WILLIS CASEY
Tournament Manager

The home of the 1954 Dixie Classic is the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum, which was opened to the public for the first time when State met Washington and Lee on December 2, 1949.

The building, which was erected at a cost of more than three million dollars, contains more than 30 offices and many square feet of storage space in the tremendous basement, plus an arena with a seating capacity of more than 12,000 persons.

Construction of the huge building was begun in 1942 and the structural steel was completed in the fall of 1943. World War II prevented the completion of the structure and all work was halted in September, 1943. Not until September, 1948, was authorization received to begin again on the building.

The building is one of the largest in the South. It is 371 feet long and 180 feet wide and the inside arena's dimensions are 312 feet by 108 feet. Approximately 8,000 comfortable chair-type seats are located upstairs. The lower-level seats include 3,000 graduated stand end seats and 1,000 permanent chair seats on the sidelines.

The building has six separate entrances, two on each side and in the front and rear of the structure. Four ticket booths, providing space for eight sellers are located in the front entrance.

The Coliseum will be the site of the Dixie Basketball Classic December 27-28-29.

Besides athletic events, the building is utilized for such other activities as agricultural meetings, industrial gatherings, livestock exhibitions, farm machinery shows, student meetings and large State-wide gatherings.

The Coliseum is under the management of W. Z. Betts of Raleigh former Director of Purchasing and Contracting for the State of North Carolina.

An estimated 260,000 persons saw basketball in the Coliseum last year with approximately 60,000 on hand for the Dixie Classic. The Coliseum holds the distinction of being the only on-the-campus building in the nation to attract such a large number of persons for basketball in a single season.
