COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

NICKNAME: INDIANS—CONFERENCE: SOUTHERN

#23 FRED ALLEN, Lexington, Ky.

The best shot on the entire team, diminutive Freddie Allen is due for regular action this year. A wrenched knee in early November sidelined him, but the calm, dead-eye forward should be ready before Christmas. The same timing and coordination he displays on the court are evident on the links, for he's a regular on the W&M golf team, shooting in the seventies. Very popular with the fans and players, and likely to break up a tight ball game anytime.

#20 JIM BUTLER, Princeton, Ky.

A former co-captain and three letterman at Princeton high, where he also lettered three seasons in football, hard-driving Jim Butler could turn out to be a starter with this year's team. He saw little action last year, but gained plenty of experience. He's a competent ball-handler and playmaker, a good shot. Served 18 months in the Army, and is a first rate student. Won English award his senior year in high school. Is a business administration major, and hopes to join the F.B.I. in a year or two.

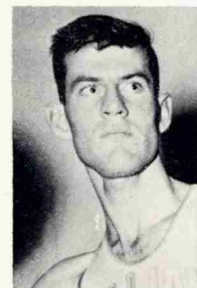

#33 Edward McMillan, Athens, Tenn.

An outstanding candidate for all-star honors is the Tennessee Fireball, Fuzz McMillan. A three year letterman at William & Mary, Fuzz was named to the Southern conference tournament team last year, and had made the second team selection the previous season. Last year he was high scorer for the Indians in every game in which Chet Giermak didn't take top honors, and averaged over 11 points per contest. Is a driver, and called by Richmond coach Mac Pitt "the most dangerous player we faced." Can shoot from inside or outside, as evidenced by last year's W&M win over Hampden-Sydney when Fuzz hit from midcourt to send the thriller into an overtime. Charley Karmosky of the Newport News Daily Press calls Fireball "my idea of the kind of ball player the fans really go for." He's popular, and earns his popularity. If he works hard enough at it this year, might become one of the best all-round players in the nation . . . though he's three inches under six feet.

#26 RICHARD FORREST, Newport News, Va.

Playing behind Chester Giermak last season didn't give Dick much of a chance for experience, but he's a tireless worker in practice and has developed swiftly. His height and weight make him a rugged man under the basket, and his pivot play has improved tremendously. Add a little experience and smoothness this year, and he'll be hard to hold. Is vying with soph Willie Clark for the first string center slot now. As an athlete at Newport News high he won the school spirit award, and three letters in track, two each in basketball and football. Was state champion discus thrower. An army veteran, he played on championship cage team at Fort Jackson, S. C. He's a Physical Education major, and plans to follow footsteps of uncle, Harry Shoff, who is director of Boys Clubs of America. A real plugger who'll be heard from.

#24 PEERY LEWIS, Wellburg, W. Va.

North Carolina State's Wolfpack, particularly Sammy Ranzino, won't be short in forgetting Bitsy Lewis, for this cat-like defensive ace is the man who stopped Ranzino cold in sparking the Indians to their 53-50 upset verdict over the Pack last year. It wasn't until the final few minutes of the game that the high-scoring Ranzino was able to hit from the floor, so effective was the guarding of Lewis. This year he'll probably be a regular at guard, and should shoot a few himself. Was a fourletterman at Bethany, W. Va. high, and honorable mention for all-state. Also a three year letter winner in baseball, and has played semi-pro. Looks slow, moves fast.

#30 BOB BENJAMIN, Indianapolis, Ind.

The defensive ace of the 1949-50 Indians, lanky Bob is due for yeoman service this year if his knee holds up. The knee was wrenched in mid-season last year, necessitating an operation for removal of a bone chip. He returned to action even after the painful operation, and helped spark the team to the conference tournament. A hard man on the backboards, Bob commits plenty of fouls in line of duty. Has improved rapidly as a shot, and may develop into a point maker this year. With added height on the team, he'll be able to take a few feeds himself. Has speed and endurance aplenty, and a dangerous one-hand set shot.
