MANAGEMENT WEEK TO BE OBSERVED WEEK OCT. 24-29

Simultaneous Educational Meets To Be Held Throughout Country; State Profs. Speak Here

Plans for the observance of Management Week, October 24-29, sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, are being prepared by the Raleigh branch of the society. Speakers of note, who are authorities on their subjects, will speak before the Raleigh civic organizations on "Managements' Part in Maintaining Prosperity."

The purpose of Management Week is the holding of simultaneous educational meetings throughout the country to direct public attention to various specific problems of management. This year's Management Week programs will be of nation-wide scope and will focus attention upon the importance of maintaining prosperity at its present high levels, and also of consolidating gains made heretofore in the nation's economic progress as a basis for an advance to even higher levels in the future.

Public interest in Management Week is fast gaining momentum. This year it is hoped to secure such cooperation as will result in one or more meetings in each of the leading industrial cities. This year will mark the sixth annual observance of Management Week.

Speakers for Management Week as announced by the Raleigh Society follow:

Mr. B. F. Brown, dean of the School of Science and Business of State College, will speak to the Rotary club. Dean Brown is an authority on the science of business.

Dr. Carl C. Taylor, dean of the Graduate School of State College, and an authority on economics, will talk to the American Business Club.

Mr. T. S. Johnson, consulting engineer, associated with W. C. Olsen & Co., of Raleigh, will address the Civitan Club.

Prof. R. W. Henniger will discuss the subject before the Lions Club. Professor Henniger is head of the Department of Industrial Management at State College, and is an authority on the subject of management and business.

N. C. COLLEGIATE PRESS CONVENES HERE OCT. 27-29

Semi-Annual Convention of Association Will Be Held on Campus

PROMINENT JOURNALISTS WILL DELIVER ADDRESSES

Plans Being Made for Entertaining Visiting Delegates—Meredith College Will Assist in Carrying for Visitors—Banquet at Sir Walter Will Be Feature.

For the second time since the founding of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association the semi-annual convention has been brought to Raleigh, this time to State College. The fall convention of the association will be held on this campus October 27, 28, 29.

Meredith College had the honor of first bringing the meeting to North Carolina's capital city when it held office as host at the second convention after the formation of the collegiate union.

At the spring convention held in Greensboro, May, 1927, State College offered to the assembled delegates the resources of Raleigh and the State agricultural and mechanic arts training school in providing entertainment during the three days the visitors are to remain here.

Meredith volunteered assistance in looking after the aspirant journalists. The girls as delegates from the women's colleges of the state will be taken care of by the Baptist institution just outside the city limits of Raleigh.

TEXTILE SOCIETIES REVIVED WITH COBB AS LEADER

A meeting of the textile students was held last Wednesday night in the textile building to reorganize the Tompkins Textile Society. The faculty of the textile school and about 65 students were present.

Dean Nelson explained to the new men exactly what the Tompkins Textile Society was. Later an election of officers was held, in which J. C. Cobb was elected president; F. M. Williams, secretary, and J. H. Warlick, treasurer.

Following a suggestion made by Professor Hart, a committee was elected, with J. C. Cobb as chairman, to cooperate with the faculty in making plans for the coming Textile Week. As yet no definite date has been set for this event, but it will take place some time in the spring.

It was decided to have meetings once a month. The first regular meeting is to be held on November 1st, at which time the new men will be initiated.

After the business meeting was over a surprise awaited the men in the form of refreshments, served by Mesdames Nelson and Grimshaw.

A.S.C.E. HOLDS REGULAR MEET TUESDAY NIGHT

The American Society of Engineers held its regular meeting Tuesday night in Winston Hall. A very interesting program was given.

Rambling lines from the "Engineering News Record" were given by W. A. Blanchard. J. S. Morris discussed the history of the paper industry. He traced the industry from its beginning down to the present day.

A greater interest is now being taken in the society than has been shown in the past few years, and the society plans to give many interesting programs during the year.

STUDENT R.O.T.C. OFFICERS

The above group of student officers have been appointed by Major Early to command the R.O.T.C. unit this year.

HOME-COMING DAY TO BE OBSERVED SATURDAY

Stunt Night Will Be Held on Eve of Game; Frats Will Decorate for Event

Home-Coming Day will be observed here Saturday in connection with the Carolina-State football game. Thousands of people will gather here from all parts of the state, as well as many non-residents, to witness the biggest grid classic of the season.

Plans are now being formulated by the various committees, that have been appointed to work on the program, to make this an event that will not be forgotten by those who are present that day and the evening preceding the game.

All of the fraternities have agreed to decorate their respective homes in State and Carolina colors. Prizes will be awarded to the fraternity having the best decorated home. This is a novel idea here, but is done at the large colleges in the north on Home-Coming Day.

A committee has been appointed to see that the bleachers are decorated in State and Carolina colors, also the goal posts. Banners of the two institutions will be on the scoreboard, and will be raised as each team makes its appearance on the field. A flagpole will be erected on one end of the field, on which will fly the North Carolina State flag.

"Daddy" Price will have his band out in full new regalia. Red blazers and white pants will replace the regular uniforms that have been worn on previous occasions.

It is planned to have as many alumni here on the eve of the game as possible. "Stunt Night" will be held in Pullen Hall, and directors of this part of the program say that it will be entertaining to the highest degree. The "Merry Maid from Meredith" will put on a stunt; the "Saint from Saint Mary's" will perform; and so will the "Peach from Peace."

