SAM ESPOSITO

Head Baseball Coach

Coach Sam Esposito's fourth season at North Carolina State University finds the Wolfpack baseball program on solid ground, a tribute to his coaching and recruiting abilities.

During his first three seasons, Esposito's Wolfpack teams won 53 games while losing 31, including the 1968 Atlantic Coast Conference and NCAA District III titles. His teams are 28-20 in ACC games, and his 1968 championship team reached a peak in North Carolina State baseball by earning a third-place tie in the College World Series.

That was the highest an ACC team had climbed since Wake Forest's 1955 team won the NCAA College World Series.

Coach of Year

Esposito, for 10 years an American League infielder, primarily with the Chicago White Sox, has already been cited twice for his coaching ability: he was voted NCAA District III Coach of the Year in 1968, when State was 13-4 in the league and 25-9 overall, and he was co-winner of the 1968 Will Wynne Award, presented annually to the man adjudged to have contributed the most to baseball in North Carolina. Esposito shared that award, made by the Raleigh Hot Stove League, with Jimmy Hunter of the Oakland Athletics.

Esposito, who also coached two State freshman basketball teams to winning records and who now assists in recruiting with the varsity basketball staff, actually played six different positions as a major leaguer. He was primarily a shortstop and third baseman during his nine years with the White Sox and his one year with the Kansas City Athletics. His most active season was in 1958, when he played in 98 games for the White Sox, batting .247, and he played for the White Sox in the 1959 World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Played at Indiana

A 38-year-old Chicago native who's still a bachelor, Esposito signed with the White Sox in June, 1952, after his sophomore year at Indiana University, where he was attending school on a basketball grant-in-aid. Sam continued his education during the off-season and earned his bachelor's degree in physical education, with a minor in social studies, at Indiana in 1964. He was awarded his master's degree while coaching and teaching in the East Chicago Public School system. He served as assistant basketball coach at Washington High for eight years. While at Indiana, Sam had one year of varsity competition in baseball and basketball.

THE 1970 OUTLOOK

North Carolina State, which went all the way to the College World Series in 1968 with three freshmen playing vital roles, will be counting on new players again to be in the thick of the competitive Atlantic Coast Conference baseball race for 1970.

"While we have some standouts returning like Chris Cammack, Mike Caldwell and Darrell Moody, we must get good efforts from our young players and junior college graduates to be a solid team," says Sam Esposito about his fourth State squad.

Cammack was ACC Player of the Year and all-America last year at third base, while Caldwell and Moody were second team all-ACC pitcher and shortstop, respectively.

Three-fourths of the infield starters return, but Esposito lost his entire outfield and two-year regular catcher Francis Combs.

Veteran Infield

"I think we can have good front-line infield play again, with Cammack, Moody and first baseman Dennis Punch all back as two-year starters. Randy McMasters, utility man a year ago, appears ready to move into the top spot at second," adds Esposito, a 10-year veteran of major league infield play. Sophomore Pete Blocklin, freshman Landon Moore, and first baseman Kelly Sparger, a switch-hitter, are the utility infielders.

Tommy Smith, who had a 4-4 won-loss record last year as a pitcher, is expected to move into the outfield after a good season of summer ball last year, when he led the Cape Cod League in home runs and runs-batted-in. Smith could also see mound duty again.

Danny Baker, a graduate of Montgomery (Md.) Junior College, adds a solid baseball background, which includes District American Legion batting, RBI and home run titles, as he moves into an outfield spot. But centerfield is wide open and Esposito will use the pre-conference games to see who can win it. Blocklin, and Pat McCabe, two footballers who will be late starting practice, and freshman Jimmy Paul, along with senior Robert Andrews, and Dick Greer and Mike Medlin of last year's jayvee squad, are the men in contention for the starting position.

Bill Glad, a freshman from Joliet, Ill., who looks like a promising collegiate catcher, will be the number one receiver, replacing dependable Francis Combs. Mike Mallan, the number two man the past two seasons, and Baker back up Glad.

