inne-kill performance against Virginia
on Friday night.
"She just felt really comfortable this weekend," said Wolfpack Assistant coach Ryan McGuyre. "She played well at the end of the Virginia match and that carried over to Maryland." Williams saw limited playing time at the start of the season but has played in nine of the Pack's 10 conference match-ups.
"Each opportunity that I get is very important to me," said Williams on Tuesday, as the Pack readied for a weekend double-header against two more ACC focs. "Every play, every serve, and every pass is important, and it is important to do them well." Williams is the third of the Wolfpack freshmen to hand in team-leading numbers this season. Erin Vesey and Allison Kreager have both performed well for State in their respective positions of setter and middle hitter. Both also received ACC Rooke of the Week honors earlier this season.

"She put the ball away at critical times..."

Kaitlin Robinson

Williams (9) and Laura Kimbrell in action.

Bohlins

◆ The School of Design will entertain the creatures of Halloween eve at this year's bash, with the theme "Freaks for All."

KELLY MARKS

Oct. 30 might not be Halloween, but on

Oct. 30 might not be Halloween, but on East Campus the ghosts and ghouls will latready be out. This Friday night, the School of Design hosts its annual Halloween Bash, and the tricks and treats will start a little early. From 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the SoD "pit" (the step area located next to Kamphoefner Auditorium), the night will feature live music, elaborate costumes and the frantic dancing of countless design students. The party has become a longstanding tradition within the school and the surrounding community.

become a longstanding tradition within the school and the surrounding community.

The bash actually stemmed from the school's curriculum. Dr. John Reuer's history of design class first started the tradition as a sort of profest against a faculty ultimatum: spend more time on studio projects and less time on support classes. The planning of the party and designing of costumes became the students' assignment, something overseen outside of class as a way of circumventing the dean's order.

Eventually, the bash became so much a staple in the school that it evolved into something that happened whether it was assigned or not. Today, students spend weeks creating their costumes in their own free time and the Design Council oversees the party planning.

Other design organizations get involved with the event as well. This year. the Industrial Design Student Association is providing decorations for the event. The theme, "Freak for All," won over several other contenders, including "The Empire Strikes Bash."

Besides providing a great concept for wild and imaginative decoration and costume designs, this year's theme is intended to poke fun at the fact that design students are often considered a bit freaky by other NCSU students.

Perhaps, it's things like the students' strange and often elaborate costumes that can make the rest of the campus wonder. At the bash, store-bought costumes mix and mingle with handmade contraptions, and everything from anime characters to Megatron and bond girls to fire spouting Satans are represented. Prizes are awarded throughout the night. This year's winners will be awarded money or gifts from local area businesses.

money or gifts from local area businesses.

In past years, the costumes have been as much a part of the party as the music. But that doesn't mean the music isn't an attraction in itself.

"I'm really excited about the bands this year," said music coordinator Donnie Williamson, a junior in architecture. "We collected demo tapes from bands in the area and held a tape-review party in the pit, and the students got to vote on the bands that were performing." The finalized line-up is Counterspell, an Assheville group that specializes in house-techno music, Chunky Fista, Raleigh locals who play modern rock, and Flipside Phonix, an NCSU favorite that puts out power funk.

This year, the bash will also feature live Dis before and between sets.

The Person Street All-Stars will begin spinning from 9 to 10 p.m. Williamson said, "It's going to be a friendly DJ competition of sorts with two DJs spinning off against each other to please the crowd."

As it gets closer to the date, and the school readies itself, the anticipation builds. "I look forward to the bash every year and expect this one to be the best one I've been to so far," said Erin Maynard, a junior in architecture. Tickets are now on sale at the SoD courtyard from 12:15 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily. Prices are 57 a person or $10 a person at the door. The party is open to the entire NCSU community and friends.

Trienus.

ID's will be checked at the door and the bash will be patrolled by 30 student volunteer security guards. Alcohol is allowed at the function but no glass con-

KELLY MARKS

KELLY MARKS
Senier Staff White

I have a confession. Until I was 18 I had never experienced the wonder that was the N.C. State Fair. I blame my parents, of course, for condemning me to such an obviously deprived childhood.