The theme of the program will be "A Glimpse Into the Future." A Dempsey-Tunney battle will be staged. The pugilists will be dressed in the colors of the two institutions, Red and White will oppose Blue and White in the fistie encounter. The last number on the program will be an act entitled "The Champions of North Carolina." It has been planned by the cheer leaders to have a "pep meeting" and bonfire on red field immediately after the program has been completed in Pullen Hall.

This is the first time that any program of this kind has been attempted here, but the directors are highly optimistic over the plans that are being made.

WATAUGAN REVIEW SHOWS IMPROVEMENT OF MAGAZINE

Staunton's Story on Pirates and Piracy Commended by Reviewer; Verse Criticized

The first issue of The Wataugan of 1927-28 appears to be a worthy successor to those of last year. The contents of the opening number are well varied and well arranged; and there is a fairly satisfactory amount of material.

The magazine is especially fortunate in those articles which it denotes as "features," and it does well to place Staunton's story of pirates and piracy at the front of these. Mr. Staunton has taken a subject rich in natural romantic appeal, to which he added the interest of old Southern

BAPTIST STUDENTS WILL HOLD CONFERENCE HERE

State and Meredith Will Entertain Five Hundred Members of Association

N. C. State College and Meredith College will be host and hostess to the State Baptist Student Conference on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 28-30.

Over five hundred students, workers, and student secretaries, representing all the schools and colleges of North Carolina, are expected to attend.

Last year at the Southern Baptist Student Conference, held at Birmingham, it was decided that similar conferences should be held in each southern state during the months of October and November, for the purpose of carrying out the challenge received at Birmingham to "Make Christ Master of My Generation." Taking as the keynote of the North Carolina state conference, "Christ Adequate," they are striving for a reedification of the lives of all the students of this generation to Christ; for a new vision of the missionary spirit; for a burning zeal for soul-winning; and for a quickening gleam of Christianity.

This conference is promoted jointly by a state student committee, of which Mr. R. Paul Caudill, a student at Wake Forest College, is chairman; by the Inter-Board Commission; and by the General Board of the Baptist State Convention. Among the outstanding speakers for the conference are: Dr. George Leavelle, China; Dr.

WINTRY WEATHER SENDS STUDENTS TO INFIRMARY

State College's Hospital Averages a Case Per Day for October

The N. C. State infirmary is functioning admirably. There have been 17 patients in the last month, averaging to date a case a day for October. This total will probably reach 25 by the end of the week—the price of the sudden change to wintry weather.

The most serious of these 17 cases was a broken bone in the foot, suffered by "Bill" Outen, one of State's gridiron stars, in the State-Clemson football game on October 7. This injury to his foot probably puts Outen out of the game for the remainder of the season. The least serious of these cases, and comprising the majority of them, were colds and tonsillitis, which Miss Beatrice J. Mainor, R.N., superintendent of the hospital, thought important enough for the victims to come into the ward.

The 17 cases for October are only a very small percentage of the students who have taken advantage of the infirmary and the excellent and efficient care of Miss Mainor and Dr. A. C. Campbell, the college physician. Since the registration of freshmen on September 17, about 400 students have visited the infirmary for advice or medicine. Students drop in at all hours of the day, and there is usually a full office awaiting Dr. Campbell daily at 4 o'clock.

According to Miss Mainor, college infirmaries cases range from very minor colds and toothache to broken limbs, appendicitis, scarlet fever, and almost any case common to other hospitals.

"We have been very fortunate this year," says Miss Mainor. "There have been no really serious cases.

EARLY CONFIRMS LOCAL REGIMENT CADET OFFICERS

White and King Continue to Lead Student Soldiers

FINAL APPOINTMENTS FOLLOW PRELIMINARY

Achievements Represent Result of Much Keen Rivalry During Part of Two Years

After several weeks of careful consideration Major C. C. Early, R.O.T.C. commandant at State College, gives out the confirmed list of student officers for the coming year.

C. H. White and S. V. King will command the regiment, with the ratings of colonel and lieutenant-colonel, respectively, with the battalions under the command of Majors J. S. Harris, B. B. Howard, and J. H. McCain.

The selection of student officers is based on the interest manifested and the ability shown in the military work. It is a very high honor to the student who receives these offices and as a result competition is keen and much effort is put forth during the latter part of the junior year and at the beginning of the senior year.

Following is a list of the seniors who have been appointed cadet officers: C. H. White, Asheville, colonel in command of R.O.T.C. regiment; S. V. King, Tarboro, lieutenant-colonel, second in command; H. H. Rogers, Raleigh, captain and regimental adjutant; T. H. Nelson, Raleigh, captain and plans and training officer; R. W. Are Distributed Among 20 Greek Letter Societies

MONDAY CLOSURES FURIOUS FIGHT TO IMPRESS FROSH

Fraternities Few and Organization Loose at the Inception of State College, Now Turned Into Strong Social Bands—All But One of Local Frats Have Own Houses Off the Campus.

With the closing on Monday of the rushing season which was waged furiously by the respective fraternities here, a count of the pledges to Greek letter fraternities resulted in the grand total of one hundred and sixteen men. These pledges are distributed among the 20 fraternities on the campus.

When fraternities made their entry here a few years ago they were few in number and loose in organization. However, evolution has held full sway and as a result they are now compact and strong organizations. All but one of the local fraternities are the proud possessors of fraternity houses off the campus.

The list of pledges follows: Alpha Gamma Rho—E. H. Roberts, Asheville; Louis W. Watkins, Salisbury; J. O. Allgood, Liberty, S. C.; Grover Booker, Rocky Mount; R. S. Lenner, Rowland; Hester Campbell, Dillon, S. C.; J. R. Allen, Auburn.

Alpha Lambda Tau—Will R. Taylor, Wilmington; J. H. Prince, Fair Bluff; F. E. Davis, Seven Springs.

