

WOLFPACK BASEBALL

NORTH CAROLINA
STATE UNIVERSITY 1973

SAM ESPOSITO

Head Baseball Coach

A former major leaguer, Sam Esposito was handed the North Carolina State baseball reins in 1967 following the retirement of veteran Vic Sorrell, and the Wolfpack has not experienced a losing season under his direction.

After an 11-11 break-even season in his first campaign, the Wolfpack has been menacingly on the prowl and twice posted 21 or more victories. The apex of his six-year State career came in 1968 when he steered the Wolfpack to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, the NCAA District III title and a third-place finish in the collegiate World Series as the team finished with an overall record of 25-9, the best in State's history.

Esposito, who also serves as a basketball assistant, has seen his teams etch an imposing 111-65-1 record, an average of more than 18 wins per season, and against ACC competition, his clubs stand 57-41. Last season, State went 19-13, finishing on a strong note in winning seven of its last eight games.

Esposito, for 10 years an American League infielder, mostly with the Chicago White Sox, has already been cited twice for his coaching ability: he was voted NCAA District Coach of the Year in 1968, when State was 13-4 in the league and 25-9 overall, and he was co-winner of the 1968 Will Wynne Award, presented annually to the man adjudged to have contributed the most to baseball in North Carolina. Esposito shared that award, made by the Raleigh Hot Stove League, with Jimmy Hunter of the Oakland Athletics.

Esposito, who also coached two State freshman basketball teams to winning records, actually played six different positions as a major leaguer. He was primarily a shortstop and third baseman during his nine years with the White Sox and his one year with the Kansas City Athletics. His most active season was in 1958, when he played in 98 games for the White Sox, batting .247, and he played for the White Sox in the 1959 World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

A 41-year-old Chicago native, Esposito signed with the White Sox in June, 1952, after his sophomore year at Indiana University, where he was attending school on a basketball grant-in-aid. Sam continued his education during the off-season and earned his bachelor's degree in physical education, with a minor in social studies, at Indiana in 1964. He was awarded his master's degree while coaching and teaching in the East Chicago Public School system. He served as assistant basketball coach at Washington High for eight years. While at Indiana, Sam had one year of varsity competition in baseball and basketball. His play in both sports was so impressive that he was voted the school's "Athlete of the Year" award.

The popular Esposito, who forsook his bachelorhood last summer by marrying the former Noreen Anderson of Chicago, was the recipient of two coveted honors recently. Last October, he was inducted into the South Chicago Sports Hall of Fame and just two months ago, he was tapped for similar recognition by the Illinois Basketball Hall of Fame.

THE 1973 OUTLOOK

Although 17 lettermen return, coach Sam Esposito is not overly optimistic that his Wolfpack will set the woods on fire this spring.

"We're going to have a pretty good club," he says, "but we've got some question marks, the big one being a lack of hitting. We have experience at most positions, but you're not going to win a lot of ball games without consistent hitting. And right now, I don't see a whole lot of that."

Based on last season's statistics, Esposito has every right to be apprehensive regarding the team's offensive punch. Graduation robbed the Pack of outfielder Mike Baxter, the only player to hit over .300 in 1972, while first baseman Rick Richardson, the Atlantic Coast Conference's top home run producer, gave up his final year of eligibility to accept a pro contract.

Add to these two losses the departure (via graduation) of ace pitcher Reid Carter and it's easy to see why the veteran Esposito has reservations regarding his upcoming club. "You don't lose three players of their calibre and not feel it," he stated.

Tim Stoddard and Mike Dempsey, a pair of sophomore heavyweights, are counted on to head up the pitching staff along with senior Bob Anderson, junior Richard Phillips and the tandem of John Holding and Lewis Hardy, another pair of sophs.

Stoddard and Dempsey, both of whom were key figures as the Wolfpack finished strong last year in winning seven of their eight final games enroute to a 19-13 season, will again get a late start because of their basketball activities, but each should be in top form by mid-April when the ACC championship will be decided by a new tournament format.

Of the top mound returnees, Phillips boasts the best ERA at 1.98, his performance authoring a 3-2 record last year. Holding had a similar mark and should become a regular starter. Other hurlers who could figure in the picture, include junior Karl Sawyer and freshmen Tom Hayes, Curt Ramsey, Pete Lupien, Locke Conrad and Randall Watts.

Hayes, a lefthander, posted a 28-4 record at Saratoga Central High, including 17 shutouts and five no-hitters, while Ramsey, of Laurinburg Scotland, make his bid for a starting role with similar credentials.

Handling the catching duties will be senior Bill Glad, a starter for three seasons, and he'll have strong back-up support in junior Bill Russell and freshman Dan Moore. Russell proved his capabilities last season in starting 11 games when an injury sidelined Glad, while Moore, an all-America prepster from Fredonia, N. Y., may challenge both because of his hitting. He also could crash the line-up in the outfield.

The infield tentatively shapes up with Ken Sawyer at first base, Monte Towe at second, Jerry Mills at shortstop and Ron Evans at third base. With Towe making a late appearance because of basketball, Mills may open at second with freshman Kent Juday taking over at short.

Don Zagorski, who may become the long ball hitter that Esposito is searching for, appears set for the outfield along with returning regular Wayne Currin and last year's parttime starter Phil Blount. All three performed well last season and should improve markedly this spring.

Athletics Administration

DR. RALPH E. FADUM

Faculty Chairman of Athletics

Dr. Ralph E. Fadum, an NCAA Council member, representing District III and former Atlantic Coast Conference president, is in his eleventh year as Faculty Chairman of Athletics at North Carolina State University. He is the University's representative at the executive level in the ACC and in January of 1972, he was elected to serve on the NCAA Executive Council for a two-year term.