I remember all too well the families that would pick up their kids early from school that final Friday of the fair, in order to avoid heavy traffic on their journey to that mythical magical land, which I would never see.

I remember the giddy happy faces of my schoolmates as they were still recling the next Monday from the sheer amount of sugar they consumed in their frantic fair-going frenzies. They gigled over their petting zoo stories and the accounts of pig races and roller coasters, while I looked on silently consumed with bitterness. Maybe that s why this year after attending the fair, my heart went out to all of the poor boys and girls across campus who, for whatever reason, did not manage to make it to that happy little place this year. I can see you there, seething at a computer screen or whining over your books (in fact, I think I actually did see one or two of you engaging in said activities in the flesh), and my own bitterness recedes just enough to feel sorry for you. In honor of the few deprived out there, I wanted to recount some of my own experiences this year so you could live vicariously through me. Either that or this is my big na-na-na-na-na-l-got-to-go-and-you-didn't exorcism of childhood anguish. Take it as you wish. I went to the fair this past Wednesday, I love fairs. I guess I'm just really easy (hey...), but the bright lights and the smell of very sugary greasy things makes me happy. And I like it all — the freak shows, the smelly animals and the rides. There is one ride that since a sixth-grade run-in with it at a cheesy county fair, I have been allogether wary of. I was a short child and the protective bar neglected to keep me from banging my head every time my little cage (flowed on the ride.)

Of course, this was the one ride that the person I was going to die. I swear I saw little birds circling around at one point.

Needless to say, I don't like this ride.
Of course, this was the one ride that the person I was with wanted to ride. This was his favorite ride. I was riding this ride.
It's called the Zipper, and for the most part it resembles one. As we stood in the line waiting to get on, one of the Carnies noticed our media passes and began in his very thick Australian accent to inform of us of some of the ride's finer features, namely its driver. As he point ed out a rather wild-eyed, straggly haired, gum-grinning individual, I began to wonder what I had gotten myself into. His next comment didn't help to set my mind at ease.

individual, I began to wonder what I had gotten myself into. His next comment didn't help to set my mind at ease.

"His name's Animal — you know, like from the Muppets? ANIMAL!" It was amazing that the similarity to the furry freak of the Muppet world had not struck my friend or I any earlier. They could have been twins. "This is his baby, by the way. He's driven all of the rides around here, but this one's his. He really knows it, too — he can watch a car and flip just had non. I'll tell him to keep an eye on you." Great, I took one look at his crazed grinning and wondered why I didn't feel safer in the capable hands of someone named Animal. True to his word, as we were shut into our little metal cage, the Camie told Animal that we were with the press. His eyes lit up. "Mediaga" A slow smile played over his lips. "Ah, mediiiaaah..." Oh good lord. My friend did not help matters any, He was, well, let's just say he was a boy, and in typical boy fashion he immediately began to rock the cage of doom that I had somehow let myself get shut into. Nothing could stop him — not my quiet insistence that he stop, not begging, not the creak of boils coming loose, not even my more insistent pleas (which immediately followed the loose bolt sound). It was funny though — it seemed to be a part of a larger phenomenon — the whole ride was tocking and the air seemed to host many similar cries of other girls located directly above or across from me.

The ride started. Animal definitely knew what he was doging and the air seemed to host many similar cries of other girls located directly above or across from me.

The ride started. Animal definitely knew what he was doging and the air seemed to host many similar cries of other girls located directly above or across from me.

The ride started. Animal definitely knew what he was doging and the air seemed to host many similar cries of other girls located directly above or across from me.

The ride started. Animal definitely knew what he was doging and the air seemed to host many similar

See Take, Page 4B

Fun with a purpose

♦ "Pleasantville" is an entertaining movie that offers a quaint moral.

VICTOR PRINCE

Semer Staff Witter

Remember "Highlights" magazine?