BROOKS LITERATURE CLUB JOINS WITH BOOK CLUB

Affiliation of Two Literary Organizations Is Approved by Members of Both

At the regular meeting of the Brooks Literature Club Friday, Oct. 14, it was unanimously decided by the members of the book club to combine and affiliate the activities of the two organizations. The members of the two clubs believed that by so doing they could increase the efficiency of both the literature club and the book club.

The organization and function of the book club will in no way be changed. The members will continue to purchase and read books of modern fiction and non-fiction. The only departure from the heretofore custom will be the reviewing of the books before the Brooks Literature Club. In so doing the members of the book club will receive the benefits to be derived from an informal discussion and review of the book under consideration.

The book club, founded last year by Professor J. D. Clark, has as its purpose the reading of contemporary fiction and non-fiction. It was felt that the average student was in ignorance as to the merits and defects of the most recent works in fiction, and that it was practically impossible to obtain this information from the English curricula. As an incentive to stimulate interest in and reading of this modern literature, Professor Clark and some interested students founded the book club.

The Brooks Literature Club has been organized for several years at State, and its influence has been greatly felt in literary circles about the campus. J. B. Britt is president of the club this year, and its members are looking forward to the most successful year in the club's history.

HARRISON TALKS TO NEW SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS

The first meeting of the newly organized State College branch of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education was held on Monday afternoon, October 17, in conjunction with the meeting of the Engineering faculty. Prof. J. M. Foster, chairman of the branch, presided.

Dr. T. P. Harrison, head of the English department at State College, and a member of the society, gave an inspiring talk on the background, aims, and influence of the national society. He was followed by Prof. W. G. Gelle, newly appointed associate professor of Construction Engineering, who presented an outline of the content and purposes of the new course in building construction which he is developing at State College.

The local branch plans to hold six meetings each year, at which time

DAIRY STUDENTS MAKE VISITS TO CREAMERY PLANT

In the absence of Professor Cleveland, associate professor of dairying, who is away with the dairy cattle and dairy products team, at the National Dairy Show at Memphis, Tenn., his class in ice cream making is inspecting the Pine State Creamery Company at the laboratory period.

This will be very helpful training for the students in dairy manufacturing, as it will give them a chance to view the practical side of this course of study, which is a part they are unable to learn in the classroom.

This work was made possible by the manager of the Pine State Creamery Company and Mr. J. F. Lutz, who was a student in dairy manufacturing at this college, but who is staying out at all the society members will unite with all interested faculty members to present appropriate subjects for discussion.

year in order to pay his expenses during the coming year. He is now working with the Pine State Creamery Company.

The following men will have the opportunity to inspect the creamery: T. C. Andrews, H. W. Baker, J. C. Cathey, C. E. Craver, H. M. Singletary, and R. B. Wooten, Juniors, and C. S. Wilson, a senior.

will be held on the campus at State College, where the delegates from the boys' colleges will be entertained. Arrival of the conventionists will begin Thursday, and their registration will take place in the college Y. M. C. A. during the day. Various forms of entertainment have been arranged, but the program is not yet entirely complete.

The second evening of the convention is featured by the semi-annual banquet, which will be held at the Sir Walter Hotel. Minor meals will be interspersed into the general arrangement of entertainment for the convention days.

Several prominent speakers have been obtained to address the different group meetings, and men of prominence in the world of journalism will address the entire assembly of delegates before the regular business meetings are held.

The work of preparing for the coming of the college press men and women has been left to committees composed of members of the staffs of the State College publications.

Officers of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Convention for this year are: Hanselle L. Hester, Duke University, president; David Carroll, University of North Carolina, and Ann Faysouh Johnston, Queens College, vice-presidents; Frances G. Gibson, North Carolina College for Women, secretary; A. Laurance Aydtlett, North Carolina State College, treasurer.

RALEIGH, Meredith College.—Considerable interest is being shown in the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association, which will meet with State and Meredith next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. This is the second time that this convention has met with these two colleges since its organization in 1922. According to a statement made by H. L. Hester, president of the N. C. C. P. A., there will be approximately 150 in attendance.

Wolves Will Meet Alligators Today in Tampa, Florida

Twenty-four Players on Trip to Florida City

LINE-UP IS UNCERTAIN WHEN TEAM LEAVES CITY

Wolves Will Have Hands Full if They Are to Win From Strong University of Florida Team; Aerial Attack Is Oiled to Perfection.

The N. C. State College Wolfpack entrained Thursday afternoon for Tampa, Fla., where they will meet the University of Florida "Gators on Saturday. This is the first time these teams have engaged in any athletic contest and all eyes in this section will be turned southward Saturday.

The "Gators took the short end of a 12-7 score from the Davidson Wildcats this season and this is just about as near as we can come to doping out the comparative strength of the team. The "Gators have always been a big noise in football circles down there and they have a good strong team this year.

The Wolfpack still has the sweet taste of that 20-7 score they ran up against the Demon Deacons, in their mouth. Coach Tebell has been putting the lads through the mill and they are primed to meet the best that the "Gators have to offer. Only one injured man will be missing from the line-up and that is "Chink" Outen, husky fullback, who sustained a broken leg in the Clemson game.

Tebell has a smooth running football machine, and they are expected to show rare form against the Florida team. State's aerial attack is expected to be oiled up to perfection, and they have been working hard this week perfecting their passes. The same winning combinations that the fans saw working against Wake Forest will probably be working against the "Gators.