A registered professional engineer, Fadum is widely recognized as one of the nation's foremost authorities in soil mechanics and foundations. A graduate of Illinois and Harvard, he has a distinguished career in teaching and research. Fadum taught at Harvard (1935-43) and Purdue (1943-49) before moving to State in 1949. He became Dean of the School of Engineering in 1962.

Fadum was cited as the outstanding civil engineer in North Carolina for 1971. He previously won the engineering award of the year from the North Carolina Society of Engineers and the Distinguished Alumnus Award of the civil engineering department at Illinois.

Fadum is also commissioner of the Raleigh Housing Authority and is chairman of the Water Control Advisory Council to the North Carolina Board of Water and Air Resources.

He and his wife, Nancy Fields Fadum, have one daughter.

WILLIS R. CASEY

Director of Athletics

The Director of Athletics at North Carolina State University is Willis R. Casey, who has served the University Athletics Department in several capacities for 27 years.

Casey was head swimming coach at N. C. State for 22 seasons, during which his teams posted a phenomenal dual-meet winning percentage of .866 and won outright or shared 11 Atlantic Coast Conference and Southern Conference swimming championships. State swimmers coached by Casey, who became Director of Athletics in July, 1969, won 123 individual ACC titles. In addition, he coached the league's first Olympic double gold medal winner, Steve Rerych.

Casey, a native of Goldsboro, joined the State staff in 1946 after graduating from the University of North Carolina. He was appointed assistant athletics director in 1949, and in 1967, he also became business manager of athletics.

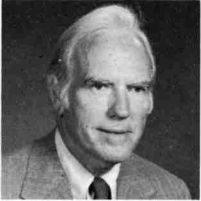

His 22 Wolfpack swimming teams never had a losing season, seven times posting undefeated records in dual-meet competition. His teams have won four NCAA and nine national individual AAU titles, as well as several AAU national team titles. He coached the American swimming team which represented the United States in Japan in 1959, and he took three Olympic champions to Paris, France, for swimming in 1969.

Casey has managed ACC and Dixie Classic Basketball Tournaments, and three NCAA Eastern Regional Basketball Championships, and championships in fencing and swimming have been organized under his direction.

The often-honored administrator is married to the former Ethel Laughlin of Tarboro, and they are the parents of two sons, Robert, a State alumnus, and Walker.

North Carolina State University

North Carolina State University is a large and complex state university, one of the prestige state universities of the nation.

DR. JOHN T. CALDWELL
Chancellor

It shares the distinctive character of Land-Grant state universities nationally—broad academic offerings, large-scale extension and research programs, extensive public involvement, and national and international activities.

State was founded as a Land-Grant state university under terms of the famed federal Morrill Act of 1862 which provided for public land endowments to support a college in each state.

The Land-Grant heritage of fulfilling three major functions—research, extension and academic affairs—is reflected in the large dimensions of these functions at North Carolina State University.

Its research activities span a broad spectrum of about 700 scientific, technologic and scholarly endeavors, with a budget of about $20 million annually.

The rich and varied academic program of the University is comprised of some 70 bachelors of arts and science programs, 62 master's degree fields and 41 doctoral degrees.

Extension programs of the University are similarly diverse and include urban affairs; marine sciences; environmental protection; engineering, industrial and textiles extension; agricultural extension and many others.

The annual University budget is about $80 million. The University has 4,600-plus employees. There are 1,597 faculty and professional staff and 157 adjunct and special agency faculty, including 910 graduate faculty.

There are 120 campus buildings with an estimated value of about $120,000,000.

The central campus is 596 acres, though the University has 88,000 acres, including one research and endowment forest of 78,000 acres. Research farms; biology and ecology sites; genetics, and horticulture, and floriculture nurseries; and Carter Stadium areas near the main campus comprise about 2,500 acres.

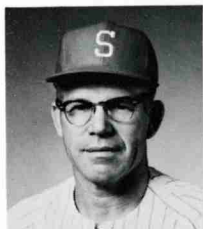

North Carolina State University is one of the three Research Triangle Universities along with Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. In the 30-mile triangle formed by the three Universities is the 5,000-acre Research Triangle Park, the Research Triangle Institute, a Universities' subsidiary, and the Triangle Universities Computation Center, a central facility for the extensive computing centers of the institutions.

The University's total enrollment is about 13,400. There are 10,900 undergraduates, 2,000 graduate students and 500 special and other students. Students at State come from all 50 states and some 60 other countries. The international enrollment is a distinctive feature of the institution since its 600 international students give it a decidedly cosmopolitan aura.

JIM EDWARDS

Assistant Baseball Coach

J. B. (Jim) Edwards, who reached Triple-A ranks as a minor league shortstop, is in his 19th season as an assistant coach at N. C. State University.

An N. C. State graduate, Jim earned an industrial arts degree in 1948. In 1951, he decided to leave his baseball career and join the staff at N. C. State, where he is now an associate professor of physical education. World War II interrupted a college career that saw him voted all-State in baseball and winner of the 175-pound Southern Conference wrestling title.

A Lincolnton native who grew up at Wilmington, Jim spent four seasons as a Carolina League shortstop. He played with Buffalo (AAA) in 1950 while a member of the Philadelphia Athletics organization.

Jim holds a Master's degree in physical education, and is married to the former Odessa Williams of Robbins. They have a daughter, Gail.