Caldwell Staff Ace

Pitching, with three newcomers strengthening the situation, could be strong. Caldwell, the ace of the staff, has won eight games in each of his past two seasons and had the best earned run average of starting pitchers in the ACC last year with a 1.66 mark. Caldwell has completed 19 of his 23 collegiate starts. While the rotation order is unsettled, there is some promising talent in freshmen Bill Anderson, Mike Evans and Tom Rempson, along with Louisburg J. C. graduate John Lewis. Evans and Rempson, like Caldwell and sophomore Robbie Wilson, are lefthanders. Holdovers Mike Charron (1-1), Wilson (4-2), and Smith (4-4) all could take regular turns on the mound, while Reid Carter, Dewey Brown and Stu Shearin, who saw limited varsity and some jayvee action a year ago, are expected to make up the bullpen.

There will be less speed than a year ago, but we should have more power than we've had the past couple of seasons with Baker and Smith in the outfield.

Punch led the 1969 team in runs-batted-in with 24 and had three homers.

The Pack ran a lot last year, but lost its leading base thief in second baseman Clem Huffman, who swiped 16 bases in 17 attempts. Cammack was successful in all ten of his steals.

Steve Martin, who gained all-America outfield honors in 1968, Gary Yount and Dave Boyer are the outfield losses, while Combs and Huffman are the other regulars missing from last year's 17-11 club, which placed fourth in the ACC.

1970 WOLFPACK

North Carolina State University

North Carolina State University is located in the capital city of Raleigh, but its educational programs reach from the Atlantic Ocean to the Appalachian Mountains and beyond.

CALDWELL

Founded as one of the nation's land-grant colleges in 1887, the institution opened with six professors, 45 students, one building, two mules and a horse.

Today NCSU is a center of scientific, technological and liberal education.

Enrollment has soared to more than 12,600 young men and women including some 2,200 graduate students. Faculty and staff number more than 3,000. The main campus encompasses some 100 buildings on 2,000 acres.

Teaching, research and extension at NCSU cover studies as down to earth as soil science and as far out as aerospace engineering. The instructional program is offered through 60 academic departments under eight schools: Agricultural and Life Sciences, Design, Education, Engineering, Forestry, Liberal Arts, Physical Sciences and Applied Mathematics and Textiles.

NCSU conducts research projects ranging from genetics to nuclear physics and from nematodes to lasers. The value of research this year was listed at $18.5 million.

The research and academic know-how at NCSU work as catalytic agents to the entire economy and life of North Carolina—through the Agricultural Extension Service (which is headquartered at the campus) through the Industrial Extension Service and through the Division of Continuing Education (which conducts short courses and other programs across the State).

Dr. John T. Caldwell, a past president of the American Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, is chancellor of N. C. State. The University is an integral part of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

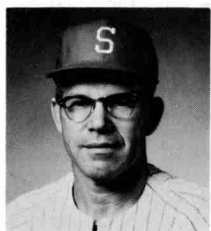

Rising enrollments and increasing demands for the services of the University have led to a continuing series of groundbreakings for new buildings. Work is progressing on a 10-story chemistry building, a $4.5 million education building, a major expansion to the School of Forestry and two additional high-rise dormitories.

From modest beginnings in the 19th Century, North Carolina State University is serving the rising hopes of the 20th Century and looking toward the 21st.

JIM EDWARDS

Assistant Baseball Coach

J. B. (Jim) Edwards, Jr., in 1951 decided to give up a professional baseball career in favor of teaching, and he's been at his job ever since on the faculty at North Carolina State University. Since 1954, he's coached the freshman and junior varsity baseball teams.

Jim, 47, graduated from State in 1948 with a degree in industrial arts, after his academic and athletic career had been interrupted by service in World War II. While at State, the Lincolnton native was named all-state in baseball and won the Southern Conference wrestling championship in the 175-pound class.

Edwards, who grew up at Wilmington, was a shortstop, and played four seasons in the Carolina League, and reached Class AAA with Buffalo (1950) in the International League while a member of the Philadelphia Athletics organization.

Holder of a master's degree in physical education, Jimmy is now an associate professor of physical education at State.

Edwards is married to the former Odessa Williams of Robbins. They have a daughter Gail who's 12.