PROF. ARMSTRONG AND POULTRY STUDENTS GO TO WESTERN WAKE FAIR

W. F. Armstrong, assistant professor of poultry, carried his class in poultry breeds and judging to Apex last Friday afternoon to look over the birds of the Western Wake Fair, held there at that time.

As a whole the birds were rather poor, although there were a few good Wyandottes and White Leghorns and Rhode Island males.

After viewing the birds about one-half an hour was spent in looking at the various other exhibits and viewing the midway.

H. S. Wilfong, of the department of poultry at this college, was judging the birds.

About 21 students in this class made the trip.

"When a boy gets too much for me I turn him over to my mother," the girl warned her caller.
"Is that so," he asked interestedly.
"I didn't know your mother was that kind of a girl."

CLOYD SPEAKS TO FROSH WEDNESDAY AT REGULAR MEET

At the regular monthly meeting of the Freshman Class, Wednesday, October 12, in Pullen Hall, Dean Cloyd explained the necessity of every man having a definite schedule for study and outside activities.

By the use of a suggestive chart he showed that much more could be done in both fields if each hour of the day was pre-scheduled in order of classes, meetings, regular hours of study, "hull sessions," sports, and the various other activities on the campus.

In this way every hour of the day is taken up in a constructive way with fewer wasted moments, more work is accomplished, and there is an added assurance of better grades.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR WATAUGAN AT GATHERING

The Brooks Literature Club met recently with J. B. Britt presiding. Plans for "The Wataugan were discussed, and it was decided that the best way to encourage literary contributions to the magazine would be to offer a prize to the student handing in the best all-round contribution during the year. Therefore, it was unanimously decided that the Brooks Literature Club would annually award a silver loving cup to such a student. The award will be made on the recommendation of a committee appointed and approved by the club. It is believed that this cup will create a great interest in the magazine, and will promote a friendly rivalry among the students.

STUDENT DIRECTORY TO PRESS NEXT WEEK; BE POCKET-SIZE KIND

No more trips to Mr. Wellons' office to find a student's room now if one will get a student directory. This booklet goes to press next week and it will be ready for distribution soon. The booklet will be of the pocket size variety. The new Student Directory will contain the names, room number, course, class, and home town of one thousand four hundred and forty regular students. The name, course, room number, telephone, and home town of sixty graduate students, and the name, course, telephone, and home address of one hundred and forty-eight faculty members.

RAIN FORCES GIRLS TO SEEK SHELTER IN DORM DURING CLEMSON GAME

The rain at the Clemson game did many distressing things. Among others, it chased two damsels to the portals of South Dormitory. No, they did not enter, but stood on the porch, surrounded by the brute male. All efforts to see the game from that vantage point proved futile. They retired to a corner to chat. There they were in the entrance of a men's dormitory. What to do? After a short slumber the proverbial southern chivalry awoke, and the girls were generously loaned slickers. The maidens retreated in good order, giving grateful promises of returning the borrowed rain-shedders.

SPORT STUFF

By T. AVERNON

Well, the Wolfpack will take a bite at the Florida Alligators. They have whipped successfully eleven Tigers, eleven Hurricanes and eleven Christians. Eleven Hurricanes licked the stuffing out of eleven Wolves. Eleven Wildcats licked eleven Alligators. Now let's see eleven Wolves beat the "Gators.

There, has been much comment on the campus about the seating arrangement at the games. Mr. Stafford has fixed it so that the arrangements will be better.

All of you who are not in Florida go to see Coach John Drennen's Freshmen play the Virginia Military Institute first-year men this afternoon. Freshmen, it's your team. Support them by all means.

These Sport Stuff are necessarily short this week.

WARLICK CHOSEN NEW PRESIDENT COTILLION CLUB

The State College Cotillion Club, founded in 1925, held its first meeting at the "Y" Tuesday night, October 11. With a large number of members present, the officers for the present year were elected.

John Warlick, Phi Kappa Tau, was elected president to succeed Joe Foll, John Dunn, Pi Kappa Alpha, was elected vice-president, and Hilliard Carr, S. P. E., was chosen secretary and treasurer.

It was decided to give three or four dances this year, the dates to be set when the committee can confer with the Social Function Committee. It was also decided not to take in freshmen for a while yet. A committee was appointed to prepare a list of upperclassmen to be voted on for membership.

MEREDITH DORMITORIES ARE NOW DESIGNATED JONES AND FAIRCLOTH

RALEIGH, Meredith College.—The dormitory which formerly has been known as "A" is now to be called Jones Building, according to a recent statement by Dr. Chas. E. Madry, secretary of the Baptist State Convention. Likewise, it has been announced that Dormitory "B" henceforth is to be known as Faircloth Hall. Dormitories "C" and "D," as well as the Administration Building, still are in need of names. Where are all the Dukes?

Wolflets Will Meet the Strong V. M. I. Freshmen

Freshman Coaches Have Team Set for Initial Game of Season Today

Coaches Drennan and Passallague have their frosh football squad trained to a razor edge for the game with the V. M. I. yearlings today. This is the first chance that the frosh have had to show their stuff, and from the looks of the squad they will strut it in fine style. The student body as a whole is looking forward to the game with interest.

The squad as a whole is a husky bunch, and they boast of speed and plenty of it. The line from tackle to tackle is heavy. Wright, a promising left end, weighs 195 pounds and has plenty of speed. Furtado, right end, tips the scales at 150. His forte is snagging passes. The backfield is composed mainly of short, stocky fellows. These lads seemed able to gain ground consistently via line and the passes were working smoothly Wednesday afternoon.

According to all reports, the V. M. I. freshmen have a strong team and the Wolflets will have a hard team to lick. While this will be the first game for the State frosh, the V. M. I. freshmen have played one game, this with the Virginia freshmen, so they at least have the edge on the Wolflets in this respect.