You know, the really cheesy educational magazine the dentist's and doctor's offices always had an ample stock of?

I'd always, well, sometimes, enjoy the silly little puzzles and word searches, as well as the family made of wood.

But I could never help noticing the declaration on the front of the magazine: "Fun With a Purpose." Now, I wasn't ever entirely sure exactly what this meant until I was well out of the target age. I can only assume that the message was geared towards parents. This tag-line, which presumably was moderately successful for the children's magazine, could be effectively applied to every aspect of "Pleasantville."

named David (Tobey Maguire, not to be confused with Jerry, with an 'Mc') and his slut-ty-in-an-attrac-tive-way sister Jennifer (Reese

Jennifer (Reese Witherspoon) get zapped from their wreck of a home life into the television world "Pleasantville." The TV show, "Pleasantville," is a 1950s-era situation comedy reminiscent of "Andy Griffith" or "My Three Sons," with which David has some bizarre fascination. David and Jennifer are now affectionately referred to as Bud and Mary Sue, the offspring of the town freaks, er, model citizens, played by Joan Allen and William H. Macy. The pair, who hate each other in a manner befitting only to brothers and sisters, spend the rest of the movie trapped in Pleasantville, trying their best not to (and, ultimately, to) alter the perfect little berg.

oan Allen (left) and Jeff Daniels (right) star in the dramat-comedy, 'Pleasantville.'

There are several extremely entertaining things about this movie. The acting isn't great, the script isn't particularly

See Movie, Page 4B

COMING1

Cinema
Campus Cinema
(all shows $1.50 w/student ID)
Thurs., Oct. 29 "There's Something About Mary" at 6:30 & 8:45 p.m.
Also Fri., Oct. 30 at 8:45 p.m.
Fri., Oct. 30 "Blade" at 6:30 & 11

p.m. Also Sat., Oct. 31 at 6:30, 8:45 & 11

Mon., Nov. 2 "There's Something About Mary" at 6:45 & 9 p.m. N.C. Museum of Art Sun., Oct. 25 "7Up South Africa" at 2 p.m. FREE

Brewery rs., Oct. 29 James McMurtry

Thurs., Oct. 29 Crisis
Fri., Oct. 30 Infernal Heirarchy.

Insatanity Sat., Oct. 31 12 Oz. Curl, Vivian

Slade
Cat's Cradle
Thurs., Oct. 29 Cowboy Mouth
Fri., Oct. 30 Promise Ring
Sat., Oct. 31 Hobes, the Veldt
Tues., Nov. 3 Jazz Mandolin Project
Wed., Nov. 4 Rancid, Hepcat,

Independents Record Exchange — Hillsbo

Thurs., Oct. 29 Retro Downfall at 7

Fri., Oct. 30 Pop Crew at 7 p.m. Sat., Oct. 31 Two Dollar Pistols at 3

Wed., Nov. 4 Lids at 7 p.m Rhythm Alley — Durhar Sat., Oct. 31 Jockomo, Jim

Performances Carolina Theatre — Durh

Thurs.-Sat., Oct. 29-31 National ctors Theatre's "The Gin Game" at p.m. $31. Also, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1

8 p.m. $31. Also, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 at 2 p.m.

Durham Arts Council Bldg.
Thurs., Nov. 1 "East meets West," Japanese chamber music at 3 p.m.
Call $60-303 Memorial Auditorium — Raleigh Fri.-Sat. Oct. 30-31 N.C.
Symphony w.conductor Marin Alsop at 8 p.m. $17

Page Auditorium — Duke
Thurs., Oct. 29 2nd City National Touring Co. at 8 p.m.

Fri., Oct. 30 Radio Tarifa: World Music at 8 p.m. Sun., Nov. 1 "Lost songs from the Silk Road" (Persian music) at 8 p.m. Playmakers Repetory Mon., Nov. 2 Metlin Holland on "Oscar Wilde" at 7:30 p.m. FREE Raleigh Little Theatre Wed.-Sat., Oct. 28-31 "Park your Car in Harvard Yard" at 8 p.m. 56 Also Sun., Nov. 1 at 3 p.m. Stewart Theatre

Stewart Theatre
Thurs., Oct. 29 Chamber Singers at 8 p.m. Fri., Oct. 30 Ladies in Red at 8 p.m.

