State Welcomes V. M. I.

By RUDOLPH PATE

State College's Wolfpack, having a grid record of one victory and two losses this season, tonight welcomes Virginia Military Institute's Cadets to its campus.

Last year State College's eleven journeyed over to Lexington, Va., and defeated V. M. I.'s young squad, 21-6, in the first game between the two teams since 1926. Last season's victory was State's first triumph since 1919, as the Cadets had registered six wins and a tie in the years from 1920 through 1926.

Many interesting displays of football techniques and maneuvers have been unfolded on the gridiron by the Cadets and the Wolfpack during their 50-year rivalry, and fans attending tonight's tussle will probably witness a thrilling and colorful contest.

Although the two schools have played against each other for a long time, games have not been staged each year. V. M. I. leads State in the extended grid history, having registered nine victories as compared with six wins by the Wolfpack. The record has been marked by one tie.

Tonight's game will be the second Southern Conference encounter for both schools. The Cadets won their league curtain-raiser by trouncing Richmond's Spiders, 40-6, on September 29. State lost its first conference engagement to Clemson's Tigers, 13-0, last Saturday night. The Cadets bowed, 40-7, to Virginia's Cavaliers last Saturday, while State was shellacked, 26-6, by Virginia on September 29.

The Fighting Squadron, the other nickname for V. M. I.'s team, has been coached for the past nine years by Coach Allison (Pooley) Hubert, who romped up and down the gridiron for Alabama's Crimson Tide during his college days. He was coached by the famed Wallace Wade, who operated the Tide before he took over Duke's football reins.

Coach Beattie Feathers, skipper of the Wolfpack, played for Tennessee under Coach Bob Neyland. He gained grid glory on both the collegiate and professional fields, having obtained the All-American rating when he was in the Volunteer backfield and when he carried the ball for the Chicago Bears.

Almost alone among household necessities, the price of electricity did not spiral upward during the war years. In fact, government figures show that the average price of electricity has actually dropped 3.2 per cent since 1939. In the area served by Carolina Power and Light Company you are now paying 21 per cent LESS per kilowatt hour than you paid in the 1935-39 period.

Nothing gives you so much for so little as your electric service.

High-Class Merchandise

"To Serve and to Serve Well"
Is Our Greatest Desire

Ever since this firm was founded in 1914, it has been our policy to improve our services day by day, week by week, year by year. For, in the main, Dillon Supply is a service organization, not so much in the business of selling merchandise as it is in the business of selling products and services that, in turn, result in other firms improving their own fields. Our agricultural implements enable the farmer to improve his home and land and increase his income. The various parts we stock, such as machinery, tools, and appurtenances provide a constant supply to industries and agriculture, which produce goods for daily public use.

To do all these things we have had to quicken our pace and broaden our field of service each year. After 31 years, we are still doing it, and we believe it typifies the spirit of this organization to say, "We're still growing, still progressing, still trying to do a better job today than we did yesterday."

During the past twenty-seven years we have enjoyed a close association with many of America's outstanding factories, whose products can be obtained at our stores.

THE "T" IN POST-WAR FOOTBALL

By Sid Luckman

IN SOME of my talks with servicemen they have frequently asked what type of football I think will emerge after the war. Will the T-Formation go on to newer and greater heights or will it die out like a flash in the pan? What about the single-wing and power-play formations? Will they be passé or not?

Those who argue for the future ascendancy of the T-Formation point to the fact that already in the history of the game numerous so-called systems have been supplanted by other schools of football, more or less as the tone of the times changed. They state that it was a quirk of fate which originally submerged the first exponents of the T-Formation. Strangely enough, the basic principle of the T-system (although not all its modern variations) was known and employed very early in the life of the sport, but the preeminence of Glenn (Pop) Warner and his Warner System caused the "T" to slip into oblivion until it was rescued from the scrap-heap and modernized by George and Ralph Halas and Clark Shaughnessy. Now the T-addicts assert dogmatically that a new era is dawning and the single wing is due to be consigned to the dust pile. How much truth is there in these predictions?

There are certain straws in the wind we can examine, both on the wider world front and the domestic scene. It is not too much to expect that post-war football will place increased emphasis on attack. The successful conclusion of the European war has popularized such terms as "tactical surprise," "breakthrough," "infiltration," and "coordination of all arms." That the use of such expressions and the accompanying attitudes are bound to have a profound effect on the home-front is already presaged in the revolutionary change recently adopted by the Football Rules Committee of the N.C.A.A. — the legalization of forward passes anywhere behind the line of scrimmage. To borrow Army terminology, the new regulation permits "the increased use of short-range bombing from advanced bases."

To illustrate, for instance, the obvious impact of military expressions already upon American football thinking let us examine the few terms listed above. It seems to be in tune with the times to compare a quick opening play in the T-Formation to the use of "tactical surprise," the exploding of a speedy back into the clear to a "breakthrough," the employment of the man-in-motion to "infiltration," and the increased tie-up between running and passing to "coordination of all arms." Many say that the easy transfer of thinking between war terms and those of the T-Formation attack will tend to render the single-wing obsolete.

If the emphasis is to be on attack, then the post-war era will probably see a great expansion of the usages and variations of the T-Formation. The new forward pass rule, making for greater integration of running and passing, already sets the trend.

But, let's not sing the swan song for the single-wing too hastily, as many people were inclined to do after the Army-Navy game last year, regarding Army's triumph as symbolic of the ascendancy of the "T". If an offense depends on surprise and timing, it also depends on power and material. It's all right to get there, but you've got to have what it takes when you're there. The Germans caught us for a moment in their December counter-offensive, but we wore them down by endurance and material.

It is upon this very question of material that the frenzied promoters of any system most often stub their toes. Any football coach, no matter how great he is or how beautiful a system he has worked out and perfected, must adapt his plays and strategy to his basic human material. Even the most brilliant set of plays cannot rise above the men who are carrying out the assignments and will bog down in the hands of inferior players. Furthermore, some very good men may be far better adapted to one type of play than another. So, it looks like there will always be room for "T-totalers!"

Perhaps the 1944 Michigan-Ohio State game was a far better indication of what is in store for us in post-war football than was the Army-Navy game. The two Midwestern titans employed both the T-Formation and the single-wing, displaying remarkable versatility in shifting from one to another. Since the players proved adept in the use of both systems, maybe the great college team of 1950 will not use either the T-Formation or the single-wing but numerous varieties and combinations of both!