The first team has not yet been selected, so the line-up at 2 o'clock Saturday will remain a secret until the team goes on the field. The men that have gleamed brightest are:

Wright, 195 pounds, left end, William Chrisman High, champions of Central Missouri, Kansas City.

Stout, center, 170 pounds, Sanford High School, champions of North Carolina 1926.

McNeil, guard, 185 pounds, Campbell College. This team held Wake Forest fresh to 8-0 score. "Trask, fullback, also hails from Campbell.

Manushak, tackle, 200 pounds, Youngstown, Ohio. He played on the

Paragraphics

V. M. I. students have called a strike on account of a fellow student being shipped for hazing. More college scandal.

Strikes and walkouts are becoming so frequent in the colleges today that some legal means of recourse seems inevitable.

Many fair damsels will make their appearance on the campus next week. Don't think for a moment that our co-ed population has increased—just members of the N. C. Collegiate Press Association.

"Take a Peep Into the Future" will be the title of the stunts to be staged in Pullen Hall on the eve of the Carolina game. We may expect most anything to happen. It is hoped the styles of dress in 1936 will be shown.

The TECHNICIAN staff is very widely scattered this week. Ayldett, Vernon, and Williams are in Florida, while King and Bailey are up talking it over with Cal. We hope all of them will get back in time for the Christmas holidays.

It has been reported from a very authoritative source that Major Early became so excited at the Wake Forest game that he walked from the bleachers without the aid of his crutches. Excitement and joy must have overcome pain.

Hundreds of State College alumni will return to the campus next week for the Carolina game. This will be a big day for the old grads. Many will return for the first time in several years. We can assure them they will see a good football game. We predict that history will not repeat itself this year.

A NEW PLAN

Students may rest assured that they will have good seats at the Carolina-State football game. It has been a problem to solve in such a way as to please the student body as a whole, but Tal Stafford, graduate manager of athletics, has a scheme that looks very plausible.

It has been planned to have all the students who have no friends with them to occupy a special cheering section on the east side of the field. Every one will be required to get a reserved seat from the athletic director, and those who do not bring girls or relatives will get tickets which will admit them to the cheering section. All who bring friends to the game and wish to sit with them will be required to sit outside of the special sections (3, 4, and 5), according to Tal Stafford.

We think this is the proper solution to the problem, since it will permit all those who so desire to sit in a group. This will have a tendency to cause the section to cheer much more than if the students were scattered with their relatives and girls. When students are accompanied by their friends there is a tendency to stop their vocal organs from functioning as they should when our team is fighting for a victory. We think the result of this experiment will be successful in that there will be a concentrated group of students yelling instead of a scattered student body cheering at random. Psychology teaches us that group stimuli has a great effect on the actions of an individual.

UNDER the LID

By WAYNE ALAN MCDANIEL

There are times in the life of every man, if a particular individual has the capacity to think about that which he perceives with the senses, when the so-called duties of life (90 per cent of which are imposed by convention) irk him to the point of desperation. Being an animal, this man is likely to seek means of relieving the ikome feeling by employing the vehicle of diversion to extricate himself from his mental dilemma.

On a recent day in autumn, that season of the year when nature resorts to her every known manipulation of alchemy to produce a draught, the basic ingredients of which are sound, smell, and perfect temperature, and which draught, if imbibed too freely, is likely to induce the indulger to either heed the call of his Viking ancestors to sail forth in conquest of the unknown, or, on the contrary, to succumb to the witchery of the lassitude that pervades the atmosphere. Homo wandered forth from his chamber to wander aimlessly about.

Sorely depressed as regards the romantic zone as a result of having received no communicate of recent date from Amphitrite of the "Celestial City," Homo was desirous of communing with the spirits of romanticism upon the intricacies and fickenesses of the fair sex.

Putting his pedal appendages in motion Homo strolled about here and there, and finally found himself walking up one of the principal thoroughfares of the municipality. After passing some few houses of more or less pretentious type, most of which boasted a front lawn covered with greensward, and perhaps a few gladiolas, zennias, dahlias, and the constant rosebush, he came to the dusty path that leads to the city zoo. Embarking upon this path, and in obedience to the meanderings of the trail Homo passed among the rows of ancient cedars that flank the path on either side and seek to seclude the traveler from the prying eyes of the world.

Reaching the end of the cedar-guarded path he crossed the railroad track that bounds the zoo on the north, and entered the zoo proper. Maple and oak trees shaded the way as he wandered on down the trail to the ancient bear-pit that has known no occupant since the demise of old Bruno.

Passing the stagnant lily pond, wherein swam about several ancient Canadian geese that would, Homo soliloquized, defy the digestive apparatus of the most hearty gormand should they be roasted and introduced therein, he came to the rabbit pens and stopped to view the long-eared quadrupeds. Baby bunnie were playing about, while their more complacent elders dozed contentedly in the warm autumn sunlight. The little animals seemed satisfied within their cage enclosure.

Extracting a cigarette from his pocket, Homo ignited the slender tube and inhaled deeply of the aromatic smoke as he passed on to the next age, which contained a gigantic horned owl. The horned fowl regarded Homo with belligerent eyes from the arched corner of its disgustingly lithy quarters. His beak was broken by its continued efforts to cut its way to freedom.

Two or three other cages, which enclosed animals of little interest, were passed, and then the man beheld the enclosure of the lordly buffalo. The former monarch of the plains greeted Homo's approach with a cyclonic gust from dilating nostrils and with much shaking of massive head. The general appearance of the stall of the former leoparden of the wide open spaces showed that he had been doing considerable rearing and charging in his little prison. The bison did not seem so satisfied in the role of a prisoner.