Sat., Oct. 31 Grains of Time

Sat., Oct. 31 Grams of Time at op.m.
Thurs., Nov. 5 Raleigh Civic Chamber Orhestra at 8 p.m.
Temple Theatre — Sanford
Thurs. Sat., Oct. 29-31 "Grace &
Glorie," a comedy, at 8 p.m. $14
Also Thurs., Oct. 29 at 1:30 p.m.
and Nov. 1 at 2:30 p.m.
Thompson Theatre
Thurs. Sat., Oct. 29-31 "Miss Evers' Boys" by David Feldshuh at 8 p.m. Also Sun., Nov. 1 at 3 p.m.

Fairest of them

A pictorial view of the North Carolina State Fair, 1998, as seen by Technician photographers

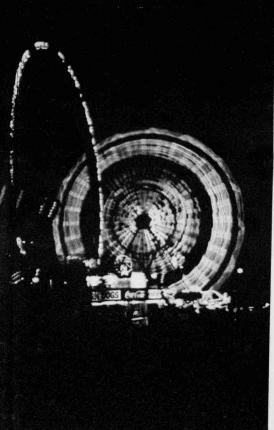

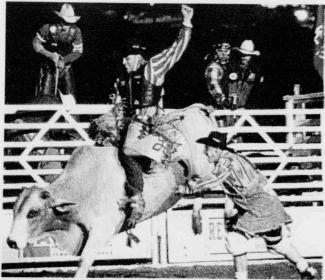

CAMPUS CINEMA FILM CHANGES

NEW HALLOWEEN FILM

ALSO PLAYING

Movie

funny and the directing is pretty much inconsequential. Somehow, though, this movie managed to be marvelously entertaining.

There are also points of beauty, like the racial metaphors provided by color being introduced into a

Take

You can't beat the sounds of the fair — a deficate balance of country and booty music wafted through the air. I heard songs I hadn't heard since my last middle school dance. The classics were well-represented, what with a little Color Me Badd here, a little Bel Biv Devoe there and a hefty dose of Will Smith all around. Then, of course, there was the staple of all fair experiences, the Haunted House. This year's fair had black-and-white, segregation-era television community.

One seems to feel that David and Jennifer aren't so much transported to another world by their strange TV-repairman encounter, as they are sent back in time. The two find themselves in a world where things appear terrific on the surface, but the problems under the surface could just about squeeze into the Grand Canyon.

So, "Pleasantville" is worth seen

So, "Pleasantville" is worth see-ing. Even though Witherspoon and two to offer — the very sketchylooking "Ghost Town" and another, which featured a dancing Martian and a very poor excuse for Beetlejuice. The whole ride itself was a letdown, First, it wasn't a ride, but a series of long black corridors that didn't do anything.

The only attempt at scariness came at the end, when a plate in the floor triggered a ghoulish red severed head. Among its many unintelligible utterances, we managed to make out, "Oooo — I'm goma cut off your head and freeze it and I'll eat' if or breakfast tomorrow. Atritt..."
Yeah right, come and get me notorso boy. Maguire (who always manages to seem tickled with himself) aren't smashing boundaries, the movie is fun, but fun with an underlying purpose. See boy who hates life, see him experience the life he thinks he wishes he had. See boy reject it for his home, sweet home.

Oh, and see if you can spot the little bits of amusing allusion along the way. My personal favorite was the nod to "To Kill a Mockingbird," So dust off your "Highlights" and head to the theater.

head to the theater.

All in all, the fair was an enjoyable experience. And perhaps, I enjoyed it more at this age than I possibly could have as one of those lucky few that skipped school with their parents. There's a whole other level to the fair experience that little kids don't see — all the rides and candy and people attempting to whack frogs into lily pads can distract one's attention from the real attractions at the fair — the people. I had more fun watching people than I can begin to describe — and I won't even try. I will just sum it up by asting what in the world inspires people to purchase those very stupid Dr. Seuss hats? I just don't get it.