Moving leisurely across the park, Homo's attention was attracted by the rooking of a Jim Crow, and he approached the pen from whence came the sound. Here he beheld one of the grossest contrasts that could possibly be produced.

In one pen resided the noisy, raucous, thieving, cowardly crows, who flew about on nameless gyrations, seeking a possible avenue of escape from the few feet of wire mesh that barred their way to freedom. Around and up and down they flew and climbed, ever searching for the opening that probably a thousand similar investigations had not disclosed. In the adjoining pen, amid stubble grass that was already burned brown by the retiring autumn sun, sat the lordly bald eagle.

Homo's heart went out to the monarch of the upper regions, whose domain had been reduced to a miserable den of some 10 by 12 feet, and he cursed the quirk of fate which had placed the eagle among surroundings so incongruous, as compared to the lofty crags of his own domain. There was scarcely room for the great bird to unfold his great wing-spread of some seven feet. As though it could read the thoughts of the man, the eagle gazed longingly toward the blue dome of the sky and stretched forth one wing as though in piteous appeal.

The sound of the sonorous whistle of the nearby school reminded Homo that it was time to feed. With the depressive feeling withing the thoracic cavity region somewhat eased after his communion with the spirits and his wild creature friends, Homo once again crossed the railroad and disappeared among the ancient cedars.

SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS

Is there a suggestion in announcement of the University that has secured courses of study in archeology and the Hellenic Arts under the direction of Dr. J. P. Harland? It is stated that these experimental courses may lead to the establishment of a School of Fine Arts. Public interest in such an innovation must in the nature of things be tepid until we know whether a change of policy is indicated.

The University now has something like three thousand students. Something like a thousand of them are freshmen. Most of the freshmen will get a sufficiency of the University in a year or less. The next Sophomore class will not number five hundred. The Junior class will be severely depleted. Perhaps a fourth of the thousand freshmen will graduate. Here is a distinct waste.

The University has grown beyond all reasonable ambitions held concerning it when it offered about the only chance that an ambitious youth could entertain of getting something in the way of a higher education. It is now, with its different schools and departments and essays into technical education, something in the nature of a university in the old sense, and yet far from it. To make it a university two or three things would be necessary. It would first have to have more millions of dollars than are now discernible. It would, second, have to cut off its freshman class at the knees by raising its standards. If it is to become a university with a free passage to all knowledge in the way of science, economics, social study, plus erudition, it needs a Rockefeller as a patron. Even with a Rockefeller backer it will have to economize on the freshman strain. It is a growing certainty that the University is using up professional power much in the manner in which a prize-fighter beats a bag. The bag is the freshman class, which absorbs a little punishment and then quits. But we must pay for the energy of the professors.

There is no possible doubt that the University has been so successful that it has been over-patronized. It has progressed beyond anything dreamed of a few years ago. It cannot go on and on in its effort to get a migration of so-called students to Chapel Hill. That business was started by Doctor Winston, who saw that if the University were to survive, it would have to be popularized by alumni from every county. Probably, he made the University of the modern day; that the thing is being swamped by undue development of his efforts. The University does not need more courses, but fewer; it does not need more students. It needs to discourage, so far as possible, the hopeful but essentially hopeless influx of misguided youth.

A university of fine arts, a place of really higher culture, a state institution where students would come only when they were accredited for what they would be expected to do, might prove a solution to a situation that now appears insoluble. In this there is no suggestion of taking away any opportunity from anybody. State College should afford everything of a technical and practical nature that any merely collegiate-minded boy could reasonably want. Certainly there should be no competition between the University and State in the way of technical schools. The University as a College of Fine Arts could meet its destiny and, for a few years, worry along and support it.—The Raleigh Times.

MAURICE M. CALDWELL

The many friends of Maurice M. Caldwell, former State College student, will learn with regret of his sudden death Tuesday morning at his home in Wilmington, N. C.

Since leaving school last spring Caldwell has been confined to his bed, and while his condition has been critical at times, the end was not expected so soon. For this reason his death comes as a great shock to his immediate family, and also to his numerous friends.

Maurice was a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, and although he was at State for only the spring term of last year, he made many friends and was very popular on the campus.

Freshman—Who is the laziest man in the world?

Sophomore—I don't know. Who is?

Freshman—The fellow that eats in the dining car on a train because it stirs his coffee.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Student "strikes," "lockouts," "walkouts," and divers other methods of showing their disgust and indignation have made themselves felt in two of our most reputable centers of higher education. Several weeks ago the students of Auburn expressed themselves as being exasperated with the administrative powers, in the form of a general strike. Now the papers bring us news of another strike. This time the Virginia Military Institute was the affected party.

The difference in the two strikes was one of objective. The students at Auburn didn't think the school was being run right under the policies of President Dowell, while at V. M. I. the students were protesting against the shipping of a senior after he had been convicted by the administration of cruel hazing. But in both cases the underlying principle remains the same: that of rebellion against the school authorities.

This column is not going to attempt to say which parties were right and which were wrong. However, I am sure that most everyone will agree that the students at Auburn had the best ground for complaint. As to whether or not the complaint was directed at the right parties I cannot say. The Auburn incident took on the aspects of interest and concern over the school; the V. M. I. strike was a case of pure rebellion, influenced by friendship and prejudices, in no manner being based upon common sense and logic.

Some people will jump and shout for joy, shouting that these strikes were expressions of democracy and were in every way in keeping with "the spirit of the times." Others will not be so enthusiastic in determining the validity of such actions, and will probably dismiss the question with some such expression as "Oh, well, the students have a right to express their opinions," or "that the administration didn't treat them right."

On the other hand I can see much walling and gnashing of teeth in the camp of those grey-headed sires who look with favor upon the nineteenth century academic system. Their expression will be one of disgust with the rottenness of our entire educational system. Getting down to brass tacks, such cases of friction as these are detrimental to that wholesome atmosphere which is so necessary on a college campus. I don't think that the administrative officers should be autocrats, neither do I think the students should be thorough democrats. The administration should be primarily interested in the welfare of the school and the students. That they should do this, and that the students should not be made to lower their dignity and respect for the institution by questioning such interest, should be seen to by the board of trustees. On the other hand, students, whose knowledge about things of an administrative nature is always more or less limited, should not be so quick to challenge the existing order.

Last Week's Best Article

J. D. McCall has the honor of having the best article in The Technician of October 8, on his story, "Ag. Fair Opens Tuesday With Float Parade."

Strikes, like war, are giving way to the more feasible method of arbitration. A strike is based upon mob psychology. Ninety-nine per cent of its participants do not know what it is all about. That is why the mob always makes a mess of that which it undertakes to do.

Then why in the name of common sense should our colleges and universities, supposedly spots of advanced culture vastly superior to that which surrounds it, seize upon this relic of the past which has been tried and found wanting? That problems of concern to both students and administration should arise is obvious, but for the students to use such methods as "walkouts" seems to be a reversion to the primitive.

$10,000 PLEDGED BY THE FACULTY OF MEREDITH FOR RELIGIOUS WORK

RALEIGH, Meredith College.—Approximately 400 Baptist workers met in the college dining hall Friday night to report progress made in the centennial campaign, which recently has been launched by the Baptists of the state. Reports were made to the effect that the faculty of Meredith College has pledged $10,000, while the senior class is expected to pledge 100 per cent.

A. I. E. E. HELD TUESDAY

R. P. Crippen Gave Lecture on Hydro-Electric Power; Nov.
2 To Be Date of Banquet

The A. I. E. E. held its regular bi-monthly meeting Tuesday night in the Electrical building. This meeting marked the first society program of the year, and according to the remarks of the men concerning the program it was a big success.

Mr. R. P. Crippen, test engineer of the Carolina Power and Light Company, gave an illustrated lecture on hydro-electric power development in this section of the country in contrast with hydro-electric power development in the western states. The slides Mr. Crippen showed were fine views of dams and power houses in the East and West, and helped to convey the idea that for every development there must be specific engineering calculations and solutions to meet the requirements of the particular problem undertaken.

It was interesting to learn that North Carolina holds a high place in rank of states having available and developed hydro power.

At a brief business session following the lecture, the society decided to have its initiation banquet on Tuesday, November 22.

Application blanks for admittance of new men to the society are coming in fast, according to a statement by the president of the society, who says that the ranks of the A. I. E. E. will be increased considerably in number by the time the banquet is given.

and North Carolina settings. His article shows some genuine investigation of his subject; the first paragraphs reveal what is usually lacking in student productions, namely, background for his work. Moreover, his reading is well fused to produce an organic story. The writer's composition is commendable; he has done well in selecting interesting incidents, and he shows appreciation of the technique of telling a story: witness particularly the introduction and conclusion of his article.

Somewhat similar in subject matter to Staunton's story is the following one on Stonewall Jackson. The author ably selects the type of military incident of Jackson's life that gave him fame and those more human characteristics which made him an individual.

"The Genesis of Raleigh" is a subject lacking the natural appeal of pirates or of Stonewall Jackson. It is precisely this fact which makes Greaves-Walker's treatment of the theme more praiseworthy, for he has welded what might have been a mere collection of facts and names into the story of a city which is a record of interesting human beings and events. Moreover, the essay reveals study and a wholesome regard for historical accuracy.

W. C. V. Evans directs us to a new and interesting phase of a race problem.

Trevathan finds that there is still some benefit to be derived by an engineer from a broad training.

Regarding fiction, "The Ghost Car" is fairly well done, though so slight as to be an episode rather than a full-fledged story. A study of the most successful mystery stories would probably reveal that most readers enjoy having the mystery fully solved. The effort, however, shows imagination.

In lighter vein, McDowall displays the merits of the American language in dealing with American characters. His burlesque is amusing and well done. To any attempting this sort of writing, however, it may be apt advice first to learn to use English. The writer's use of dialogue to entertain and characterize is worthy of the attention of other student story-writers.

Tyson apparently writes from experience. As a result of this laudable method we get a love episode which is not conventional and dreary, but one which has, combined with the inherent romance of its subject matter, the convincing tone of modern realism.

It is with some regret that we turn to the verse. Few dogmatic statements can be made regarding literature, but we may safely lay down one apropos of "Work" and "Life's Thread." That is, the function of poetry is not to moralize or preach. Its immediate object is to give pleasure; this it does by transcribing an emotional effect from writer to reader.

"Pauline" and "Baby Face" are composed of words that carry no distinct emotional or imaginative effect. Moreover, the writers are sentimental, and neither has a trained ear for meter.

The poet needs to convey a definite impression; the mere piling up of words accomplishes nothing. Suggestion is more effective than elaboration; restraint impresses more surely than effusion. A single sincere metaphor would accomplish more for Pauline or Margaret than all the dead mixed verbiage of moons and roses and ripples that occur. No good poetry is maudlin.

"Dusk" alone is the saving feature of this issue. In fact, it is the best bit of verse that has yet appeared in

The Wataugan. The images are quite suggestive and fuse into a central effect. There is practically no verbiage; there is no effusion.