Events

Events

Events

ArtsCenter — Carrboro
Fri., Oct. 30 African Grussic/dance at 7 p.m. $8
Sat., Oct. 31 Tornado Halloween
Dance party at 9 p.m. $7
Barnes & Noble — New Hope
Commons, Durham
(all FREE events)
Sun, Nov. 1 Author Pearl Cleage at 7 p.m.
Wed., Nov. 4 Local author Luli
Gray at 7:30 p.m.
Downtown — 883 Morgan St.
Sat., Oct. 31 Halloween Family
Street Fair 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. FREE
Krege Auditorium — Meredith
Mon, Nov. 2 Informational seminar for women interested in undergraduate degrees at 6 p.m. Also Tues., Nov. 3at 10 a.m. FREE
Lake Wheeler Park — Raleigh
Sun., Nov. 1 "Fall into Wheeler" festival 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 8316854
NCSU Brickyard
Thurs., Oct. 29 Senator Lauch Fairclut will be making a public address at 12:30 p.m.
NCSU Praternity Court
Fri., Oct. 3 Halloween Carnival 57 p.m. Call $12:1520
NCSU Por Human Rights Year
Seminar Jim Lugmbuhl "Disscretion in Capital Sentencing" at 3:30 p.m. in 636

NCSU Talley Student Center

Thurs., Oct. 29 Peace Lunch Forum: "International Peace Relations" at 12:40 p.m. in the Blue

Room NCSU Witherspoon Student Center Sat.-Sun., Oct. 31-Nov. 1 "Explorations in Plant Medicine" 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Exhibitions
ArtsCenter — Carrboro
"Surface Explorations," a collection of contemporary quilting, through

Bryan Center — Duke West

Campus
Through Oct.30 "Perspective Devices," paintings by Richard

Devices," paintings ...
Marshall
Nov.6 to Dec.6 "Wake Up Little Susie," art with a pre-Roe vs. Wade

Allenton Gallery — Durham Arts

Allenton Gallery
Council Bldg.
Through Nov. 9 Collage, painting and mixed media work by Alyssa Hinton
NCSU Gallery of Art and Design Through Nov. 22 Recent gifts and acquisitions on exhibit at Through Nov. 22 Recent girls auto-cquisitions on exhibit at oundations Gallery Through Nov. 22 "Mildred Davis — A Collector's Eye" (needlework

N.C. Museum of Art Through Nov. 22 "Darkness and Light Caravagglo"
Through Feb. 28 "Contemporary Considerations of the Portrait" Through April 30 "Inventing the American Landscape"

Education? Retirement? Peace of Mind?

You have your reasons.

For a recorded message of current rate information, call 1-800-4US BOND

Buy recycled. It would mean the world to them.

Thanks to you, all sorts of everyday products are being made from materials you've recycled. But to keep recycling working for the future, you need to look for these products and buy them. For a free brochure, call 1-800-CALL-EDF.

≎EPA

Classifie

Deadlines

Line Ads: 1 issue in advance @ noon Display Ads: 2 issues in advance @ noon * All Line Ads must be prepaid - No exception

Line Ad Rates Private Party

Businesses

between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. to place an ad with your Visa or Mastercard

Found Ads

Help Wanted

BARTENDERS ar

Opportunities insufable in the TRIANGLE, TRIAD AND CHARLOTTE REGIONS. Southers cartings $7,000-$9,000. To peak

Call 515-2029 Fax 515-5133

Policy Statement

For Rent

Crier

Classified Sales People are needed to work during the week. Get paid hourly on a biweekly schedule. Call today to apply 515-2029

BE A

Teachers have the nawe to wake up young minds to make a difference. Reach for that nowe

Be a teacher. Be a hero. To find out how to become a teacher, call 1-800-45-TEACH