Editorials are vigorously written on live topics.

"Eleanora" appears to be in one important respect a decided improvement over former contributions of Ayldett to the magazine. Like some of the verses noted above, there are minor compositions were sentimental effusions. "Eleanora" has far more restraint. The last two sentences of the sketch are worth more than columns of gush.

Young and White show descriptive ability.

Book reviews should offer a field for more than one man. Indeed, the magazine throughout should show more contributors; freshmen could profitably be encouraged to submit their writings; the fact that three of the feature essays of this number originated as freshman themes testifies the truth of this statement. There is more humor back of the current jokes than there has been on other occasions. Epigraphs and Exchanges offer opportunities not as yet fully realized.

Wm. Russell Owen, Coral Gables, Fla.; Dr. J. E. Dillard, Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. A. J. Ellis, Raleigh; Dr. J. Clyde Turner, Greensboro; Dr. Chas. E. Maddry, Raleigh, and Mr. Frank H. Leavell of Memphis, Tenn., who is the executive secretary of the Inter-Board Commission. Student representatives from the different schools will have a large part on the program.

The opening session Friday night and the Saturday morning session will be held at Pullen Hall. The guests are invited to Meredith College for the afternoon session, at the close of which an informal tea will be given by the Meredith students in the college parlors. Following this, a Hallow'en dinner will be served to the conference in the Meredith dining hall. The Saturday night session and the sunrise prayer service on Sunday morning will also be held at Meredith; the closing session Sunday morning taking place in Pullen Hall.

The boys are to be entertained by the State students and the girls are to be the guests of the Meredith students. The president of the B. S. U. at Meredith, Madeline Elliott, in behalf of all the students, wishes to extend to all the students and workers of the state a hearty welcome. To the girls who will be the guests in the dormitories a special welcome is given. They are looking forward eagerly to their coming, and praying that the conference may be of value

Richard Dix comes to the State next Wednesday and Thursday in "Shanghai Bound," as a Yangtze River steamer captain, operating up the river from Shanghai. He runs across a party of Americans, including Shiela Lauden, played by Mary Brian, who are totally unaware of their danger from the hunger-mad hordes, and takes them to safety in spite of pirates and a mutinous crew.

They say that love makes the world go round.

"Rose of the Golden West," coming to the State Theater next Friday and Saturday, is a story founded on history, of how a love affair affected the destiny of California.

Showing all the glamour of California under Spanish rule, Gilbert Roland and Mary Astor play the parts of a romantic and fiery Spanish youth and a divinely beautiful senorita who upset the intrigue of the nations in the quest for California.

Rudolph Valentino, in the "Son of the Sheik," is coming to the Capitol Monday and Tuesday of next week.

This is a very pleasing romance of the son of an Englishman who is shiek of an Arab tribe and an English girl in search of adventure in the desert.

"Mantrap," at the Capitol Theater next Wednesday, is the story of a divorce lawyer who ran to the woods to avoid women, and failed.

Who ever heard of a heroine marrying a villain? That is exactly what happens in the "Crystal Cup," which will be showing at the Superba Theater next Monday and Tuesday.

"Jesse James," which comes to the Superba Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next week, shows the better, manly, and romantic side of the best known of American bandits.

Winty Weather Sends
Students To Infirmary

There have been two cases of appendicitis, but neither required an operation. I should explain the large number of minor cases by the fact that nearly all of the boys have lived at home, where they have been accustomed to have medical care, bandages and supplies, and not the worry to look after themselves. They are away from home now, and are not supposed to have any of these supplies in their rooms. They pay the hospital fee, and are supposed to take advantage of the facilities of the infirmary. In passing, they see the infirmary, bethink themselves of their ills, and enter."

Vaccination for smallpox is a requirement for entrance at State College. In discussing vaccination, Miss Mainor says that about 250 vaccination cards were issued this year, but only about 50 were vaccinated at the infirmary. The other cards were issued on physicians' statements or recent scars. There have been a number of sore arms, caused by vaccination, but most of these have been reported well, or nearly well. "There is a noticeable decrease in the number of vaccinations necessary every year," says Miss Mainor. "People are beginning to realize the importance of vaccination, and the boys are being vaccinated at home."

The infirmary is a large two-story building with wards, single rooms, diet kitchen, and offices, and is well equipped for the care of the sick.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

At a recent meeting of the faculty of the Mechanical Engineering Department the motion was passed that a committee be appointed to write appropriate resolutions on the recent death of our fellow-teacher, Mr. C. W. Price, these resolutions to be made a part of our departmental and engineering faculty meeting minutes, to be transmitted to The Technician, and to the press. It is with sincere regret that we record the death of our co-worker, Mr. G. W. Price.

For over seven years he has been our instructor of forge shop. He was an accomplished blacksmith of the old school. Although small in stature, he was rugged and strong in character and always interesting in his straightforward frankness. He was well liked by both faculty and students, and even though more than seventy years of age at the time of his death, on September 30, we feel that his going was untimely. It is with sincerest regret that we tender our deepest sympathy to the family and relatives of the deceased, and write this appreciation upon our permanent records.

600 MEN YET TO HAVE SITTINGS FOR AGROMECK

There are approximately 1,400 students enrolled in State College. Out of this large number only 572 upper-classmen and 391 freshmen, or a total of 963 students, have had their pictures taken for the 1927 Agromeck. This means that there are approximately 600 students who have not had their pictures taken.

Saturday, October 15, was the latest date for having the pictures made, but for the benefit of those students who have neglected or been unable to have their pictures made when the photographer was on the campus the editor of the Agromeck has arranged to have him back at an early date.
